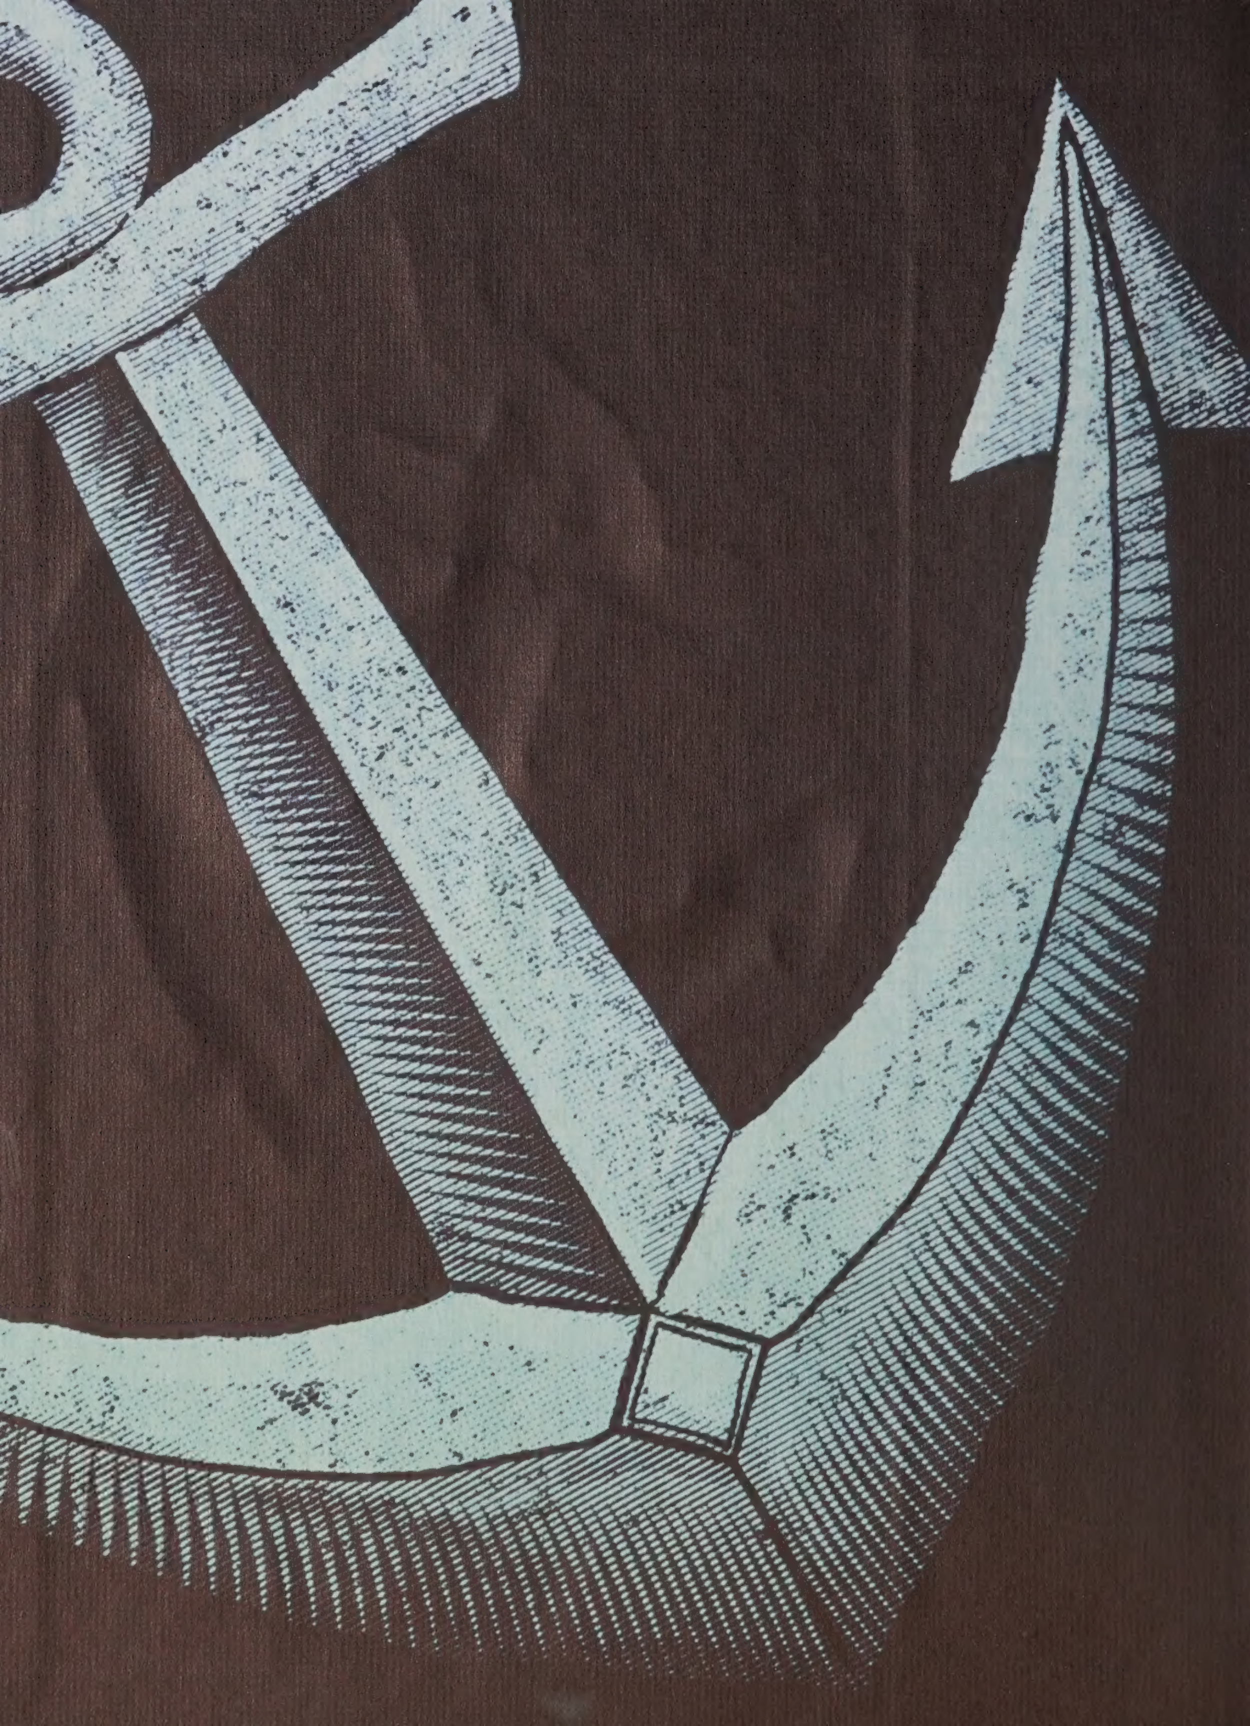
LUCKY BAG

2014



This historical book that we call the "Lucky Bag" is a collection of not only those things that we want to remember, but also those which we think we may not. This Academy is not just one of academia, but a lifestyle and school of thought. Bonds are formed here that will last forever. We pride ourselves in not merely surviving the good, the bad, and the ugly, but striving and yearning for any challenge that we may prove ourselves. This is our country. This is our Navy. This is our legacy.

the Benediction

Almighty God,

May the doors of our Academy open wide to welcome all who strive to serve and to live with honor, courage and commitment.

May they welcome those who seek the knowledge to make our world more just and secure.

May they be narrow enough to shut out pettiness and selfishness, envy and enmity.

May their thresholds be no stumbling block to young, inquisitive feet, and too high to admit complacency, selfishness and harshness.

May our institution be, for all who enter, live, and leave here, the path to a richer and more meaningful life of service to all.

nick tarr

26th Company

"Nick is not someone who I can sum up in a matter of words, simply because words do not serve recognition for the kind of person he was. His actions, accomplishments, goals, and priority to serve his family, friends and country speak louder than any words I could ever express here today. Nick was not only the kind of person who would be there for his family or his friends, but for anyone in need without question. He was proud to serve his country, his family and his friends. Nick is a protector, a leader, and a hero and he will remain that way in heaven..."

-from funeral speech by Curtis Shaffer

"If" by Rudyard Kipling

If you can keep your head when all about you
Are losing theirs and blaming it on you,
If you can trust yourself when all men doubt you
But make allowance for their doubting too,
If you can wait and not be tired of waiting,
Or being lied about, don't deal in lies,
Or being hated, don't give way to hating;

If you can dream and not make dreams your master,
If you can think and not make thoughts your aim;
If you can meet with Triumph and Disaster and treat those impostors just the same;
If you can bear to hear the truth you've spoken
Twisted by knaves to make a trap for fools,
Or watch the things you gave your life to, broken,
and stoop and build'em with worn out tools;

If you can make one heap of all your winnings
And wish it all on one turn of pitch and toss.
And lose and start again at your beginnings
And never breath a word about your loss;
If you can force your heart and nerve and sinew to serve your turn long after they are gone,
And so hold on when there is nothing in you
Except the will which says to them; " Hold on !"

If you can talk with crowds and keep your virtue,
Or walk with Kings nor lose the common touch,
If neither foes nor loving friends can hurt you;
If all men count with you, but none too much,
If you can fill the unforgiving minute
With sixty seconds' worth of distance run,
Yours is the Earth and everything that's in it,
And which is more you'll be a Man, my son !

max allen

1st Company

Remarks by lt Biggerstaff, Company Officer

My first interaction with Max was August 2013 when I was sitting down to meet with all of my Firsties. Max and I immediately connected. As the “old man,” he was as close to my age as he was to the age of his peers. Having spent two years at Virginia Tech, Max still had some love for the Hokies. He and I would often share stories about Blacksburg and commiserate about our horrible football season. But in our initial meeting, what struck me the most about Max was his passion. I sensed that he was passionate about having the opportunity to lead and that he was excited to take on the role as a Squad Leader. More importantly, I could see that he was ready to test his leadership in the Fleet. Over the course of the semester I observed Max thrive in his role. He was compassionate and caring and exemplified the ideals of a servant leader. Several instances come to mind: there were multiple Saturdays where he gave up liberty to train with his Plebes, the evening runs that he went on to help a struggling squad member prepare for the PRT, the time he spent mentoring a squad member that was having a hard time academically, and the time that he respectfully argued with me to ensure that one of his squad members was granted a well-deserved weekend. I lost that argument by the way! After observing all this great work, I pulled Max into my office and said, “Max you are really doing a great job. I really appreciate the effort you are putting into your Squad Leader duties. You are making a difference.” Max replied, “I don’t deserve any special praise sir. I haven’t done anything special.” I said, “What do you mean Max?” You’ve routinely sacrificed your personal time to train and mentor your people. You’ve fought for them and really taken care of them.” Max paused for just a second and said, “Sir, it’s like my dad always told me. Taking care of your people….that’s just what you do.” That’s exactly what Max did. Max had an innate ability to recognize when someone needed help and he would be there with a helping hand and a big smile. He took care of people and the touched the lives of so many across the Yard. Unfortunately Max was taken from us too soon. But he lives on in the legacy that he leaves behind. He will forever live on in the lives of those that he touched.

For those of us fortunate enough to know Max, it is our duty to honor him. We can honor him by being there for those in our charge, by lending a hand to a shipmate that is struggling and by simply taking care of one another. For as Max would say, “taking care of people, that’s just what you do.”

ho chi minh Trail

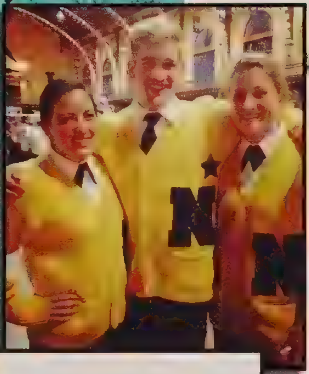
The United States Naval Academy, similarly to Hogwarts, is host to a variety of lesser known hidden passages and rooms. For the benefit of future classes, only one will be described to you here: the esteemed "Ho Chi Minh Trail." This is a reference to Vietnam's Ho Chi Minh Trail and has been shut down since the tightening of 9-11 security (or has it?) The Trail is a tunnel labyrinth for the Academy's Steam Heating System and is used for recon missions-particularly during Army and Air Force weeks. This underground passageway is used by mids to disappear within the gates and reappear outside the Yard's walls. This is a perfect way for squads or plebes to go out and conduct spirit missions...as long as you don't bring along any honor nazis...

"I make my own Lib-o"

black "N"



The Black "N" is a tradition at the United States Naval Academy which dates back many years. The Black N is "awarded" only to the most prestigious of trouble-makers. A midshipman earns their Black N when they receive 100 or more demerits for a single offense. The demerits are awarded in response to misconduct. With this tradition, competition grew to earn a Black N sweater until the Command decided to keep demerits at 99, or below, even for serious offenses. The "Underground," of course, still finds the baddest of the bad to award these sweaters to those who have been "maxed out" on punishment.

#Can'tKeepMeDown

rhip

(r.h.i.r.)

A favorite phrase among upperclassmen is "Rank Has Its Privileges." The term "upperclassmen" means something different at the United States Naval Academy than it does most places. An upperclassman at USNA is merely a person who has survived Plebe Year and moved up in the ranks...and rank does have its privileges. Perhaps, one of the best privileges is reminding Plebes of those privileges and also the ones they do not yet have. This may include, but is not limited to, listening to music, being a real person, having time for absolutely anything, not having to chop around screaming "Beat Army", etc., etc. Then again, Rank [also] Has Its Responsibilities. God forbid you are a striper and have to shovel down lunch or wake up early for Striper Sword Practice. Or give up your time to represent that guy's chain of command in an adjutication for doing something stupid. Either way, at least you're not a Plebe. Well, except for this year..

Tecumseh

ARMY
BEAT
ARMY

Tecumseh, the "God of 2.0" is a statue in just outside T-court. He is seen by mids as they stand in formation and the public watches just beyond the threshold as if at a zoo. More importantly, mids see Tecumseh on the way to the academic buildings--more notably, FINAL EXAMS. All pay tribute to the God of 2.0, or study (sometimes both). Paying tribute to this god via throwing pennies [yes, 1 cent coins] or left-handed salutes enables a midshipman to pass with a 2.0. This number is represented in every mids' class ring hidden away in the ribbon on the USNA crest. "Why would you want a 2.0?" you may ask yourself. The answer is simple: It is the absolute minimum required of midshipmen academically. After all, if you want something done in the shortest amount of time, ask a mid because...

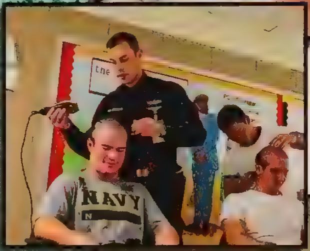
#Procrastination

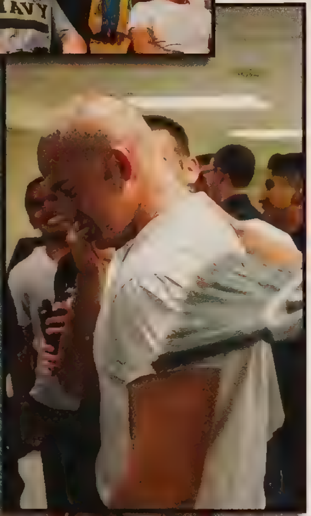
into the Severn

Every year after the last parade of the year, the Color Parade, a tradition is carried out during the march back to Bancroft Hall from the parade field. The Brigade marches back by company, each led by the Spring Semester's Company Commander. During this march back, Company Commanders get fairly antsy-rightly so. At a certain point, a Plebe gives the signal and all Plebes begin handing their rifles over to the nearest upperclassman. Once free of their rifle, Plebes rush the Company Commander and carry them to the Severn River to be tossed into the water. Some attempt to flee but few escape. Most expect it and don't resist. Every once in a while, the Company Commander does not enjoy his or her role in this tradition but, that's not enough to take away from everyone else's fun.

#YouMadBro

hair loss
Via service selection





Each year the graduating class sees the days leading up to service selection slowly drag on. For three and a half years the group has worked towards the path which will soon be theirs. With the exception to some early selects, the rising class does not know for certain which path this will be. Is it the one they have worked towards, or has the Navy taken them elsewhere which they feel is necessary? Regardless of choice, one tradition stands true for all on service selection day: the shaving. Firsties pile into the company wardroom at lunch for their official assignments. The Plebes await them outside with clippers and chairs for those entering certain communities. Marines will have their heads shaved-with or without consent. EOD members will also lose one eyebrow. SEAL selects will lose both eyebrows.

#ShaveItForLater

no-shave November

This is an attempt for a new tradition at the United States Naval Academy. It is likely that not a single member of the Brigade believe that this proposal would be approved and yet, mids for the first time were pleasantly surprised. "No-shave November" was proposed as a means to raise awareness for men's health and prostate cancer research. Prostate cancer is the most common form of cancer in men across all races and ethnicities but often goes undiagnosed. The mustache serves as a visual and daily reminder to maintain awareness of this important issue. How this got approved, we know not. BUT, we hope this tradition remains because even if you are one of those sad few who can't grow facial, it is a treat to watch others try even if you cut your losses...or are female.

Plebe Summer

class of 2017

The purpose of Plebe Summer is to lay the foundation of the United States Naval Academy's four year professional development curriculum. The program lasts approximately 6 weeks and consists of rigorous physical and mental training. The goal of Plebe Summer, officially from the Naval Academy, is to "turn civilians into midshipmen".

Plebes participate in activities ranging from PEP each morning to swim classes, the O-Course and E-course, memorization of daily rates, and drill. The plebes were a simple cotton pull over with tie-it-yourself cotton pants. Experience has told us that every precaution should be taken to make all activities as simple as possible for the incoming class. During Plebe Summer, the transitional culture shock detracts from what was once known as their "common sense."

The formal parade at the end of plebe summer signifies the changeover to the academic year.

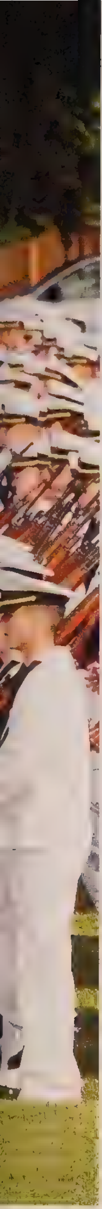
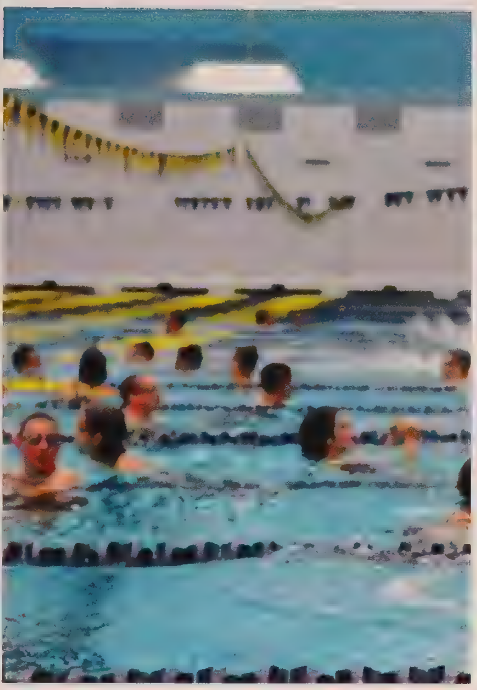
The Class of 2017 poses for their class picture on the steps in front of Bancroft





Far Left: Plebes partake in the required introductory swim events to prepare them for the academic year's more advanced swim class.

Left: The great migration at reform from plebe summer rooms to academic year rooms has been made easier through dolly carts issued to each Plebe.

Plebes are led through their required stretching routine prior to the required early morning "PEP."

All Plebes take the PRT during the summer which will count as their Fall Semester PRT.

Indoctrination Day

I-day

Following their arrival to the United States Naval Academy, many for the first time, incoming plebes enter the doors of Alumni Hall. They follow the seemingly never-ending line from station to station, getting hair cuts, new clothes and uniforms, and beginning to study Reef Points.

The day concludes with the new Plebes taking the "Oath of Office," committing to and beginning their plebe summer. The Commandant of midshipmen presides over the ceremony, swearing the incoming class into the Navy as active duty midshipmen.

Plebes sit in T-court awaiting to take the Oath on I-Day with their families watching.

Above: Members of the class of 2017 wait in line to enter Alumni Hall to begin I-Day

Plebe Parents' Weekend

first taste of freedom

Plebe Parents' Weekend is held in early August each year for the new fourth class just prior to their completion of Plebe Summer. At the commencement of Plebes Parents' Weekend, Plebes form up in T-court and are dismissed, running to see family and friends for the first time in 6 weeks.

This reunion is full of tears, laughter and excitement as Plebes recount the tales of their experiences thus far. Their "crazy" detailers will also tell these tales from the other side as they take advantage of a well-deserved rest during this weekend.

There was no shortage of hugs and smiles as plebes ran to see their families and friends.

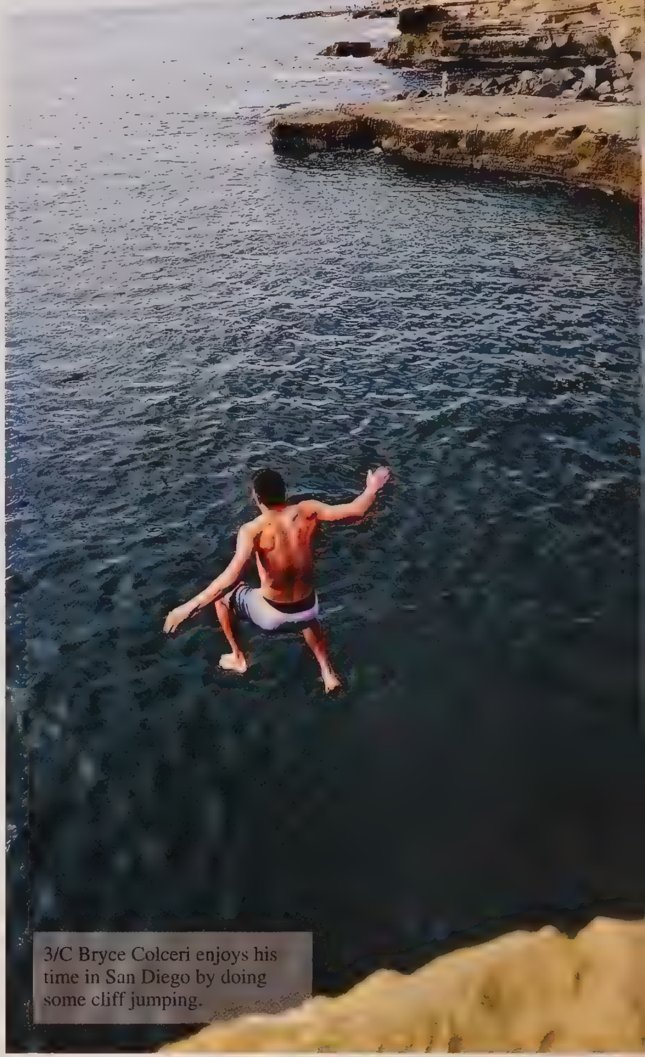
3/C summer Training

first experiences with the fleet

From experiences in foreign countries to summer training in beloved Norfolk , VA, it was an eventful summer for all 3/C Midshipmen. Stories ranged from getting stuck in Bancroft during transient periods to finding ways to get a flight out of an Australian airport to make it back for reform. While only some were able to experience the fleet in places other than Norfolk, all had the opportunity to feel what it was like to sport an anchor and call themselves a "youngster."

Aside from the life skills obtained through summer training, the new 3/C Mids had the chance to see exactly how much Pro-Knowledge they had learned through the weekly Friday night Pro-quizzes. Although some may say they had better experiences than others, we now know what it is like to be the Lee Helm of a destroyer, chip paint as a Boatswain's mate, or even sneak off the gangway early for liberty in San Diego.

Not everyone considered their time aboard their ship or sub a three week paid vacation. However, new friends were made between those who would not have met otherwise and all learned about the Navy through ways that differed from picking up a copy of Reef Points or sitting through a period of Nav.



3/C Bryce Colceri enjoys his time in San Diego by doing some cliff jumping.

Left: 3/C Jacob Dodge and running mate David Kramer aboard the USS Carl Vinson (CVN-70).

Some midshipmen also have the opportunity to learn and utilize their sailing skills over the summer on vessels provided by USNA.

Midshipmen 3/C Hunter Lampp and Nick Vandiver try out some EOD equipment while aboard the USS Dwight D. Eisenhower (CVN-69).

Right: 2/C Rakhee Khambhati, Christy Misch, and John Deanon watch a formation of plebes during Plebe Summer to ensure their posture and bearing are correct.

2/C Summer Training

[illegible] party

The Second Class Summer training program covers a wide array of unique learning and leadership opportunities. This is the summer where midshipmen get the chance to sample the different warfare communities during PROTRAMID. Taking place on both the Western and Eastern coasts of the United States, midshipmen are offered many options for observing the different branches of the Department of the Navy.

Another major training evolution that takes place during the Second Class Summer are billets for Naval Academy Summer Seminar, the Science Technology Engineering and Mathematics program (STEM), and Plebe Summer. Each of these demanding leadership positions give Second Class Midshipman the ability to further develop their styles of leadership and management.

Other Second Class summer training opportunities include NOLS, MAGTAF, YPs, and sailing. While all midshipmen complete PROTRAMID, the other training block is variable.

leatherneck or cruise?

After having experienced a taste of the fleet over Youngster Cruise and the Navy "sampler" PROTRAMID, rising 1/C midshipmen have a pretty good idea of what they want to do upon commissioning.

First Class summer training enables rising First Class midshipmen with an opportunity to further explore their field of interest. If a midshipman is torn between two fields, they can explore one or both further to make a more informed decision. For those who are set on a certain career path, it allows for more exposure in that field.

While summer training assignment does not guarantee service assignment during Firstie year, the knowledge gained will be practical regardless of the path taken. This is the last opportunity to gain practical experience in a specific area of the Department of the Navy prior to entering preferences for service assignment.

sign on the dotted line

2 for 7 is an amazing and scary time in a midshipman's life. They have to make the decision of serving their country for at least five years after they graduate in order to finish their last two years at the academy. It is a really hard decision that weighs on most people's minds when they return from the summer.

If you were to get separated from the academy before you graduate you would owe a lot of money. This decision should never be taken lightly. This years 2 for 7, was one of merriment and joy. Although they are making this huge commitment they are also recognizing that they are over halfway done with their time at the academy.

Then there is the scroll signing. Every class has a scroll of their own. It signifies the unity of each class and demonstrates their commitment to each other. This is truly an amazing time at the academy and one that will be remembered as their time at the academy comes to an end.

2/C Parent's Weekend

fun for the whole family

Every year, parents of Second Class midshipmen come to the Naval Academy from all over the country for 2/C Parent's Weekend. This is, for many, a rare visit to the United States Naval Academy that allows them to see what their 2/C son or daughter has experienced in the two years that have passed since committing to the Naval Academy.

Family is allowed to follow their midshipman around to classes on the Friday of the weekend, view a formal parade, and even visit their midshipman's room during this very special weekend.

Parents are among many others who come to visit during the weekend. Extended family, friends, and siblings attend as well as friends. Attendees are able to see the fruits of their 2/C mid's hard work.

Their midshipman is now training plebes, holding positions, and taking the most strenuous course load they will experience during their time at the Academy. Guests can observe all of these as well as eating meals together in King Hall, and observe Noon Meal Formation.

Masqueraders

the importance of being earnest and spring one-act

Every year the Masqueraders perform plays in order to fulfill their objective of exposing the Brigade to a unique form of entertainment.

This past fall The Masqueraders took on the 1895 Oscar Wilde play, The Importance of Being Earnest. The Importance of Being Earnest has been described as a "trivial comedy for serious people." The play is set in England in the late 19th century, so therefore, the Masqueraders used their best renditions of a British accent throughout the play. The plot of the play is centered around a love triangle involving two women Cecily (1/C Underhill) and Gwendolen (2/C Moroney) who have always fantasized about marrying a man named Earnest. As the play develops, the two find that the men in their lives, Jack (2/C Lucas) and Algernon (2/C Frevola) are the men they have always wanted.

The Masqueraders also performed in the Midshipmen-Directed One Act Festival in the spring. The auditions for these plays took place in early February and performers of all skill-sets were considered.

Halloween Concert

spooky fun

Every year the Naval Academy Main Chapel is transformed into one of the most unique and massive stages in the United States to play host to the Halloween Concert. Arranged by the Chapel Organist, Monte Maxwell, this production takes the form of a medley of different musical pieces with some relation to the Halloween Spirit. This year, the main group piece was "Under the Sea" from Disney's The Little Mermaid. Midshipmen danced around dressed as various sea creatures for the enjoyment of family, friends, and the citizens of Annapolis.

Other featured talents during the course of the performance each year include dancing, singing, and acting. Midshipmen practice in large and small groups for weeks in preparation for the two-night grand show. Even while waiting in line to enter the Main Chapel, audience members are entertained by acting ushers dressed in various Halloween costumes.

Chaplains unconditional love

The Naval Academy's beloved Chaplains are a rock for some, a shoulder for others, but an ever-present support for all at various events throughout the year. Even when their presence isn't known, the USNA Chaplains are always watching, sometimes from a distance, on the off chance they may be needed. They are there for 2 for 7's, for pep rallies, for athletic events, and mandatory fun. They are always around to give a bravo zulu to a job well done with an open door for when plans may be going awry.

"Most gracious God, we ask for your blessing upon the men and women who chose to join the ranks of military officers through the United States Naval Academy. Only you know where they are heading, and what lies ahead, but we ask that you keep them safe, keep them focused and keep them secure.

By your hand of mercy and grace you polished and preserved them through tests in the academic spaces, tests on the athletic fields and tests of life lessons. Cover them with your anointing as they travel to protect our country. Watch them through the air, on land and in the sea.

Lord we pray you give them courage to begin their mornings, strength to continue the day's journey and peace as they close the night. We pray these things knowing all things are possible with you, Amen."

Halloween

playing dress-up

Halloween comes but once a year. For American citizens outside the Naval Academy, Halloween is primarily about visiting houses door to door and collecting candy. While midshipmen must abide by liberty restrictions, they cannot partake in this American tradition. However, at USNA, from restrictions come traditions.

Mids go through their normal busy routine: school, athletic practice, and all those things in between. That night when 1830 rolls around and it is time for Evening Meal Formation, thousands of midshipmen emerge from their rooms in the most creative costumes the world has ever seen. This creativity comes for two reasons: lack of ability to go out and buy a costume and, well, lack of funds to buy a costume.

A special Halloween meal is prepared by the wonderful King Hall staff full of decorated cookies and themed tables of food. Following the King Hall Chaos, upperclass midshipmen proceed to trick-or-treat at the Plebe rooms throughout Bancroft...they better hope they remembered to get candy!

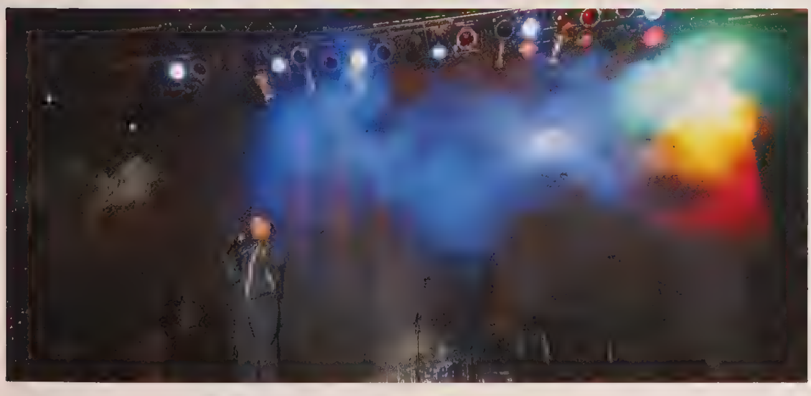
Pep Rallies

no-longer-mandate fun

The Naval Academy hosts pep rallies every year. In recent years however, the "mandatory fun" has gotten a bad rap. This year, that was changed. With the combined efforts of the Commandant, MWF, and beloved CAPT Borrebach's supply staff pep rallies have been changed forever. When the Brigade returned, a pep rally was held to allow midshipmen to sample various vendors who could cater to the Academy. After feedback was taken, vendors appropriately chosen, and much more efficient funding and planning allowed for light shows and performances...pep rallies were no longer mandatory!

After all the work that was put in by civilian, officer, and midshipmen staff pep rallies became purely voluntary. To everyone's surprise, the turnout was greater and much more enjoyable! Although CAPT Doug Borrebach has retired, he left a lasting impression on the Brigade of midshipmen and all those he worked with. If the world was filled with more "Doug's," we'd have a much better place. Thank you to all the staff in MWF and the supply department for making a difference in Mid Life.



Sing for me: Midshipmen auditioned and were allotted time slots to perform at the pep rallies to demonstrate talent and win prizes. Mids had the opportunity to perform solo or in groups.

Bill the Goat always made appearances at the pep rallies to ensure all were having a great time.

Battalion Spirit Night

balling through the "dark ages"

When the "Dark Ages" has you feeling like you hit a low point, what better way to overcome that feeling than a [mandatory] Navy Basketball game viewing? During what the Supe calls "The Age of Enlightenment" the 6 battalions attended various games on the yard to show their school spirit. The Brigade had a great time as they watched the Men's and Women's Basketball put on very interesting games throughout the Spring semester. Or perhaps the Brigade just loved being catered to by Chick-fil-A...

Either way, the night's proudest and loudest spectators were fanatic basketball fans and those pesky Group 3 majors avoiding homework. The grumpiest of mids were, without doubt, the Engineers who "just wanted to get [their] work done!" And to them I say, "get a life!"

Brigade Boxing championships

Every year the Brigade Boxing Championship provides a night of quality, action-packed entertainment for the Brigade. The Brigade Boxing Championship, otherwise known as "The Brigades," is a showcase of the Academy's most competitive boxers.

Leading up to this night of thirteen boxing bouts, the team competed in several preliminary matches to determine two finalists per weight class for the championship. After the Brigades, the champion from each weight class goes on to compete in the National Collegiate Boxing Association (NCBA) Championships.

Blood and Gore: The event is of high visibility due to the likelihood of blood and gore.

Friend or Foe?: You wouldn't think so after watching a bout or two but the boxing team is actually a very close knit group.

Army - Navy
t-court ball run

The Army-Navy Football game is one of the most highly anticipated events of the school year. It has a deep rooted history with one of the Naval Academy's biggest rival schools in the nation, West Point. Dubbed the "Nation's best rivalry," the two Academies are steeped in traditions which take place just prior to the game.

Shortly before the game begins, the 13th Company of the United States Naval Academy makes the journey to the stadium from Annapolis, MD to Philadelphia, PA, the ball in hand. This year, they traveled approximately 120 miles to the stadium.

There has long been a dispute between who should have the honor of this tradition. 13th Company began the tradition and currently holds the claim. However, in recent years the Naval Academy's Marathon Team has claimed they should have the honor of upholding this tradition. Regardless of who holds claim, this ceremony brings excitement to the Brigade in anticipation of the biggest game of the year.

Remembering 9/11

respect for those who were taken...

In an effort to commemorate the twelve year anniversary of September 11th, numerous events and ceremonies were held all throughout the day. One of the day's most significant ceremonies, Run to Remember, was organized by 1/C Fogleman and lasted from 0730 to 1920. Mids volunteered to run with the flag for 30 minute intervals at different times throughout the day. The ceremony ended shortly after evening colors in T-Court. The Brigade-wide candle lighting ceremony also took place at the conclusion of evening colors in T-Court.

Brigade PRT

"navy-olympics"

Each semester, the Brigade of Midshipmen take a Physical Readiness Test, the PRT. It includes a curl-up, push-up, and 1.5 mile run portion. This test is the same test taken in the fleet but is scored differently for midshipmen. In the fleet, a male in the 20-24 year age group, must complete a 1.5 mile run in 13 minutes and 30 seconds. At USNA, males must complete the run in no longer than 10 minutes and 30 seconds - a time which would earn them an "Excellent" mark on the fleet PRT.

Above: Midshipmen take the bi-annual PRT by company on Farragut Field.

Far and Top Right: Officer and midshipmen PRT staff coordinate and host the midshipman PRT.

Bottom Right: Knowing that a PRT score can affect making the Dant's List, billets, rankings, and taking weekends, give mids give it their all.

Midshipmen must check in by company prior to running the PRT and record scores afterwards. Failing to do either can have a large impact on daily life at USNA.

The 1.5 mile run is the last of the three exercises. This year, the Academy introduced a new way of recording run times: a wristwatch chip similar to those used in marathon recording.

Guests dance, mingle, and enjoy the celebration of the Marine Corps birthday.

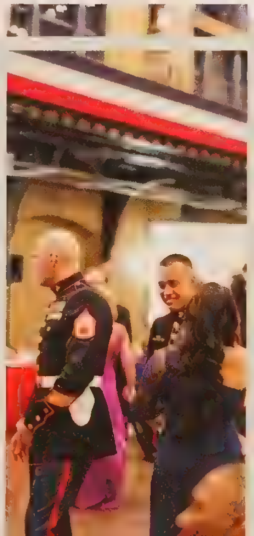
U.S.M.C

238th birthday

Established on November 10th, 1775, the United States Marine Corps 238th birthday was celebrated at the Naval Academy on November 8th, 2013. It was in Dahlgren Hall where faculty, staff, and midshipmen took the time out of their nights to recognize the birth of this great service. The Naval Academy was proud to have Former Assistant Secretary of Labor The Honorable Ismael Ortiz Jr., a 27-year Marine Corps Veteran present as the Guest of Honor.

During this wonderful evening the traditional cake cutting ceremony took place. The first piece was given to the Guest of Honor, followed by a piece to the oldest Marine present, MGySgt Jim Kyser, who takes a bite and passes it to the youngest Marine, 4/C Roberto Swersky.

Above: You might think that Marines are boring and soulless characters. But, you sir, would be wrong. We can see them living up to their "life of the party" reputation.



The ball is attended by a wide spectrum of people. Officers, enlisted, spouses, midshipmen, and even members of other branches enjoy the festivities.

Brigade PRT

'nap-olympics'

Every Semester the Brigade of Midshipmen are tested on their physical capabilities. Part of the mission of the United States Naval Academy is to develop midshipmen physically. The Physical Readiness Test, abbreviated as PRT, tests the physical limits of midshipmen.

The test is broken up into 3 components. The first events are the push-ups and situps and each last two minutes. It is followed by a 1.5 mile run in which female midshipmen must run under 12:40 and male midshipmen must run under a time of 10:30.

This year, changes were made to the conducting of the PRT. Timing chips are now used to record times for the run portion while the strength portion is conducted inside to avoid poor weather conditions.

Midshipman Ben Radeff leads the way to finish up the 1.5 mile run.

Are you not entertained?: Any sport that enables a midshipman with a potential weapon is clearly a winner.

Intramurals

warriors

Under the direction of the Commandant of Midshipmen, the Naval Academy's Intramural Sports program serves as a leadership laboratory within the Brigade and offers Midshipmen personal development in the operations, officiating and supervision of a variety of intramural sports. It remains a Midshipmen-run program, with midshipmen taking part in every aspect of organizing the Brigade's athletic competitions.

Each year the Brigade votes on which sports will be included in the upcoming season. The 2014 season included Fieldball, Basketball, Soccer, Ultimate Frisbee, Racquetball, and Street Hockey. These events all held championships at the end of April.

Soccer: More dangerous at the intramural level because, well, no one knows how to play.

Boxing Intramurals: This intramural sport is slightly different than the rest. Although referred to as "intramurals," it is more of a practicing club.

While some mids are not fans of the program, others really enjoy the opportunity Intramurals presents.

The Dark Ages

longest three months of the year

Each year, midshipmen dread the return from the holiday leave period. They have just gone home to see their families for the only extended period during the school year. The painful and sad times that follow are: The Dark Ages.

The dark ages are something to reckon with. The rain, snow, and winter working blues are amongst the biggest drawbacks to the time of the year that is undoubtedly the longest and hardest to get through.

While the Academy offered several venues as cheerful affairs during these cold, dark times, Mids also found ways to keep themselves quite busy.

For some plebes, for example, this meant trying to find ways to rate media. Plebes' unceasing devotion to the phrase "you rate what you skate" is only strengthened during this time and includes activities such as hiding iPods in unsuspecting places. For others, weekend trips and ECA activities around the yard sufficed.

Naval Academy

leadership conference

The Supe demonstrates what he considers an important quality: awesome.

Since 1984, the Naval Academy has hosted an annual leadership conference for senior cadets and midshipmen from each of the service academies. In 2002, the conference expanded to include students from civilian universities and broadened its scope to include leadership topics relevant to government, business, and academia, as well as the military. The USNA Leadership Conference now includes more than 200 participants from over 45 military and civilian colleges.

In 2006, the Conference incorporated a student-generated and professionally published report that addressed key issues related to the conference theme. In recent years, the Leadership Conference has varied presentation formats and increased the amount of small group interaction and discussion in order to foster learning among attendees.

USNA, the Department of Leadership, Ethics and Law, along with the Hart Foundation and the USNA Class of '38, sponsored this year's Leadership Conference at USNA. The Conference was held January 26 - January 29, 2014 and the theme was Followership: The Evolution of a Leader.

Foreign Affairs conference

The Naval Academy Foreign Affairs Conference, commonly referred to as "NAFAC," was established in 1961. Its purpose is to discuss important issues in national security as it pertains to both the individual and society as a whole, particularly in the age of information dominance. Distinguished guest speakers serve as panelists and guide 150 undergraduate students. These students come from a wide range of universities nationwide and from over a dozen foreign countries to join together for three days of critical discussions, lectures, informal exchanges, and social events.

This year's 54th annual "Human Security in the Information Age" NAFAC was held from April 8-10, 2014 with the guest Forrestal speaker being Former President Bill Clinton. The last three decades have seen a rapid increase of information technologies and increasingly complex social networks. These techs enable citizens to interact, collaborate, inform, and take collective action in ways that are redefining the traditional understanding of what it means to be secure. Political, criminal, and violent threats made possible by the Information Age not only threaten individual security but also undermine the ability of the state to protect its citizens.

Spring Break

where memories are made

The only major break during the Spring Semester, Spring Break is a time for everyone to be able to cut loose and take some well-deserved time off from the Naval Academy. Some midshipman plan extravagant trips to places that never seemed possible. Others are a part of official Naval Academy Movement Orders through MAG or the IPO office that allow them to travel to a new place while performing some duty. Most, however, are just taking the opportunity to hang out with friends, be it a ski resort or out on the beach. Some varsity athletes aren't cut loose from their training and instead have a "training trip," yet still welcome the idea of not having class. No matter where the location, everyone counts down the days until Spring Break.

Easter Egg Hunt

for all the little kiddies

Every year, the United States Naval Academy's 4th Battalion hosts an Easter Egg Hunt for children of all ages. Throughout Stribling Walk, the various yards containing trees are sectioned off and divided amongst the age groups. Only children of that age group may utilize that area for the Easter Egg Hunt.

In addition to "the Hunt," children and families also enjoy hamburgers and hot dogs throughout the festivities, grilled by midshipmen volunteering their time. Midshipmen also volunteer to hold signage and guide children to the appropriate field.

Parents bring their children to the yard in their Sunday's best brightly-colored outfits to take photographs with the Easter bunny who is also in annual attendance.

Croquet Match

navy vs. st. john's

A time honored tradition, the annual croquet match between St. John's College and the United States Naval Academy is always a must attend event. Traditionally, Midshipmen dress as Johnnies in flamboyant attire with bright colors and big hats while Johhnies tend to dress as Middies...not sure what that entails.

From the festive outfits to the engaging company, the day was certainly a success. After winning the championship last year, the Midshipmen were out to win it again this year and that is exactly what they did.

The midshipman from the 28th Company Croquet team beat St. John's College with a score of 4-1. Winning in back to back years is a Naval Academy first, especially by such a large margin. But, regardless of the score, it was an enjoyable day for all, and maybe too enjoyable for some. Next year, Johnnies watch out because we are going for that triple year victory!

This mid knows how to embrace the spirit of the competition.

Service Selection

the ultimate decider

Service Selection is the culmination of 3 and a half years of the academy. It is what every midshipman cannot wait to experience. It is the ultimate goal of every mid to get what they want for their community.

These are the happiest times of our lives and picking our futures makes it that much better. Whether we go Surface Warfare, Marines, Aviation, Subs or Spec warfare, we know that we always be close friends. We always know that we will keep in touch with the ones we leave behind.

Service Selection only solidifies our bonds with our class and even allows us to branch out and meet new friends. This is one of the best moments at the academy, seeing all of your friends getting their choices and being happy that you are well on your way to graduation. After service selection it seems like graduation becomes that much closer and it allows us to enjoy our last few months at the academy.

The best part of service selection however is the traditions that have been passed down to us. The marines get their first proper haircut and the spec warfare guys get their last one.

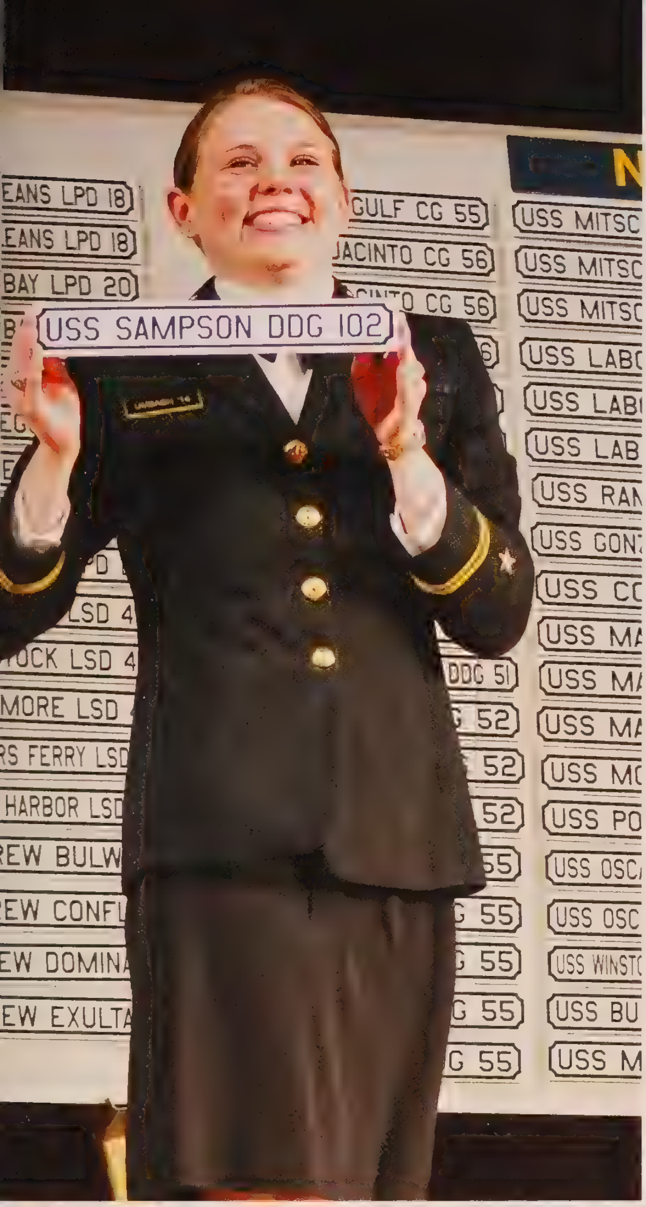
SWO Ship Selection

deciding their futures



After four years at the United States Naval Academy, First Class SWO selectees from the Class of 2014 finally have the opportunity to decide their futures for the next two to three years. This will be the most control they will likely have during their entire career.

On January 30, these 243 midshipmen entered Mahan Hall and awaited their shining moment. The night began with an opening statement by Vice Admiral Tom Copeman, who reminded the Firsties of the immense decision they were about to make. Following the Admiral, each midshipmen, in class order of merit, walked up to the selection board, and chose their ship. From Norfolk, Virginia to San Diego, California to Yokosuka, Japan, these selections were the first steps of the rest of their lives. Congratulations Class of 2014! We wish you all the best.

International Ball

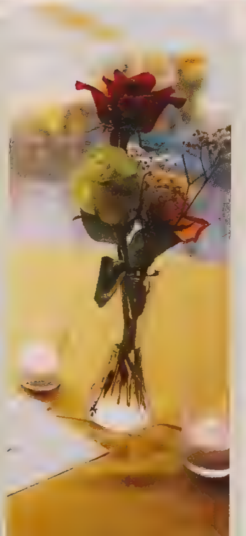
"i-ball"

This year the United States Naval Academy hosted its 48th International Ball, nicknamed "I-Ball." It was held this year on Saturday, April 5th, 2014. The festivities took place in Alumni hall and lasted until midnight.

I-Ball is an annual celebration held to honor the international officers stationed at the Naval Academy and international 1/C midshipmen attending the Academy who will return to their home country's military for service upon graduation.

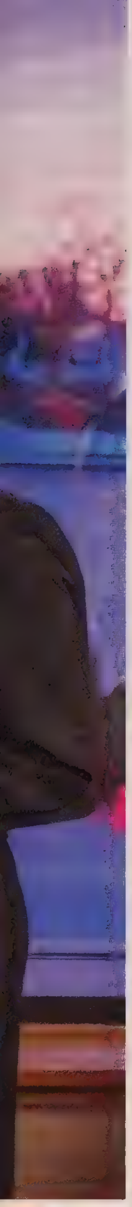
This a both a celebration of their contributions while attending the United States Naval Academy as well as of their impending return home after a long time away. Although these foreign officers and midshipmen will not be part of the United States Navy, they both learn and teach valuable lessons and allow a bridge between cultures which might otherwise not have existed.

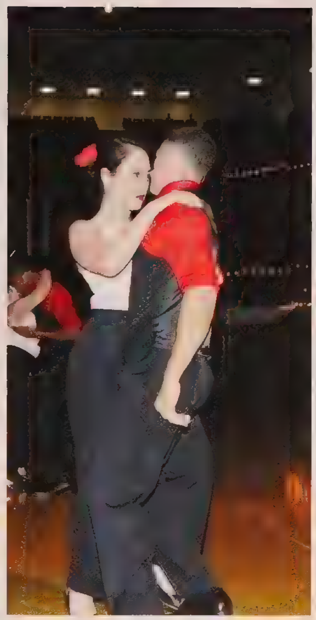
Wine and Dine:: Since I-Ball is a "dry" event, midshipmen must get their drinks in prior to the event.



Alumni Hall is transformed into a beautiful affair with decorations throughout both the upper and lower decks.

Stage Ready: Although USNA is known for its top Engineering programs, it is also full of talent in the performing arts. Behind the band, the officers' and mids' home country flags are displayed.





Far Left: Classic American Swing and Lindy Hop style dancing have recently become popular at the Naval Academy. A club hosts weekly lessons in Smoke Hall for midshipmen to learn this style.

Left: There is always at least one traditional hispanic performance such as the Salsa. Recently, weekly lessons in Smoke Hall have been held by and for midshipmen to learn this dance as well.

Following the cultural performances by various clubs and other groups throughout the yard, the Alumni Hall floor is opened up to everyone for a prom-style dance.

DONT TREAD ON ME

At the end of plebe year, the week prior to Herndon, plebes go through 16 hours of a series of physical and mental challenges known as "Sea Trials". They wake up before the sun has risen and complete "Dark Phase" before moving on to various other phases consisting of the E-Course and O-course, wet and sandy, a CFT, boat races, and various other exercises. This year, in an effort to promote resistance training, a bench press station was added to Sea Trials.

The main focus however, remains to be team-building. The plebes are led in squads by youngsters and as a company by a second class Sea Trials Company Commander. This year's sea trials was cut short due to extreme and unexpected heat and humidity. Upon completion, the plebes entered Dahlgren for closing remarks from the Superintendent and the announcement of this year's iron company, 8th company. This bestows them with the honor of being the first company to approach Herndon in the upcoming week in addition to a plaque annotating the distinction.

Herndon

The Herndon Monument of USNA is a 21-foot tall grey granite obelisk. It was erected in memory of Captain William Lewis Herndon who courageously decided to go down with his ship, SS Central America, and the men left aboard rather than save himself on September 12, 1857. All women and children and many of the men aboard were saved by a nearby ship during the storm.

Recording of times began in 1959. In 1962 , one Plebe scaled the monument with the aid of a cargo net. Such methods are now banned. The record was set in 1969, when Plebes made the climb in 1 minute and 30 seconds. However the monument was not greased.

In 2010, then-Superintendent Vice Admiral Fowler ordered the Brigade not to slather the monument with lard "to improve the safety of the event." However, his successor, Vice Admiral Miller, reinstated the tradition in 2011, citing that "conducting the ceremonial climb in the same manner as so many previous classes helps to instill spirit and camaraderie among plebes and better links them to the many classes that have gone before them."

This year, the Plebes exchanged the Dixie Cup for a combination cover on top of the Herndon monument in 2:19:35.

The Exchange: 4/C Mike Landry, a bearshark, exchanges the cover.

Ring Dance

culmination of 2/c Year

Once a midshipman gets past his "freshman" year, it's probably the thing that's most looks forward to. It ain't just a party, folks. It's, well, it's everything. It's when a midshipman gets his class ring, which then is dipped in waters from the seven seas.

Students begin looking early for just the right date to the Ring Dance. Real early, like during their sophomore year. The dance isn't held until the end of their junior year, but it's so big - some call it second in social importance only to a presidential inaugural ball - you can't waste time finding the right date.

Color Parade

last parade of the year

The Color Parade is the last Formal Parade of each school year. The Color Parade is different from all other academic year parades in that it acknowledges the Color Company. The Color Parade includes the passing on of the Color Company guidon from the former Color Company.

Companies celebrate the conclusion of the academic school year with a tradition that follows the conclusion of the parade. Company commanders are thrown into the Severn River, willingly or not, by the Plebe Class.

Although performing parades on Worden Field do not top the list for "fun things to do at USNA," midshipmen enjoy the presence of many families and friends. The parade takes place during Graduation Week and has the highest attendance of all parades at USNA. Guests must have tickets for this parade and each year, an abundance of attendees eager to see midshipmen sit on the ground in overflow of the bleachers in anticipation of those mids they haven't seen for months.

Graduation

commencement

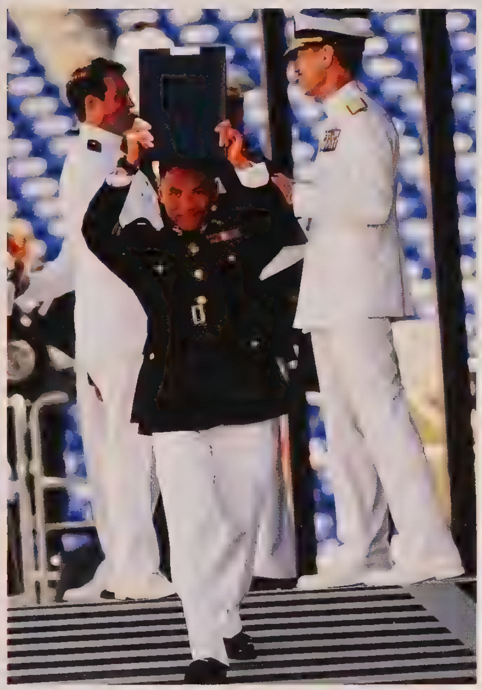
Graduation is undoubtedly the biggest event of the year. First Class Midshipmen have worked hard for four years, in some cases longer, for this moment. When the day finally arrives, a new cycle of midshipmen and leadership at the Academy begins. The event is nicknamed "Commencement" to symbolize the beginning of a new chapter in their lives, as opposed to the end of another. This "new beginning" is applicable to all in attendance. The friends and families of the newly commissioned officers will experience changes as they move on to new duty stations and respond to the call of duty. Rising and new classes to the United States Naval Academy will take on new roles and continue their own journeys to this culminating point.

May 23, 2014 is a day that no member of the Class of 2014 will ever forget. Fair winds and following seas to the Class of 2014 and our new Navy Ensigns and Marine Corps 2nd Lieutenants!

Bearing: Although the event is highly formal, the joy and lightheartedness of the event is demonstrating all the way up to the chain of command on stage.

Teronda Brown walks across the stage to receive her diploma and her commission as a United States Navy Ensign.

First Salute: A First Salute is a long-time tradition for commissioning officers. An officer will "pay" for their first salute by presenting a silver dollar to an enlisted member who has helped them in their journey such as here with Master Chief Todd Schroeder.



Far Left: Jefferson Talicuran started his journey many years ago as a prior enlisted. Now, with a purple heart from a past life, he commissions as a 2nd Lt., bringing his experience to the Marine Corps.

Blue Angels: To much excitement, the Blue Angels performed the long-awaited flyover after being canceled last year.

Navy's Sprint Football team is coming off a great 2012 season. The final game of the seven was their only loss with a score of eighteen to twenty-one versus the United States Military Academy. They fought hard and will keep on fighting this year to a fresh undefeated season in 2014. This year, they started off with with two very low scoring games against Coppin State and Princeton. However, the turning point in there season came during the games against Franklin Pierce and Mansfield. Both games were very high scoring games for the Navy Midshipmen. The Mansfield game was a shutout with a final score of forty-one to zero. Though the team is losing some seniors this year, the team still looks very strong next year. During the spring, the team, with the help of the graduating seniors started to prepare for the 2014 season.

The Navy men's soccer team (16-4-2, 9-0-0 PL) has earned a national ranking of No. 25 in the final NSCAA Coaches Top 25 Poll of 2013 announced by the National Soccer Coaches Association of America. The Patriot League Regular Season and Tournament champion Navy squad appears in the year-end coaches poll for the first time since 1971 (No. 10). Navy was receiving votes in the final three NSCAA polls of the regular season before breaking into the year-end poll. Navy also appears at No. 21 in the final Top Drawer Soccer poll of the season. Navy won 15 games in a row this season, the longest streak in the NCAA this year, after starting the season at 1-3-2. The Mids went 9-0-0 during the Patriot League Regular Season and defeated Army in the Star Game, 1-0, in double overtime. Navy hosted the Patriot League Tournament, defeating Bucknell (1-0) in the semifinals and Holy Cross (2-0) in the title game to advance to the NCAA Tournament for the first time in 25 years.

ECAC all-stars, NSCAA team award

The Eastern College Athletic Conference (ECAC) has announced its 2013 Division I Women's Soccer All-Star teams and three members of the U.S. Naval Academy women's soccer program have been honored. Junior defender Jade Seabrook, junior forward Morgan Dankanich and senior goalkeeper Elizabeth Hoerner were tabbed as ECAC All-Star Second Team members. Dankanich had a stellar season on the offensive end, recording 31 points on 14 goals and three assists. Her 14 goals were tied-for 37th best in the nation and led all Patriot League goal-scorers. She was named as a NSCAA All-Mid-Atlantic First Team member and the Patriot League Offensive Player of the Year. On the defensive side, Seabrook and Hoerner anchored a Navy backline that was one of the stingiest in program history. Navy's .566 goals-against average was 12th best in the nation. The defensive duo allowed the third-lowest goals (12) and tallied third-highest shutout total (14) at Navy.

Running to a Patriot League Victory

The Men's Cross Country team preserved through many unfortunate attacks, in the form injuries, on their bid to reclaim the Patriot League title. After a handful of gritty performances at large invitationals all around the northeast, the Middies saved their grittiest performance for the Patriot League Championships. No Navy runner garnered First Team All-Patriot League, however, despite missing a few of their top performers, four earned Second Team All Patriot League and edged out Lehigh by two points for the Patriot League Championship. "It was won with "esprit de corps" says Patriot League Coach of the Year, Al Cantello. Fourteen members were also named Patriot League Scholar Athletes. The season's highlights did not end until December, when 46 year head coach Al Cantello was inducted into the USA Track & Field and Cross Country Coaches Hall of Fame.

This yesr's Navy Women's Cross Country team is doing better than last year and had a fantastic start to their season. With two first place finishes, they looked very prepared for the rest of the season. The team ran into some difficulty with the two meets leading up to the Army Navy N star meet. However, they still pulled out the win against Army to earn an N star. After the Army Navy meet, the team went on to compete in the Patriot League Championships. They finished in a solid 3rd place. With that finish, the team was prepared to compete in the NCAA Mid-Atlantic Regional Championships. Through fierce competition, the Navy women finished an admirable 10th place out of 29 teams from all across the region. The team is losing some valuable seniors this year but they look strong for their 2014 season starting in the fall.

An Amazing Team and Season

The Navy Women's Volleyball team finished the season 9-7. This is an incredible accomplishment and is the team's first Patriot League season with a winning record since 2007. This is also the first time since the 2004 and 2005 seasons in which Navy has posted a league record of at least .500 in back-to-back season campaigns. Notable mentions go out to Alli Graf, who received rookie of the week, and Erin Fortner. Fortner received first team all Patriot League and Patriot League all-academic team.

Army Navy Championship

The Navy water polo team concluded its 2013 season with a third place finish at the CWPA Championship on Sunday. Taking on No. 20 Bucknell at the Moran Aquatics Center on the campus of Brown University, the 16th-ranked Mids lead wire-to-wire for a 10-7 victory.

After the Championship was final with St. Francis - Brooklyn earning the title and automatic bid to the NCAA Play-In game, the CWPA announced its All-Tournament Team. Dowzicky led a trio of Mids earning honors as he was named to the First Team. Sutherland and Warren rounded out the honorees with nods on the Second Team.

Navy Sweeps ECAC and Patriot League

The Navy swimming and diving program swept the team titles at the ECAC Championship that wrapped up today in Lejeune Hall in Annapolis. The Navy women's team overcame a 43-point deficit at the start of the day to tally 536.5 points overall and win by 19 points, while the Navy men's team posted 594.5 points this weekend to win by 99 points. The rally by the Navy women's team began in the very first event, the 1650 freestyle. A trio of Mids would place among the top-five swimmers in the event that was contested as a timed final without heats to determine finalists as the other events were. Madeline Bliss (Fr., The Woodlands, Texas) posted a time of 16:57.81 to place second, Haley Nowak (Sr., Manassas, Va.) finished in fourth pace with her time of 17:20.88 and Sam Brennan (Jr., Stillwell, Kan.) placed fifth with her clocking of 17:29.69.

A brotherhood inside and outside the gym

The Navy gymnastics team is a brotherhood, almost like our own small fraternity. We are all very close and support each other with school, our training in the gym, and even our personal lives outside of the academy. I have been very fortunate to be able to be the team captain and lead these guys. We had a pretty good season and pulled though for the most important meets like the Army Navy meet and brought home the N Star once again. We had a lot of individual successes at our conference and have eight guys, in total, traveling to the NCAA Championships in Ann Arbor Michigan this year. The team is still very young and is mostly filled by the youngsters and plebes. There is a ton of talent on the team and with myself being the only senior leaving this year I see a lot of potential and future success for the future of the Navy Mens Gymnastics team. I'm really proud of all the guys and all the hard work each person puts in at practice each day, and thank everyone for being such great teammates to each other.

The Navy rifle team completed competition at the Great American Rifle Conference championship meet with a 2,321-point showing in the air rifle portion of the two-day event. Shooting at the University of Mississippi, the Mids finished in seventh place overall in the nine-team field with a 4,612 final score. Sophomore Zach Gibson (Montrose, Colo.) led the Mids in Sunday's air rifle shoot with a score of 582. The second-year shooter registered two frames of 99 and a third of 98 to lead to his team-high total. Alex Berry (Jr., Greensboro, N.C.) and Jodi Cull-Host (So., Los Alamos, N.M.) tied for the second-best score on Navy with identical 580-point performances. Dan Jonas (Fr., Allentown, N.J.) was one-point shy of this duo as he completed the competition with a 579-point score. Senior Steven Frazier (McDonough, Ga.) completed his collegiate career with a score of 572. Over the two-day championship, Jonas posted a team-high 1,157 aggregate score. The freshman shot a 578-point score on Saturday in the smallbore. West Virginia defended its GARC title with a 2,363 point showing on Sunday to complete the event with a grand total of 4,700 points. Kentucky finished in the runner-up position with a 4,672 total.

Veterans Classic at the Naval Academy

CBS Sports Network and the Naval Academy have partnered to create a new college basketball event, VETERANS CLASSIC AT THE NAVAL ACADEMY, an annual showcase bringing together top teams from across the country in celebration of Veterans Day. The inaugural event tipped-off on Friday, Nov. 14, and featured Tennessee vs. VCU followed by Michigan State vs. Navy. CBS Sports Network also featured on-site pre-game, halftime and post-game studio coverage, live from Alumni Hall in Annapolis, Md. The event will take place each year through 2017, with Navy hosting and participating, along with other top teams from across the country. The Veterans Classic officially tips off CBS Sports Network's 2014 college basketball schedule. The three participating schools will have the rare opportunity to get a glimpse of what life is like as a midshipman at the Naval Academy. From touring the `Yard,' to watching noon meal formation and eating lunch with the Brigade at King Hall, the teams will be immersed in the culture and tradition of the Naval Academy. The event will include a number of other unique experiences, including military demonstrations and receptions.

3 Players Receive League Academic Honor

Recent Naval Academy graduates Audrey Bauer, M.L. Morrison and Kara Pollinger were among the 66 women's basketball players named to the Patriot League Academic Honor Roll for the sport on Tuesday. Women's basketball players needed to post at least a 3.20 grade-point average for the 2014 spring semester to be eligible for the honor roll. Bauer recorded a 3.53 GPA during her final semester on The Yard. The American politics and law major appeared on the honor roll in all but her sophomore season. She additionally was named to the Naval Academy's Superintendent's List in five semesters while also being selected for the Patriot League All-Academic Team as both a sophomore and junior. Morrison also attained a 3.53 GPA for the spring term. This marked the first time the ocean engineering major qualified for the league's academic laurel. In addition to her receiving the academic nod from the league, she also was named to both the Dean's and Commandant's Lists at the USNA for the 2014 spring semester. Pollinger closed her academic career at Navy by posting a 3.87 GPA to complete her degree in mechanical engineering. The two-time team captain made her second appearance on the league's honor roll this year. She also received academic honors from the Naval Academy in six of her eight semesters, which included her being named to the Superintendent's List for the 2013 fall grading period.

Duo Earns League Academic Honors

Navy rising junior Alex Gaines (Wilmington, N.C.) and rising sophomore Tyler Tossavainen (Fleming Island, Fla.) were recognized for their academic success by being named to the Patriot League Academic Honor Roll for men's tennis. Men's tennis players in the league needed to attain at least a 3.20 grade-point average for the 2014 spring semester to garner the academic honor. Gaines posted a 3.21 GPA this spring as an international relations major. He also was named to the Naval Academy's Commandant's List for the grading period. Gaines put together winning records in both singles and doubles during the 2014 spring season, recording marks of 9-5 in singles and a 13-8 in doubles. Those records raised his career ledger to 22-12 in singles and 27-18 in doubles in dual matches. Tossavainen attained a 3.82 GPA in the recently completed term. A two-time member of both the Superintendent's and Commandant's lists, he has selected computer science as his major and will begin coursework in it this fall. Tossavainen played at all three doubles flights this spring and at four of the six singles flights. He ended the dual match season with a singles mark of 10-12 and a doubles record of 5-4.

Six to Patriot League Academic Honor Roll

Six members of the Navy women's tennis team are among the 57 student-athletes that have been named to the Patriot League Women's Tennis Academic Honor Roll. To be eligible for the women's tennis academic honor roll, a student-athlete must earn a 3.20 grade-point average in the spring semester. Members named included: Mikaela Carlson, Erin Snook, Darien Sears, Gabby Winter, Maggie McLaughlin, and Audrey Channell. Senior Erin Snook was named to the academic honor roll for the first time in her career. Snook had a 3.60 GPA in her final semester at Navy. Snook graduated with a degree in ocean engineering and was commissioned as an ensign in the U.S. Navy. Her service selection is Navy Pilot. Snook was named the Navy Team MVP, the ITA Atlantic Region's Most Improved Senior and she was named to the All-Patriot League First Team. As Navy's starter at No. 1 singles, she had an overall record of 19-9 and a 15-5 record in dual play. Senior Darien Sears was named to the Patriot League Women's Tennis Academic Honor Roll for the third time in her career. Sears earned a 3.40 GPA in her final semester at Navy. Sears graduated with a degree in ocean engineering and was commissioned as an ensign in the U.S. Navy. Her service selection is Surface Warfare Officer-Engineering Duty. Sears was Navy's starter at No. 2 singles and No. 3 doubles. Sears was 18-12 in singles and 10-8 in dual play. Sears was also 13-10 overall in doubles and 10-6 in dual play. Sears was named to the All-Patriot League Second Team in 2014.

Mids Place Fourth at Patriot League

Navy junior August Jonas was able to hold off a barrage of Loyola players in the final round, but couldn't hang on to the top spot as Army's Peter Kim (73-66-70=209) took medalist honors and Jonas finished five strokes behind in second with a 4-over par 214 (69-69-76) at the 2014 Patriot League Men's Golf Championship at West Point. Meanwhile, the Mids shot a 34-over par 314 in the final round to slide from third to fourth in the final standings with a 60-over par 900. August Jonas earned First-Team All-Patriot League honors after placing second at the 2014 Patriot League Men's Golf Championship. Meanwhile, two-time Patriot League Men's Golf Scholar Athlete of the Year, Chris House, was named to the 2014 Patriot League Men's Golf Academic

Navy Men's Indoor and Outdoor

This year the Navy Men's Track and Field Team took off running from the start of the season without burning out. They had several records broken this year from both individual records and field records. Try have managed to overcome the strain of being a athlete as well as a amazing athlete. This year they have accomplished both of the goals every Navy team has, the first being a victory and the secondary is to Beat Army. This year they not only Beat Army they crushed Army first in Wesley Brown Field House and then they traveled to New York were they obliterated Army. The track and field team has developed and come a long way after reestablishing a fresh base of several plebes and youngsters in the 2012-2013 season. This year they are back and ready for a season of 1st place finishes in their meets and at the Patriot League Championships. They aspire to have multiple athletes achieve All-American. The field portion has gained a few new starts sure to make high marks. The track is preparing for a solid base for all events with more specialization.

Our team captains make sure that we are keeping up the intensity during practice and our coaching staff cannot be topped. They did a great job last year, but they hop to do even better this upcoming season., placing first in all of their meets and placing first in the Patriot League Championship. The harmony between the group is magnetic, with instant chemistry. The practices are tough, but they still manage to keep a smile on their faces through it all, supporting each other and continuing onward." The team had a strong start to their season with top finishes and winning the Army Star Meet. Though for the Indoor Patriot League Championships, they finished 4th. For the ECAC Championships they finishes 47th. As for the outdoor season, the team started off strong and had top finishes at other meets. Regrettably, they lost the Army Star Meet with a close point spread. The rest of the season went pretty well with strong finishes at all of their meets.

What makes up Navy Rowing is the rich history every new class represents moving forward in a quest for gold. The U.S Olympic rowing team has consisted of purely Navy oarsmen on multiple occasions as well as the contribution of many individuals to the Olympic and national teams through the years. With each passing year history is made and legends are born, and every year the program seeks to match and exceed the previous years' standing. Competing at the nation's highest level of collegiate competition Navy Crew embraces the challenge of our opponents and has made no alterations to the goal set by our brothers so long ago, to win.

The Brotherhood.

The Navy Lightweight Crew Team had a overall successful season this year. They competed in eight different events this season despite having a tough schedule. Starting with a 1st place finish at the Navy Day Regatta, the team went on to have top finishes at the following three regattas. Once they got to the individual races the team struggled a little with a loss to Yale University, Princeton and Columbia. But the team rallied to defeat Georgetown University in a tight race. The rest of the regular season had some ups and downs. When it came to the end of the regular season , the team looked strong going into the EARC Sprints and the IRA Championships. The Navy Lightweight team finished 8th at the EARC Sprints and 7th at the IRC Championships. With the lose of 8 seniors from the team, they will be losing valuables members of the team. However, they still look strong going into next year.

The Covenant

Who wants to get faster today? Who is a Patriot League Champion?"echoes in Hubbard Hall before the Navy Women's Crew team practices each day. The daily reminders keep the team focused on their goals, and have proven to be worthwhile, with the girls coming off the best season in program history. After earning the team's first ever bid to the NCAA Championship this past year, the team has once again zeroed in on the goal of sweeping the Patriot League Championship. This would be the final leg on the journey to qualify for the 2014 NCAA Championship. With several new competitors entering the Patriot League this year, the women seek to rise to the challenge. They remain fully aware that they must be faster, stronger, and competitive as ever to achieve the high goals they have set.

Team Perspective

The Navy Baseball team is a group of young but talented players. Coming into this season, we had 14 freshmen that had not yet played a division one baseball game. Those freshmen have stepped up in a big way with a number of them playing significant innings throughout the season thus far. The team is not without strong leadership from seniors David Norman, Brandon Beans, Matt Kilby and Chris Freeland who have been instrumental in developing this young team into a contender in the Patriot League. We have had our ups and downs so far this season, but the team has maintained a very positive attitude that has kept us in the fight. At this point we are in a difficult spot in the Patriot League. With that said we have a team that is playing well at the right time and hungry to finish these last two Patriot League weekends with as much success as possible. We have rallied behind the idea that we believe in each other and the team as a whole and that has helped stay up during the rough patches and keep us focused on playing to our potential.

The "LAX Bros"

The 2013-2014 Navy Men's Lacrosse Team is coming off a disappointing 3-10 season where they had many one goal loses and nail biters. The team this year returns almost all of the offensive production from last year with many young players gaining valuable experience last year in big games. They will look to their offense leaders in Sam Jones and Gabe Voumard to take control and put up more points this year. The defense took the biggest hit from graduation but still return their two-time team MVP long stick and team captain, Patrick Kronen and starter Nikolas Mullen. Jules Godino saw considerable time last year as a plebe and will be in the starting group this year. John Connors fills in the all-important goalie position and replace Nolan Hickey between the pipes." -3/C Kevin Wendel

Overall, this season the team did a little better compared to last years season, finishing with a 4-10 record. They faced some tough competition this season. They are losing some valuable seniors this year but are looking forward to training for the next season.

USNA Team Represents US in France

Led by Navy varsity offshore sailing team captain Andrew Beeler, a team from the U.S. Naval Academy representing Team USA placed third overall of 14 international teams at the Student Yachting World Cup help last week on the waters off Pornic, France. The regatta featured 18 races over six days in widely ranging conditions and tested all aspects of the teams' sailing and racing skills. Beeler's crew included fellow seniors Roscoe Thomas, Neil McMillan, and Alexa Ciarolla, plus sophomore Charlie Morris. France won the Student Yachting World Cup. Next up for for the varsity offshore sailing team was the McMillan Cup at which Navy placed third. Navy also placed second at the Kennedy Cup and third at the Los Angeles Harbor Cup.

Go NADS!

The U.S. Naval Academy Intercollegiate Sailing team had a successful year both in the Fall and the Spring. Not only did the Navy team qualify for numerous national championships throughout the year, they had top finishes at numerous regattas all year. This year we sent two women to the Laser Performance/ICSA Singlehanded National Championships for the third year in a row. Marissa Lihan '14 and Mary Hall'15 represented the Naval Academy well. Then with the team of Killian Corbishley'14, Michael Popp'16, Patrick Snow'17 and Michael Madigan'17, the match racing team narrowly missed qualifying for the ICSA Match Racing Championships with a loss to St. Mary's College in Maryland during the semifinals. As for the Spring season, Navy qualified for all three national championships. Starting off strong with a 3rd place finish at the Sperry Topsider/ICSA Women's National Championship, they continued on the finish 6th place at the APS/ICSA Team Racing National Championship and 9th at the Gill/ICSA National Championship. Though the team is losing five extremely valuable seniors, they look strong going into next year with the return of the rest of the team.

Boxing started at the Naval Academy in 1865. Boxing was treated as a casual recreation activity from its beginning until 1919 when the Navy appointed a thirty year old boxer from Baltimore named Hamilton Murrell Webb, but everyone affectionately called him "Spike."

His contagious enthusiasm was perfect for the new program, and in its first coached season in 1920, Navy went undefeated in intercollegiate competition. Navy was to become a boxing powerhouse and would go on to remain undefeated in dual meets for the next eleven years. During that time span, Navy captured six national titles. Spike coached four U.S. Olympic teams between 1920 and 1932.

Navy Cycling is a club sport sponsored by USNA. Its purpose is to represent the physical mission of the Academy while developing teamwork and leadership qualities. Every member of the team is a Midshipman and balances the rigors of academics, military life, and other extra-curricular activities with the demands of cycling. We have tryouts twice a year where members of the Brigade can make an attempt to be part of the championship team. Most team members join the team with little or no experience, but develop into proficient cyclists during their time on the team. The cycling team is currently coached by Roy Collins and overseen by LT Gene Coryell (USN). With their experience and officership, the team plans on continuing a domination of the Atlantic Collegiate Cycling Conference.

Once the smaller N26 training crafts have been mastered the sailors proceed onto the Navy 44 offshore training crafts. This ECA allows new and seasoned sailors alike to come onto the water and enjoy sailing. While these sails are educationally based, the leadership skills that are developed onboard are useful far beyond the Chesapeake Bay.

gospel choir

Who We Are

The Gospel Choir at the United States Naval Academy is more than a group of talented singers, it is also a family. Practicing and touring year-round, they are still always there for their friends and classmates in the Brigade of Midshipmen. Gospel Choir differentiates itself from other choral groups around the Yard in its musical selection as well as the method by which songs are presented. Unlike some other groups who are restricted to an unchanging set of notes and words, Gospel Choir often varies on a theme and lets the music take it to magical places. This past year's tours included New Orleans, Houston, and Newark.

The United States Naval Academy is host to a few International Midshipmen every year. They come from all over the world, from their own militaries and navies to experience life in the United States for four years. After they graduate, most return to their home country and share the lessons and experiences they had while they serve in their home countries' militaries and navies.

the drum & bugle corps

100 years of excellence

Who we Are:

The United States Naval Academy Drum & Bugle Corps has been an integral part of the ceremony and spirit of the Brigade for over 100 years. Present at football games, parades, basketball games, pep rallys, and representing the Naval Academy at galas and other important events, the Drum & Bugle Corps remains dedicated to providing musical accompaniment and upbeat spirit to any and all events that we are present at. The firsties this year led the Drum & Bugle Corps in fielding a halftime show including music from Star Trek as well as some cleverly planned hijinks involving cymbal "photon torpedoes." After many football games, the Army Navy game rolled around and D&B was present when Navy was victorious yet again, this time with significant snowfall. After a Bowl Game in Dallas, Texas, and many basketball games, the Drum & Bugle Corps was present for one of the Mardi Gras parades in New Orleans, Louisiana.

midshipmen action group

aka: mag

The Midshipman Action Group (MAG) was established in 1992, and is supported by the U.S. Naval Academy Alumni Association & Foundation. MAG currently offers a variety of educational, environmental, and social service volunteer projects. MAG aims to provide reliable, diligent, and enthusiastic volunteers willing to offer their time, talent, and energy. MAG also hopes to better prepare midshipmen for future service by encouraging peer leadership, teamwork, character development, morale, selflessness, and good will towards others. Every company at USNA has a MAG Company Representative who shares upcoming projects with midshipmen. If midshipmen are interested in a certain project, they can volunteer to sign up with that specific project leader or their company representative!

the green classroom

Mission

The Green Classroom is a group of Midshipmen who want to participate and learn in health, nutrition, recycling, clean energy and overall green ideas. We will volunteer at animal sanctuaries, participate in discussion topics, hold vegan food potlucks, and help educate the community.

The Green Classroom is designed to educate & promote proper nutrition and health, environmental and animal rights issues.

"I've been plant strong over break and it's awesome. I'm at a party beach in Florida and I've been cooking a ton of awesome vegan food while all my roommates who sometimes gave me a hard time in Annapolis now stare at my food and tell me how good it smells and tastes! This morning I had a plate of scrambled tofu and veggies with some hash browns, it was delicious!"

mstem learning for all

The MSTEM program at the United States Naval Academy is a group of midshipmen dedicated to educating children and teens about the STEM divisons: Science, Technology, Engineering, and Mathematics. They often hold fun, informative events and invite people from the surrounding Annapolis area to enjoy the wonders of STEM.

the log

we've been here awhile...

Who We Are

The LOG is the midshipmen's premier self-published magazine. It contains the musings of Salty Sam and its many contributors, including but not limited to Vice Admiral Micheal Miller and Captain William Byrne. It is written exclusively in the catacombs of Bancroft Hall during convenient times to get out of formations and briefs. Some say that only the most cool and tough plebes make it through the LOG screener to get a chance at interviewing with Salty Sam himself and earning a spot on the LOG! The LOG is the periodical of choice for Bancroft Hall's many roving CMODs and restrictees.

The Chemistry Club of the Naval Academy is a group of midshipmen who celebrate the mysteries of chemicals and compounds. They often meet in the depths of Chauvenet and Michelson Halls to mix things together and observe the reactions that happen afterward.

the usna color guard

Color Guard is a team of 33 dedicated Midshipmen that carry the colors at all Naval Academy events and perform nation-wide as representatives of the Naval Academy. In this past year, the Color Guard has performed at events ranging from the Marine Corps Ball, Orioles Baseball game and the Surface Navy Symposium. In addition to performances, the Color Guard attends yearly competitions in Louisiana, New York and Pennsylvania. In this past year, they placed in the top 5 in all competitions and brought home three trophies. All members are hand selected over their plebe summer through a rigorous process in which over 80% of the selectees are cut. Only those who display the utmost proficiency at drill and maintain the highest uniform standards are kept through the academic year.

the 121st edition of the lucky bag

USNA's Yearbook

The U.S. Naval Academy's "Lucky Bag" is the largest color yearbook in the world. Every year when the Lucky Bag staff completes the initial cover design, they are given a number of pages allowable. The book is so big that special consideration are given to how many pages the printing press can accommodate with the cover!

Often, then problem with being a talented photographer is that there are never any good photos of yourself...not the case with our loveable VP, Jeff Martino!

First Classman Vytautas Drejeris brings his passion for photography with him everywhere and mentors aspiring Lucky Bag staff photographers.

I thought the only thing Tucciarone did was send too many emails?

The Lucky Bag room plays host to numerous extra books but, more importantly, an overhead projector for movies-

I mean photography..and work..stuff.

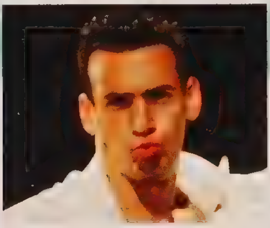
Eric Abordo

Navy Pilot

Some might know him from his campaign slogan I AMERICAbordo. Clever. Coming into plebe summer as the no ribbon prior who demanded we treat him as the almighty self-proclaimed Big Daddy. After the gates of heaven were slammed shut in front of him, he exiled himself from the sanctity of MacD for two years. During this time he placed his toe in everything, signing up for every club to include VT-NA, Italian, LSAP, and others but when the fee arrived he was gone. He pursued all career choices even having the courage to sign up for the EOD screener before deciding he wanted the best life as a SWO which now fit his exiled body. He was too great an asset to waste. He was drafted Navy pilot. His robust figure no longer fit that his career choice. Big Daddy returned to the beloved Mac D to shed the gut.



Chase Allan

Navy Pilot

Zzz....WHERE ARE THE PLEBES?!?! Sorry, thought it was time for PEP. Name's Chase. Named after a verb. So chill, I know. Raised in the vineyards of Napa Valley, I considered myself a wine connoisseur. Now I dabble in the fine delicacy of a Natty Boh at Fed House. I've got the hots for Midshipwomen. Almost married one. Sold my soul to another. And just "wanted to be friends" with a third. I enjoy skydiving, running from large animals with horns, completing the three M's, and eating peanut butter. I love peanut butter in more ways than one. I'd prefer to drink a "silver bullet" rather than get one. I'm not very coordinated on mopeds, but luckily K-Mart is a modern day hospital. My motto is the Chinese proverb "Joushur Ni Hao Shi Shi". Dressed up like a hobo in my pajamas, I'll fit right in P-Cola with my flight suit.

Max Allen

Naval Flight Officer

I'm Max Allen, but to some lucky ladies I'm also known as Smax. Yes that's right Smax, the name of the most prolific drink at Fed House which was named after me, along with 34 other Japanese children who are also named after me. With no time for a middle name, I was born on the crest of a wave and rocked in the cradle of the deep. My calves were carved from marble and, I've been told, resemble the teeth of the fabled Megaladon. My creamy caramel colored skin is enough to make men and women alike come flocking, as long as they don't have a problem with moral cowardice. I live a simple Spartan existence, and by a creed every man should follow "Carpe the Diem" or roughly translated "Seize the Carp."

Katherine Ashton

USMC Pilot

The Kath of Rath, portside-strongside, cowgirl reigns from the best state ever, or so the other Texans say. Even though she was the quietest plebe ever to enter the Naval Academy, this closet genius turned into a dancing diva once she turned 21, and KASH $ was ready to PAARRTAAY. Unfortunately, her spelling skills did not improve with age. You can hear the future Marine pilot laughing, I mean yutting, a mile away, and are sure to find her at a Fed House near you. Aside from tearing up dance floors around the world, she rips up the water in her little boat for the U23 National Team in her spare time. Sun in turns brown hair orange, I mean blonde. What happens in the platoon stays in the platoon. Take your clothes off the damn drying rack. Lioness Hunting Party and NWC 2014: ROLLOUT.

Nicholas Beasley

Navy Pilot

Born a humble boy in the country side of West Virginia, Tanner still enjoys the company of a toy RC plane or model train remaining young at heart. His claim to fame paradoxically being his stunning physique, defined chin, and tantalizing calves. While now serving his company as XO, Tanner enjoys braving Chesapeake as a member of the ECA Sailing Club with aspirations of continuing sailing for its romance in the future. From offering kisses and hugs, this giant tends to not remain dormant and lets his roommates know his anger and continually losing battle with technology. From cargo shorts, a goatee and a job as a cashier in the only Shell for 300 miles, Tanner has the ambition of a bull to charge into the skies as a Naval Aviator. The Naval Academy has evolved the man we know and love to be the Katy Perry Kisser.

Christopher Burns

Navy Pilot

After winning the Michigan High School Cross Country State Championship, MIDN Burns charged into plebe year ready to demolish his collegiate competition. At first, this goal appeared effortless, as he made his classmates look like fools during Plebe Summer runs. Unfortunately, though his boyish good looks remain, his running glory has faded. Despite his best efforts for 3.14 years, he realized he had peaked, and retired into NARP life. MIDN Burns can now be found lifting in MacD, getting huge to chase chipmunks in D.C. and cougars at Fed House. His happy place is sitting on the docks of the Severn, using his Naval Architecture skills to draw boats. Even with these time-consuming ECAs, he prioritized napping, watching Miley Cyrus videos, playing twerk-ball, and serving in distinguished positions such as 1st Battalion ADEO. Burns will continue on this heroic path in Pensacola and throughout his career as a Navy Pilot.

Jason Burns

USMC Pilot

Hi, my name is J B Baby Burns. I'm a simple dude and live my life by three M's. I have two loves in my life: the Marine Corps and my 1985 Monte Carlo. My favorite color is MARPAT and it's been said that on the 7th day God didn't rest but contrived the color of my eyes, later to be patented by the Virgin Mary herself. I was conceived approximately 9 months before March 5, 1992 by two of the sweetest people in the world, Rose and Shawn (with a "w") Burns. I enjoy long drives to Connecticut, push ups in T-Court, broccoli supreme, and drinking beer outside Chipotle. If you ever need a friend to demotivate you from doing work and watch a movie instead, I'm your man, so come on down to room 3062 where we're living the dream and every night is movie night.

Samantha Carl

Navy Pilot

This Ring-knocker is notorious for her compassion and matchmaking skills in the beautiful city of Pittsburg. Sam picked her service selection, Navy Pilot, out of a hat. She has a unique fascination with watching TV. She's the most fashionable mid in the brigade, alternating drug rugs and brews brothers' apparel. #whyisshestillsingle? Sam only counts by prime numbers, as any math major should: the only exception being 14. (naturally) Sam is always a great person to go out with being as though she ALWAYS holds her liquor and never 'goes for the puke'. She really showcased this responsibility at Sweet Life '12. It's really a shame that Sam went through so many roommates, they clearly can't handle BB. Penn State, Notre Dame, SB''11 AND 12. If all else fails live by her life motto "HYFR you may kiss the ring…" No wonder her parents kept her on a leash.

William Chilton

Submarines

Pierce Chilton is exactly the type of person Hyman Rickover would've wanted in his nuclear navy. Arrogant, abrasive, and unprincipled are just some of his descriptors (Thanks MIDS!) He is always prompt, and his ability to wake immediately from a deep slumber will be an asset for him in the submarine force. He lives by the motto "Keep your friends close, and your underclass closer," and he certainly bought into the idea of taking care of the people below you. This has served him well in his time here. He perfectly embodies the Texas lifestyle from whence he came, his support of the Auburn Tigers notwithstanding. Pierce, you've touched a lot of people during your time here and we love you for it. Semper Deep!

Paul Daly

Surface Warfare Officer

The P.E.D is a southern gentleman and a devout Panther Fan. The only southern gentleman, however, that skips his daily gallon of sweet tea for the harder stuff of whole milk. Pale and full, the drink chooses and makes the man. He has been known to opt for milk instead of beer for his poison of choice out in DTA while wooing bartenders. Always down for a good argument , Paul took his talents and knowledge to the debate team. A master debater his grip on vast subjects is as strong and wide as they come. This future SWO Daddy will without a doubt be the first in our class to hold command for he has had much practice while here with his own command. No doubt his dedication to dairy with his capacity for work and sweat will prove vital for the long watches in the mighty Fleet.

Christopher Dinelli

Submarines

Born from the fires of Mt. Fuji, this young Samurai Warrior has much more to learn. After basic USNA MA1 and MA2 he will be moving on to the Graduate program, an honor that came at the cost of many hours of lost sleep for him and his roommates. Following this he will continue his samurai training at the Silent Service Dojo. Behind his sheet of armor is a softer side that enjoys the occasional sushi boat with scotch at a risqué club. His generosity is unparalleled especially after sake. Even with this rigorous training Kenji has trained his pet panda to retrieve food from the vending machine. His Japanese ship poster on his wall may cause many to question his loyalty to this country but I can assure you he is someone you want in your corner if North Korea acts up. I'm glad he's on our side.

Tanner England

Submarines

Tanner England, a strong-willed southern man. Arriving for plebe summer with an injured shoulder, he was sure to keep it parallel with the slope of the ramp. Tanner excelled when it came to the water, joining the sailing team and the SCUBA club immediately, and eventually becoming SCUBA club president, but not without a few hiccups especially one involving a certain Major. Between diving into the depths of the sea and diving deep into his rack at any time of the day, Tanner could be seen getting ejected from the game downtown or maybe taking a dive on the Johnnies' home turf. Tanner was often underestimated, especially when it came to his outstanding organizational skills (with the exception of organizing his room). A lover, a fighter, a submariner; he will always be a great friend.

Eric Graham

Surface Warfare Officer

Christine Guerrero

USMC Ground

Hailing from the rough and tumble L.A. streets, Christine came to us from that frozen wasteland in Rhode Island. She spent her four years running, sewing, and calling people punks. We quickly learned that she is not a morning person, which could account for her apparent inability to show up to CDO muster. She claims that she was not the youngster found running around in DTA, but rather it was her evil twin, Christineth, a likely story, since Christineth was a frequent visitor of Fed House. Even though her success as a plebe boxer and marathon runner made her think that EOD was the life for her, she realized that the Marine Corps was a much better fit for someone of her stature and warrior birthright. At least now she knows that she will never have to do any engineering ever again. The struggle is real. We love you!

Allan Hooker

Navy Pilot

If you're looking for someone to dazzle you, look somewhere else. However if you're looking for someone who is bland, look no further. Allan "I wish I was Batman" Hooker is not subject to change and this is evident as he has had the same roommate (who had his back during his adjudication) all four years. His favorite choice of ice cream is vanilla, his eggs can only be scrambled, and if he had his way, he'd still be in the 2% club. He's a ghost in the company who only appears when he has to stand watch, which conveniently happens to be at the same time as some major brigade wide event, and many classmates are astonished to hear that he's still in 1st company since his plebe summer squad is infamous for DOR-ing. The academy almost made the mistake of believing Allan was a qualified prospect for nuke, yet as "fate" should have it combined with failing the nuke interview, was properly placed into the aviation community two months after service selection day. A boring man, but a loyal friend, Allan will no doubly surprise you in a positive way with his dry humor and slimy personality.

Tucker Hull

USMC Ground

Tucker has one of the most unique minds you will ever come in contact with. He may not always be right, but he's almost never wrong. In spite of this eerie savant-like savvy, Tucker has had some painful experiences when left to his own devices to the tune of $270 because he took his own destiny physically into his own hands. Tucker is a Syracuse native and a Carolina boy, and there ain't nothin' he cain't shoot, from deer to birds to lacrosse balls. A respected left-handed sportser, Tucker is not afraid of switching it up. Even if that means taking a trip across the pond, Tuck'll do it if there's a good time on the other side, although he had to sever diplomatic communications. Tucker's a devoted son and a great friend who's always ready for a good time and always makes your good time better.

Ryan Hurtz

Navy Pilot

One word to describe myself? Hood. I raised myself runnin' the streets of O-town with my Bishop O' Dowd lax bros. For those of you who grew up in gated communities, O-town is short for Oakland. I'm so tough I did NOLS…almost twice! I'm pretty much as cultured as you can get; I love pushing the boundaries and living on the edge. The Israeli government even made me an honorary citizen so long as I spread the holy word that I've been to Israel every half hour or so. I enjoy making my friends hot pockets, perfecting my Boston accent after a few brewstoievskis, hooking up with plus sizes in Panama City, and pawning off my dates to my friends (I-Ball, Ring Dance, my future wedding…). So if you need a spot, come find me in P-cola where I'll be following in Maverick's footsteps drinking margaritas and talking to señoritas.

Joseph Jackson

Navy Pilot

Whether he is mudding, representing the brothers on the ski slopes or making Shrimp Tempura there is never a dull moment with Joe Jackson. His muddy Jeep in the parking lot is always a sign of a good weekend, unless of course he got stuck. He is a member of the ole 530 rifle club, Dairy Queen Military Discounts club, and the President of the Steve Urkel Foundation all while being an Engineer. When wearing his Adventure Crocs he is invincible like Harry Potter, but with bigger biceps. Although it is truly the simple things that Joe enjoys the most such as filming your life through his camera, fishing or a casual game of Tinder. Some people may call him a Creeper but I call him my Friend. He is someone who literally touches everyone he meets and is truly one of a kind.

Zachary Johnson

SEALs

Just like Tennessee has two of every letter, it also has two Johnsons. Tennessee also has two of every story and in the case of either Johnson, the story is usually longwinded and filled with interjections from either brother before it becomes an all-out brawl ending an awkward physical feats-of-strength. With an accent that only a mother or Honey Booboo could love the Zach is recognizable as soon as he walks into the room, because he is probably talking. However if you get a chance to sit down with Zach, you will learn that he is just like any average guy. He enjoys talking about how to perfect your form in the weight room, or how he can do more pushups with one arm than you could do with three. Zach Johnson will undoubtedly go on to do big things, which will be recounted in a three hour story.

SUCK

Jonathan Kappel

Naval Flight Officer

Jon Kappel, the only midshipman I know that measures out his macro and micro nutrients daily before every meal. Besides passing his extensive knowledge about health to us younger generations Jon is often seen lifting, playing Xbox, watching YouTube, watching Netflix, talking to his fiancé, or watching YouTube (Pewdiepie!). He will do great in the fleet and will surely be missed in the Hall! Never let the barrels win Jon!

James Lights

Surface Warfare Officer

James A Lights was born on the crest of a wave, and rocked in the cradle of the deep. Coming in just about as salty as they are, James will be joining the SWO community. From there, he will achieve his goal of becoming the biggest SWO Daddy there ever was. He has always been a diligent worker, especially in his extra-curricular activities such as: Netflix, video games, napping, NARPing, and of course, getting swole in MAC D with the rest of the heroes. Although James doesn't spit tar, he spits whey protein in its purest form known to mankind. James Lights earns his, did you earn yours?

Kacey Liscomb

Surface Warfare Officer

Sister Kacey, the rugby extraordinaire, financially stable, most dependent woman you'll ever meet. A crucial member of the TRI and former work stallion for the Navy Women's Rugby team, she embodies all attributes that her sisters can look up to. She is one of the most sarcastic and bougie girls that you will meet. She can quote Kevin Hart and Sweet Brown at a moment's notice…aye you gone learn today. Kacey is always there when you need some advice or just a shoulder to lean on and some tissue. She loves others with her whole heart and soul like no other person can and would do anything for the ones she loves. She is fiercely loyal, loves her gals and her Papa J and Mama Karen. She is undoubtedly going to make a great shipmate to her fellow JOs and a wonderful officer to those who are in her division while she is working on her Information Dominance pipeline.

Gregory Lowhorn

SEALs

When the history books are written, they will note that it was Greg Lowhorn who was the first to successfully wield the power known as "Tinder." What Greg may lack in the academic arena(He was a card carrying member of the comma club), he made up for with a hard head, huge stones, and dumb luck. Willing to try anything twice, Greg has raced everything on two wheels and even spent time trading penny stocks looking for the next big score. A St. Louis native, Greg looks to follow his hero/role model/idol/brother into the NSW community. When not doing his best to find the next get rich quick scheme he's busy neglecting any work associated with Mechanical Engineering. When graduation is behind us, Greg will be remembered as a true bro, and a man who made things happen.

Eric Mahler

Naval Flight Officer

I am Eric Mahler from Old Bridge, New Jersey. In high school I lettered in football, swim, and track. I played football for 5 years for Navy including my season at NAPS.

Christian McClure

Submarines

If you didn't know Christian McClure you were wrong, and you never had the pleasure of listening to him rave about his truck. He enjoyed plebe year so much he decided to do it again four months later, thanks O'Brien's. When not picking out a new pair of Boots, he was at Fed House or in The Alley down the street. We can thank our Army friend for his newfound 'bad habits', and the expensive car wash bills. A proud South Carolinian, Christian epitomizes southern hospitality and charm. Upon graduation Christian will return to his home state to begin his new journey. At the end of the day, arguments will be forgotten and friendships will live on. Semper Deep.

Glenn McKenna

Submarines

Glenn "Yuri The Trainer Who Trains" McKenna was born an Irish boy in the outskirts of New York. In his free time, Glenn enjoys curling up to a nice book, hot coffee and scrumptious treat. He also enjoys poetry, doodling on sticky notes, and humming loudly to songs for everyone to hear. Although these descriptions of a future Submariner may make him appear to be a true gentleman, be cautious to wake him from his much enjoyed deep slumbers, for he turns into a raging bear and expresses his emotions with the language of a true dirty sailor. A true roommate/friend, Glenn is always one to put a smile on your face with his charm and wit. Wherever his travels may take him, Glenn's heart and roots remain at home; a dim tavern lost amongst the cabins of Innisfree where the beer cascades darker than the Galway Girl's flowing hair.

Daniel Meaney

Submarines

Dan Meaney would not have made it through the Academy if it were not for his faith, Sprint Football teammates, or his drop-dead bombshell girlfriend (Ellie). He has fond memories of: Pouring chocolate milk on himself with Will Rodin. Jumping into a frozen pool with Ryan Hurtz. San Diego and Protramid with Chase Allan, while surviving the dangers of stingrays with Dan Ojard. Nuke interviews with Glenn McKenna. Absurb, late night conversations with Andrew Blank and Eric Mahler. Teaching Joe Jackson how to dance at Ring Dance. The Bay House with Zach Powers, Pierce Chilton, and Skyler Raybin. Warheads on Foreheads with Tanner Beasley. Informal counseling with Paul Daly. Late night walks from Rickover Hall with Katherine Ashton, Christine Guerrero, Jason Burns, and Christian McClure. Dan Meaney (from Naperville, Illinois) wishes everyone the best of luck in their future careers.

James Mills

Navy Pilot

Andrew Mills: President of the 98% Club and future Navy Pilot. Through the past four years, Andrew Mills has been at the center of more devastating relationships than How I Met Your Mother's Ted Mosby When Millsy isn't hopelessly searching for the woman of his dreams, he can be found proving various diet plans wrong, and using that phat booty to protect the net as Navy Hockey's captain and goalie. Additionally, MIDN Mills never suffered from homesickness during his time at USNA, as he was unable to recognize his hometown. Is he actually from Traverse City, Williamsburg, or Pittsburgh? No one will ever know for sure Despite his I-Day confusion when he realized that "Chief" was not wearing a Native American headdress, or leading the Shipmates from Color Company to 27th of 30 as CC, Millsy has transformed himself into a respectable Sea Warrior. Best of luck in the wild blue yonder. Shippy!

Daniel Ojard

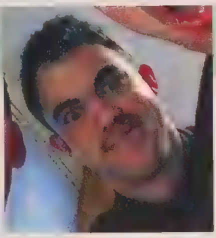
Navy Pilot

Daniel Diangelo the Juiceman Ojard may have been born here on the east coast, but his passion for the beach, and disdain towards non-organic high fructose corn syrup containing product makes him right at home on the west coast and beyond. To explain Daniel, let's put it this way; It's like Earth, Wind and Fire discovered a new element, Dan, and went on to become platinum selling super stars with said element as lead vocals, guitar, drum, cowbell specialist, harp, and of course chief flexor of the pipes…actually the rest of the band just does backup dancing. This would be an accurate description of this half broviator, half intellect, and half Knights Templar – I know what you're thinking and the answer is yes Dan gets 150% of all things in life. In all seriousness Daniel has strong values, a great work ethic, and palpable happiness; rip the wave of life!

Zachary Powers

Submarines

"MIDN" Powers, as he is known amongst his closest friend(s?), is an energetic, somewhat boisterous, and passionate ultimate Frisbee player. In the classroom, MIDN Powers is second to none, and stays grounded only through his less than average social skills. His friends, always patient with him, forgive this deficiency, and have worked tirelessly over the past 4 years to improve him. From the Seattle Seahawks, Macklemore, and the relentless pursuit of the perfect woman via Tinder, MIDN Powers is always one step away from his next interest. A great addition to any team, he offers a pillar of stability and different views on: alcohol, online dating, and Apple products. We'll stop being your friend, when you start your workout routine. While the subject of many jokes, his friends have been so blessed to have spent that last four years with him. Semper Deep! And God Bless America!

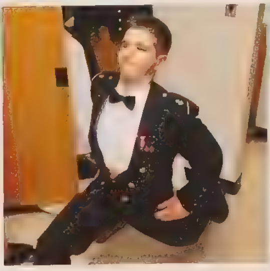


Shane Quinn

USMC Ground

My name is Shane Francis Quinn and I was born to be a Devil Dog. I'm as fearless as they come. I have trained my body, mind, and soul to prepare for the Corps. After a night of drinking, I make sure to do push-ups in T-Court for Chesty. I'm a good Christian, I believe in the Father, Son, Holy Spirit, and the Corps. I have battled invisible alligators at a golf course pond in Florida, and I have beaten a man with my words for a hot pocket, while naked. I am ready for any challenge Chesty can throw at me, as long as he doesn't throw it from my left. I don't look left. Armed with my awkward charm, boyish complexion, and dazzling blue eyes, the world is my oyster, raaah.

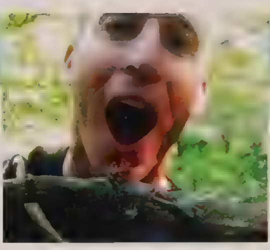
Skyler Raybin



Submarines

Skylar "Chesty" Raybin is an oddity. From his propensity to lose items of clothing in rapid succession, to his love of wintergreen tobacco, all intermixed with loud cries of "Corps!" , he has seared memories into the minds of his friends. His love for the Detroit Tigers has spurred fights with dumpsters and bags of Franzia; currently he is 0-2. You can bet the chips are down when the Skyler face appears… pull out the camera phones; you don't want to miss this. He has labored constantly over the last four years to earn a degree in the hardest major on the yard. Though he has a knack for irresponsible online purchases for himself, he's always responsible with his gift for others. In all honesty, he's been a rock solid friend and roommate. Always remember, the nose plays.

William Rodin



Submarines

Will, Rody, RoRo and later babaganush brought the aloha to his stay at Bancroft Hall. Island born and bred, this true native came to plebe summer sporting a dinosaur claw because of a broken tendon. In true goofy style, he rode through the rest of plebe year and made the brilliant decision to journey into Rickunder as an EE. However, after making it through two and a half semesters of this rigorous major, he decided a vacation was necessary: he chose the powder-laden slopes of USAFA. Here he would shred the gnar, get flight hours, and live an overall charmed life. As a Firstie, Will came back to do brief battle with the SARB, only to realize that he was indeed going to be semper deep (and wealthy)--a fact that was completely overshadowed by dating the love of his life, his babe Sam. Mahalo and good luck, brother.

Darien Sears

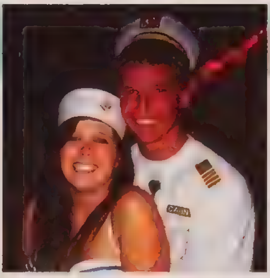
Surface Warfare Officer

Darien Sears AKA Big D, Dweebler, Dweebles, and D-Money was born and raised in the great state of Maryland. Despite suffering from a severe case of tennis elbow Darien has had four years of success on the varsity tennis team. When away from tennis Darien spends time drinking smoothies and attempting the latest eating trends. Darien Sears is very loyal and ambitious dedicating time to anyone in need of guidance or support. All of her attributes will make her an excellent surface warfare officer before becoming an engineering duty officer.

Guy Skord

Surface Warfare Officer

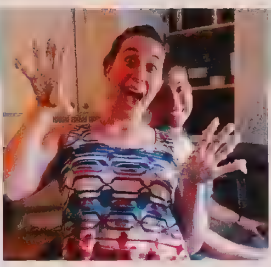
Guy Skord has done many great things while at the Naval Academy from playing varsity soccer, to being company commander, to running 7 miles after Sea Trials. His biggest accomplishment was beating Army single handedly. This feat could only be accomplished by someone with a delicate touch such as his. He is also known for being among one of the few Midshipmen to literally run home. Guy enjoys a rousing game of "Who can make Paul mad" which he plays daily with his roommate. There is only one down side to this magnificent fellow and that is he gets upset when no one talks to him. His roommate would often fall asleep while having a nightly chat. In order to wake up his roommate, he hit him in the face with a master lock. Through all of his flaws, he is one of the most respected members of the company.



Connor Timmins

Submarines

If Connor was writing his own Bio, it would have been done Plebe year A man that is truly a product of his environment hailing from Naples, Florida: the retirement capital of the world. He desires nothing more than to return there and spend the rest of his days fishing. Voted most likely to be a soccer dad in high school, Connor or "American Daddy" likes to hit the town early with his high school sweet heart, Justine, dressed in his dad jeans and enjoy his dinner of salad with a maybe a nice slice of pie from Double T. Then lights out at 10:30. Eyes open at dawn, Connor will have no problem understanding a nuclear submarine because he operates like one: silent, slightly critical and on nearly limitless energy. The nuclear community is in good hands with the most fuel-efficient man that runs on lettuce, ambition and enthusiasm



Jennifer Underhill

Medical Corps

Trust her, she's a doctor! At least one day she will be…Jenn aka "Hennifer, the taller prettier friend" is the connoisseur of cute animal pictures, getting free drinks, stealing apples, spewing scientific facts, hmm or just saying silly words that sound great together is 1st company's own southern belle. She has wowed the audiences in Mahan as the queen bee of the Masqueraders while still finding time to make paper snowflakes and study (I mean not study) for Russian. Still an unsolved mystery…. While she may eat strange foods, make strange noises, and require constant attention like that of a small puppy, she is our chemistry cat. JMUNDERHILL may be seen out in DTA from time to time (or in a hottub) she is still the mastermind of all adventures and is on track to one day take over the world! Insert evil laugh. Love the best roommates ever! HAHAdent,

Gabriel Acevedo

USMC Pilot

Gabe is the kind of person who always brings laughs and happiness to a group. He is from Fort Lauderdale, FL, where he got his warm and shining smile. As a supportive Navy sports fan, Gabe especially enjoys Navy swim meets. Although he's an IT major, he spent most time writing essays instead of code. His favorite Chinese food is nai you xiao sheng. One of Gabe's best qualities is his good temper. He doesn't anger easily and won't let his emotions affect others. Gabe is always there with a warm hug when you need it the most. His passion for becoming a Marine and his personality will certainly make him a great Marine officer. As a leader, Gabe is the one you will trust and follow. As a friend, Gabe is the one with whom you can share anything and know that he will never judge you. No pa tanto! Taiwan zui bang!

Haley Adams

USMC Ground

Haley Elizabeth Adams is a sister, daughter, best friend, and fiancé (almost wife!) who hails from Woodstock, GA. She came to USNA on a tennis scholarship, and majored in Political Science. It is not in Haley's nature to be anything less than compassionate. She cares so much about everything and one around her and reflects often on herself and her interactions with others. However, her warmth is not something to take advantage of and is not an indication of weakness. She finishes what she starts, her determination and work ethic are bar none, and her moral and physical strength are worthy of admiration. She will excel as a U.S. Marine Corps Officer, investing as much time as is necessary to take care of her people and raise the standards along the way. We all love you, Hal; I'm so blessed to have called you Roomie for the past 3.5 years.

Gary Albright

USMC Ground

If you're out in DTA and had too much to drink, don't worry, Gary the corpsman will come and save you. He has carried many a drunk mid back to the hall, some of whom he barely even knew. Although it sounds funny, it shows Gary's care and compassion towards others. He is the kind of guy that will give the shirt off his back just to accommodate others. He acts and dresses like John Wayne and drives a big red truck covered in mud, which was explored by many local ladies. An avid fisherman, Gary often practices the catch and release method. Overall I could never ask for a better friend.

Mario Avila

USMC Ground

His teammates could not ask for a better friend than "Mary-O". Whether he is observing traffic laws or sailing the seas, he always has time to listen. The respect he has from his friends is from his blunt honesty and intense passion for their success. If he's not proving you wrong with physics, he is willing to look at things from a different perspective and never afraid to do what is right. Unlike his Jeep, his friends knew he was a reliable source to which they could go. Knife hands to straight razors, Goodwill to Whole Foods, he is a man's man with stunning suave. In a world where "finding yourself" is a priority, Mario has made it a priority to find the truth and stand for it. His leadership and example have touched and inspired anyone who knows him. Thank you, Mario.

Lauren Baguley

Surface Warfare Officer

Laur, La, Bags, Bagel, Bagels, Bagooley, Lulu…Lauren. It all started on I-day when she realized she had to swim AND be in the military. Hailing from the small town of Hudsonville, Michigan, possibly the most sheltered and least diverse community in our great nation, Lauren never imagined her future roommate would not be blonde haired and blue eyed, let alone a spy from Taiwan. Majoring in swimming with a minor in Oceanography, Lauren was a rare sight in company area, especially after her strict bedtime of 2200. Her academic schedule was always planned for optimal naptime (or Netflix…youngsters every day anyone?). Her vanity-plated Corolla will grace Norfolk in the years to come (and yes…she wanted Norfolk…) as she four and dives out of the SWO community into METOC. Tune into the Weather Channel in ten years to witness Lauren in action as the weather girl she's always dreamed of being.

Justin Betz

USMC Ground

There are three things that you need to know about Justin Betz. First, this man should be president. He knows more about politics and the Constitution than you ever will know. He is dedicated to doing what is right and has a firm stance (in the low squat with toes pointed 45 degrees outward) in his beliefs. Second, he's a family man. It is a known fact that he will own a farm in the mid-west and have at least fourteen children. Rachel is a lucky woman to have found the video chat master to be her husband. Finally, he is a true friend. Whether you're looking for a designated driver, designated third wheel, lifting buddy, or someone to bounce your ideas off of that you know you can trust to tell you how it is, he's the go-to guy. YUUUTTTTTTT!

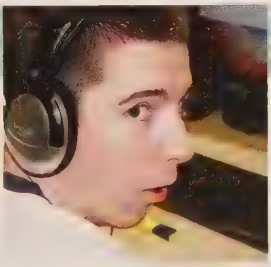
Anthony Broll

Submarines

Defender of the deep, avenger of the abyss, hailing from Toto's homeland – none other than Kansas itself – is a man with many names. Frisbee flinging, board game wielding, he conquered aeronautical engineering with the ease of an unladen swallow's flight. One day he will serve on a stealthy underwater machine, but not until graduate schools salivate over his resume and award him with every degree at their disposal. Dolphins, jealous of his poised grace, will flirt nearby this steely-eyed killer of the deep. He is nimble; he is suave; he is the apex predator of the cerebral realm. A wind, sufficiently chilly with a subtle hint of sweetness, sweeps through DTA on occasion. In its wake one name tenderly and longingly escapes awestruck lips: Tony Broll.

Michael Burgoyne

Navy Pilot

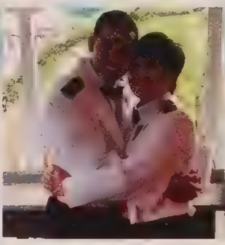


Mike 'Big Swingin' Burgoyne hails from the wintry tundra of Massachusetts and is single handedly responsible for the heavy snow Annapolis has received in our time here. The snow reminds him of home and serves as camouflage. 'Gunny' has a quiet demeanor with a warrior face that would bring a child to tears. Mike has pilot written all over him without the flow and the huge ego. His "Teenage Dream" was to be flying jets over our enemies; dropping warheads on foreheads. He is an expert in pretending to have work to do as he always looks busy, never wants to leave Bancroft and loves standing watch. For instance "Last Friday Night" Mike was "Wide Awake" sitting at his desk with his Plebe issue head phones doing absolutely nothing. I'm not sure he even listens to music. His classmates are certain that he will reach flag officer.

Brandon Carter

Surface Warfare Officer

Brandon "Eaz" Carter, to me you have been a close friend, roommate and a support system for the last 4 years. It is remarkable to see the strides you have taken to get where you are now as a man and future Naval Officer. From Plebe year where you ran things on the basketball court and dealt with the training staff. Then there was Youngster year we first became roommates and began to understand the importance of indulging in a good nap. Then onto 2/c year where you took up a larger leadership role within the brigade and took advantage of the new privileges bestowed upon you. Now in this final year of this journey you continue to impress me with your thirst for knowledge, trustworthiness and focus on maintaining your integrity. I have no reservations in saying that you will be successful in your career as a SWO EDO and all your future endeavors.



Chihsuan Chu

Taiwan Navy

Since Chu's migration to the U.S. she has been a person people like to be around. Her spy stories have become fairly interesting. She likes to tell us how much better Taiwan food is compared to American food, which is very true. Having Chu in my major and having the same sponsor family has been... Interesting. I have learned a lot and complained a lot with her. At the end of the day, she has always been there for me. Especially when we had a project due for our Java class and none of us knew what to do except for her. We will miss you Jugy, good luck in the Taiwanese Navy and all your future accomplishments, we will never forget all of the good times we have shared.

George Davis

Submarines

An interesting being....flammable, yet conspiratorial--oh. hello!... A long lost cousin of Steve jobs, perhaps? Always knows how to finish his homework, that would normally takes hours, in mere seconds--oh. hello!, so to make time for video game adventures? Hello..... Who's that? The purely platonic passion of our persnickety pal George... THE. LONGEST. RUNNING. ALMOST. FIANCEE. EVER. Ms. Adkins/ future-Mrs. Davis-- we salute you... and you don't have to say hello five times after talking with him for 1/2 an hour. And by the way, he doesn't look sad, that's just his thinking face.... most likely thinking of a hot cheesy gordita crunch, which will be consumed in no less than 3 hours. George, go forth and prosper! For within you lies great aptitude! Despite your parking ticket conduct offense.... perhaps the Academy WILL ALWAYS BE AGAINST GEORGE DAVIS! We love ya buddy. Semper deep.

Umberto Fournier

Naval Flight Officer

Umberto D. Fournier was a member of the Second Company during his time at USNA. He was an operations research major and realized this was a mistake by graduating deep in the comma club. A member of the Drum and Bugle Corps for all four years, he played both the Baritone and the Tuba. He was service assigned Naval Flight Officer and is looking forward to his adventures as a "SWO of the Sky". Originally from Oak Park, Michigan; He is a major fan of the Lions, Tigers, Pistons, and Red Wings. Though his time at the academy has been tumultuous, this has not dampened his enthusiasm for service or his eagerness to graduate. Semper Gumby, Umberto is excited for his future career of naval service and the adventures that await him.

James Gimbert

Submarines

Sex, drugs, and rock and roll are what Jimmy Gimbert "almost" loves doing the most, but telling other people not to partake in those activities is what trumps that. The four stripes on his collar made his head bigger than it already was, making the weird half a beard he grows more recognizable. As an ROTC transfer, Jimmy likes to take any opportunity presented to him to remind others of how Virginia Tech Corps of Cadets would have run things better. If you can understand what Gimbert is saying through his unintelligible babble, you would be surprised at how much one man knows about dragons and painting model orcs, yet nothing about how to properly interact with the opposite sex. If you're in DTA on any given weekend, you can find Jimmy empowered by liquid courage, as he socializes with his plethora of "friends" he knows from all 30 companies.

Maressa Guynn

Naval Flight Officer

Born into feudal England, Maressa Guynn was the daughter of two wealthy aristocrats. Spending her days roaming the streets of London with the sons and daughters of other wealthy aristocrats, Guynn discovered a strong penchant for destruction. Word of her carnage had spread quickly and eventually caught the attention of an unnamed man with a thick mustache and an even thicker accent. A strange accent, unknown to the feudal world of England. There was something patriotic about his accent. It screamed power and freedom. And it screamed "Maressa!" As Maressa turned around, her vision was cut off by a thick canvas bag. Next thing Maressa knew, the bag was removed, her vision restored to introduce her to 21st century America. There was witchery flying in the sky, commonly known as airplanes, and so too, Maress wanted to be witch….an American witch.

Austin Heneveld

Navy Pilot

Austin Chosen Won Heneveld is known by very few of his classmates. Most refer to him as "that really pretty guy", "the super handsome one", or "the ghost". His hair is his crowned jewel, and because of this he has been known to disappear for weeks on end in an attempt to avoid his company officer. He doesn't indulge much but when he does, it is a sight to see. After 2 natty lights he can be found either passed out or mumbling nonsense to all of the girls who are throwing themselves at him. One time Chosen decided to push his limits and had 3 natty lights. He jumped off the Severn Bridge because he was told it could not be done but was only to be followed by the beautiful groupies he acquired throughout the night. After commissioning he will be heading down to Pensacola, and will be putting forth his best effort to emulate his idol, Tom Cruise.

Lucas Hoffer

Surface Warfare Officer

Luke is probably the nicest, hardest working guy you'll ever meet. This probably stems from the fact that he is a Golden Retriever puppy in human form. His perfect golden flow and killer smiled remain unruffled and undaunted at all times despite his titanic tangles with the Wild Bill, a ferocious and relentless enemy who's cry of "Tempo!!!" can strike fear into even the bravest heart. His legend continues on in his alter ego, Frank the Tank. The arrival of Frank is almost always preceded by cries of "ARE YOU SERIOUS?" Perhaps Luke's only fault lies in his inability to distinguish bright red soccer balls from a green field. NMSD Proud.

John Jackson

Naval Flight Officer

John Ford Jackson also known to his family as friends as "Papi" or "Naj" was a Midshipman known for his ability to be a walking human version of Wikipedia. The proud Missourian often talks about the late great Harry Truman and his beloved Cardinals to a point of exhaustion for the listener. Most of his nights at the academy consisted of Netflix and avoiding homework, specifically homework assigned from the technical disciplines. John Ford Jackson also loved diet pepsi and coffee almost as much as his Cardinals. Ever since plebe year when Papi heard about the quality of life of a Naval Flight Officer, he knew that NFO was his true calling, especially if that meant he would have the opportunity of hitting the rack at 47,000 feet. Nevertheless, John Ford always worked hard at the disciplines he loved like history, and the Navy will gain a dedicated NFO.

Matthew Jackson

Surface Warfare Officer

Matt Jackson takes pride in being arguably the most indecisive mid in history. Starting as a pitcher, he decided to become a narp first semester second class year. His narpdom lasted a semester when he decided to join the track team. Matt originally wanted to be a history major, but after entering his selection in mids wanted political science. He had his academic advisor put in a request to switch majors only to ask for the request to be ignored. The toughest choice in his Academy career was picking his service selection. His preference throughout the years were SWO, marines, SWO, marines, pilot, SWO, marines, NFO, marines, SWO, pilot, NFO, SWO, NFO, SWO, marines, SWO, NFO, and finally SWO. Ship selection nearly caused him a nervous breakdown.

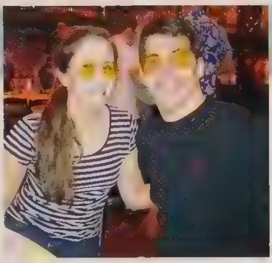
Jackson Jones

Naval Flight Officer

Jackson "Little Bones" Jones! Man, it's been a great time having you as a roomie for the past three years. Starting back from youngster year with the room wrestling to spring break moves in Myrtle Beach to organizing golf sessions or parties for fun. There's never a dull moment though, were always joking and cutting up with the Bang Bang Bucket Gang and you bring that type of personality that keeps everybody laughing unless you get in your feelings, of course. I know there's still plenty of time ahead of us in this life but reflecting back on the MO's we traveled on or basketball we've played or birthdays we've celebrated always lets me know I got a real homie in you. Keep doing it big and listening to R&B but make sure you make it through this Navy NFO pipeline. You're truly a brother to me… but get some new Vans!

Andrew Kinsella

Drew Kinsella, 2nd Company's friendly ghost and fierce adversary of any form of sugar. Like a solar eclipse, seeing Drew in company area was a rare sight, but always yields interesting and profound results. Although he was not around as much as others, Drew never failed to make and impact on the lives of those around him. A true friend, fierce competitor and eloquent speaker, Drew would have made a fine officer had he been given the chance. Destined for success in the civilian world, Drew's charismatic personality and competitive nature will see him go far in the private sector for years to come.



Kitti Kopar

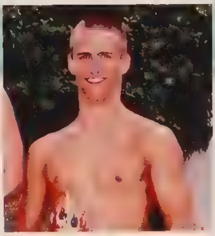
Navy Pilot

Turn down for what! Don't let the name throw you, Kitti is originally from Hungary, but she became an American citizen when she moved to Florida as a child. She now hails from Boca Raton but she avoids the stereotype that is associated with most women from there. As a matter of fact, Kitti is one of the most upbeat people around whose smile can always brighten a room. She is fiercely loyal and she is always willing to give the people that she cares for the benefit of the doubt. When she is not watching one of her many shows on Netflix or diligently doing her math homework, Kitti can be found somewhere with a glass of red wine in her hand or taking a gator nap. Even though she is so humble and grounded in life, Kitti will make an excellent pilot for many years to come.

Soon Kwon

Supply Corps

Soon Boom! We've become really good friends over the years and its really good to know that we can always confide in each other for basically anything. You're a dedicated guy and you care about people as long as you're given the opportunity to. You set records here, taking charge of the food drive will forever be a mark in USNA history. The impact you had was immense and people don't forget those things. I'm glad I had a chance to room with you this last year because regardless of your stubbornness and little feisty attitude at times, you're a fun dude to be around and joke with. Our room never gets boring when we're all in there acting foolish! I'm proud of you for taking on the Supply Corps, I know you'll make the most of it. My brother, stay in touch and know I've always got your back!

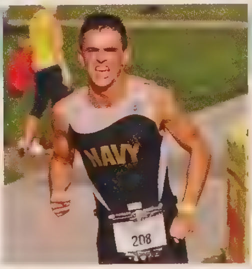


Kyle Lynch

Submarines

Hailing from the Detroit Michigan area, Kyle Lynch is often left out of the loop when his friends discuss their hometown sports team, since Detroit, or Michigan for that matter brings little to the table year after year. Kyle, the mechanical engineer prodigy, has spent his four years at the Academy seizing every opportunity he can, so that he has absolutely no free time. While others may find pleasure in down time every once in a while, Kyle often become flustered when he has no complicated engineering work to do, and will go out of his way to twist mundane situations into catastrophic problems. They say that all work and no play makes a man boring, and Kyle has made this his mantra. When Kyle does compute a way to relax, he enjoys doing so by taking off his shirt and parading around the room, flaunting his skeleton body.

Kirkland Malcolm



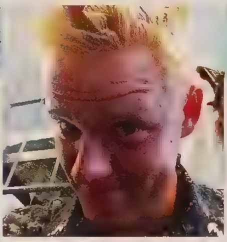
USMC Ground

If you could find him under all of his clutter, you would say Kirk was a pretty clean-cut guy. Speaking of cut, Kirk was a major stud on the Triathalon team for four years. His "bottomless" effort took the team to four Nationals appearances. … and could you say you were team captain after two broken legs?? Not only did Kirk excel at the physical mission at our fine institution, he secretly worked really hard at academics too… doing okay, I guess. Not to worry, his stress never got the best of him in the form of hissy fits. If he worked half as much as he complained, he'd have been well on his way to being the next Commandant. One detractor from Kirk's near-perfect bachelor status is repugnant hobbit feet. If you can get past that though, his winning smile and optimistic personality will captivate your heart for certain.

Andrew Malia

USMC Ground

"Marines don't know how to spell the word defeat." And Drew "Mad Dog" Malia can't spell much at all. The most revered future Marine in our generation, Color Man at Leatherneck and Yut-ivator since he first stepped into his poopy suit… I mean cammies? If you cannot find him in his rack with Green Girl (his blanket) or at his desk watching movies, then he's probably on a ten-mile ruck with his unruly band of IST brothers. Despite his crusty and sarcastic exterior, Drew has the heart of a lion and the cuteness of a kitten. Drew is loved and adored by all his peers, and even in the face of alcohol, he remains an officer and a gentleman. Chesty will make a great Marine, and the Marines that he will serve with are truly lucky to have him.



Kirby Mansberger

USMC Pilot

While walking in King Hall, something catches your eye. It's a yellow flash that appears for just a split second, but that's enough to know… it's Kirby Mansberger… or is it his twin? Easy going and afraid to death of allowing anyone to pay for their own drink, the Mansburglar is as reliable as they come, even when his digestive system isn't. After getting off to a great start at the academy, relentless assaults by EM315 and our resident North Korean spy began taking their toll on his career and health. Despairing of hope yet in the prime of his firstie year, he finally defected to solitary confinement in 4th company spaces. Although he left behind everyone who ever loved him, Kirby was, is, and always will be a prized member of SECOND COMPANY and the nicest guy you could ever meet.

Montana Marsh

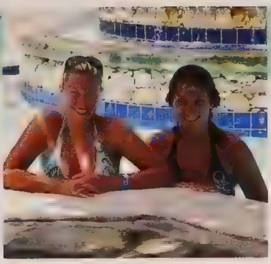
Navy Pilot

For Montana Marsh the four years at the Academy have been a walk in the park, but then again what English major hasn't sailed through USNA. Although this Texas, NRA supporting, midshipman may appear rugged on the outside, beneath his carefully quaffed hair lays a man who enjoys softer things such as writing poems late into the night and ironing his t-shirts. Equipped with a vocabulary that would rival any Ph.d. English professor, Montana is known for his silver tongue, which he uses to seduce the ladies… for about a week or two before things break off rather roughly. It's not his height issue that usually ruins relationships, Tom Cruise has already proven any man of meager stature can be Top Gun material, but more of his Texas personality. Constantly sour from the Dallas Cowboy's disgusting performances Montana may be hard to stomach between the weeks of September to December.

Timothy McHale

Navy Pilot

Tim McHale is 2nd Company's favorite ginger. After spending years trying to obtain his appointment to the Academy, he worked hard to receive a flight contract. After a near breakdown waiting to hear if he was selected to fly, Tim's hard work paid off with his selection to be a pilot.

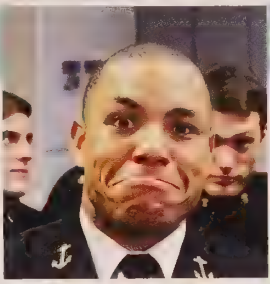


Ashley Miller

Surface Warfare Officer

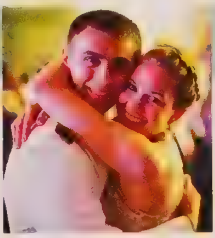
The granddaughter of a Vogue model, Ashley Marie Miller is classic like Hepburn—with an edge. She has been known to outrun track stars while wearing six inch stilettos. She effortlessly makes mess dress and blue rims look good. She can speak flawless sarcasm in English and Italian. She is was a swimmer and was a leading stroke on College Creek for the Navy Crew Team. She is incredibly strong. Ashley has the ability to light up a room with her smile and her laugh. She is a loyal friend who can always be counted on to listen and to offer encouragement. Or wisdom when it is needed most. Perhaps more than anything, Ashley loves her family and her friends in a way that is admirable and very telling of how big her heart is. She is a wellspring of strength for the people she loves. Here's to you, Ashley Marie Montague!

Derrick Petett



Navy Pilot

Wif Derrick, nothing is small. Could you find a bigger smile? Or heart? Or arms, or legs, or any muscle on a regular human being? We love you big D, even though your curly black hairs spontaneously materialize EVERYWHERE. Psst, Katie: post-workout + no shoes + red blanket + sleep smell = olfactory overload! You will never again see such a large black man melt at the sight of puppies. Fly high friend, if the plane has enough lift to take off with you in it! But remember: you've got to land sometime, because this is where the food is. Congratulations on such a great firstie track season, and for finding somebody who stuck with you for the last FOUR YEARS! We love ya buddy. Enjoy your mawwage, and many little Derricks!

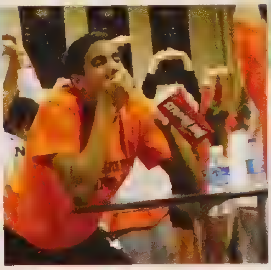


Jonathan Powell

USMC Ground

Jon Powell is your ultimate midshipman. He drinks, sleeps, eats, and works out under the code laid forth by the all-mighty MIDREGS, except when he does what he wants. Upon meeting this Devil Dog, you will immediately recognize the Napoleon complex he has for his North Dakotan heritage, so don't insult "the greatest state in the Union." You may also pick up on his lack of tact and crude behavior, but Jon is more interested in being good than just looking good. Jon is incredibly motivated by hard work, America, and of course, MQS. He is a trainer at heart and although he puts up a cynical façade, he will most definitely miss USNA in the years to come. However, his lasting question for everyone is "why are you??"

David Principato



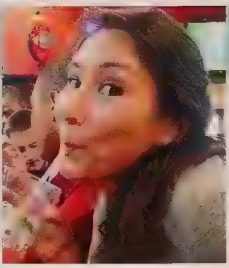
Navy Pilot

David, DJ, Principato loves the darker side. He definitely prefers chocolate over vanilla. In fact, he once spent three consecutive weekends eating chocolate. When he is not walking on his tip-toes and prancing around the pool deck as a diver, DJ likes to give away drinks that were bought for him on his birthday. A random stranger appears..."oh here, have this Guinness my friend just bought me for my 21st birthday." I guess two beers was enough for him to almost blackout anyways. Besides having his head up his rear end all the time, DJ likes to act clueless, play dumb, and never know what's going on. Overall though, David is a genuine guy who is very respectful and not afraid to be honest and speak his mind. NMSD proud.

Christina Pung

Surface Warfare Officer

The best fellow yellow a roommate could ask for! She is a knitting fend. She is sweet and is always ready for a movie or latest soap opera drama. This girl is a smartie but requires an abnormal amount of sleep. You can catch her in her natural habitat, a remote location in a higher altitude...her rack. She will only rise from her slumber when she suddenly has an intense urge to go on a knitting frenzy. After, she will resume to her natural state of hibernation. This sleeping beauty is storing up her energy for her successful nuke ego Swo mama life. She is on to big and bright things... Knowing that God will always provide exactly what she needs! Love you Christina! Love roomie!



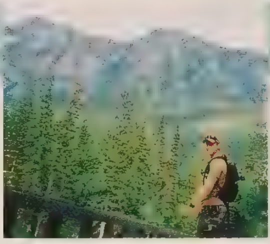
Sabrina Reyes

Submarines

Sabrina is a mysterious creature hailing from the great American city of Brownsville… Where is that again? Mexico? She is a passionate learner and overall achiever, so much so that she is always willing to sacrifice sleep, fun activities, friendships, happiness and anything else slightly more enjoyable than the Rwandan Genocide. Throughout her time here she ranked among the top in her class and was never afraid to complain about the success of those ahead of her. Sabrina never let her emotions get the best of her, especially in the face of ridicule, bad jokes, or a worse test grade. Sabrina is a punctual individual who never fails to miss an important event, especially not the most important brief of youngster year when she may have been in charge of accountability for her platoon. Her success will be immeasurable in the years to come and her happiness… nonexistent.

Matthew Riloff

USMC Ground



Matt "Diva" "The Man" Riloff hails from the city of brotherly love so it is no surprise that he epitomizes the warrior spirit. He is timeless and inspiring. When he isn't working on his spring break muscles, he can found in his room improving his workout plan, swimming with the illustrious Noon-Meal Swim Team, in a Control Systems lab designing better ways to defend freedom and Democracy, or just complaining about being an engineer. He would be comfortable on the ancient battlefield of Thermopylae next to Leonidas and the Spartans or doing crossfit in MacD…but probably more comfortable with the Spartans as they had no clocks...you know the saying, "If you're important enough, they'll wait for you." The Navy couldn't handle this behemoth of manliness, nor his mountains of breasts...I mean chest. However, the Marine Corps surely was glad to have such a man! We love you brother.

Remington Roth

Submarines

Rem is a disc catching, rifle toting, infinity counting American! He follows in the long line of Virginians that have made America great: George Washington, James Madison, Thomas Jefferson, Robert E. Lee, Ella Fitzgerald, Sandra Bullock and now Remington Roth. He can throw Frisbees farther than the eyes can see, kill a moving deer with a pistol, prove the existence of the number one, and master the slippery northern pike. He has hiked up and down the Appalachians listening to the world and speaking with the wild. A new adventure beckons him now to the deep oceans, nuclear reactors and submarines. He will leave behind a legion of friends that are too numerous to count while he ventures to the ends of the Earth to keep our nation safe. No matter where the seas may take him though, he will never walk alone and will always find success.

Benjamin Sampson

Surface Warfare Officer

The daily life of Ben Sampson is a coaster of highs and lows, self-induced from his own poor diet of strictly Nutella. When he isn't hitting the books, which is more often than not, he can be found passionately involved in his other hobbies, sleeping and watching Netflix. Unfortunately, the life of a Navy lacrosse stud such as Ben Sampson does demand some time away from the computer screen and pillow. Prior to lax practice, Sampson likes to take anywhere from 30-45 minutes to ensure that his hair looks as out of regs as possible, as to give off the traditional bad boy / chill vides. He then will pump himself up with some pre-workout jams, including the best of Dido or Norah Jones, the sadder the better. Sampson will head to the fleet looking to float between the ships with the most comfortable beds and highest supply of snacks.

Nicholas Szczepaniak

Navy Pilot

Nic Szczepaniak is the most anonymous member of 2nd Company. Known only to his classmates and certain members of class of 2015, Nic managed to go on a semester abroad without anyone noticing. Little is known about his life even to his closest friends. His love of vodka and everything Russian has convinced some people he is actually a spy. Adding to the suspicion is his hatred for everything popular. He has been known to frequently stop listening to musicians as soon as anyone else mentions them due to their selling out. His love of fighting causes some to believe he would have been happier as a marine instead of a pilot, but that would have required him to exert too much effort.

Brendan Walsh

Submarines

If you were to trace Brendan Walsh's wardrobe over his four years at the Naval Academy, you would find that he ended up right where he started—in Air Jordans and a tank top with an iron-on Bruce Springsteen face. But Walsh's "threads" hardly scratch the surface of this tough but tender man. As a boy the doctors all said his Irish skin was too pale to venture further south than the Jersey Turnpike, but his heart and quick wit proved them wrong. When he isn't ripping the egos of all his friends to shreds via memes or cartoons, Walsh can be found sculpting his velvety chest and ghetto booty in Mac-D or lavishing "Franny" with unreciprocated gifts. Walsh will surely provide perfectly timed comic relief to some lucky wardroom 20,000 leagues under the surface, while keeping his family, friends, and Francesca at the top of his Facebook feed.

Daphne White

Daphne White
Protocol

Surface Warfare Officer

Daphne Rose White was born in California and grew up in Boulder, Colorado. Daphne attended the University of Colorado for one year and was a member of the Army ROTC unit there. Spurning concerted recruiting efforts by West Point, Daphne chose Navy. Daphne ran Varsity Track and served as the Curriculum Officer for the USNA Leadership Conference. Perhaps most significantly, Daphne was the best Protocol Officer in the history of the position. Always the graceful young lady, Daphne leads by example and inspires her peers with her unceasing positivity. A loving friend with a gentle spirit, Daphne is admired throughout the Brigade. Her distinguished legacy will surely follow her into the Fleet. Fair winds and following seas, Daphne! "For I know the plans I have for you," declares the Lord, "plans to prosper you and not to harm you, plans to give you hope and a future." - Jeremiah 29:11

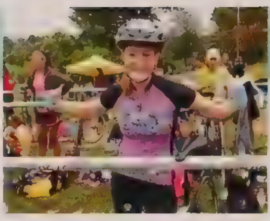
Carolyn Adkins



Submarines

Carolyn Adkins the pseudo ginger has been a motivator from day one. She is well known for her kindness, great advice, good listening ear, and incredible lung capacity. Known her plebe year as the deafening cripple, echoes of Carolyn's sound off still reverberate though the halls today. But sounding off was just the beginning of Carolyn's vocal experiences! As an active member of glee club Carolyn traveled all over sharing her beautiful singing faces with the world!!! Excelling in everything was Carolyn's forte! She killed her school work, trained plebes to the point of retaliation, obtained a coveted VGEP position, and forsook the sun in favor of a radioactive tube that travels underwater. We are all blessed to be able to call you a friend and wish you the best in everything you do. Good luck to both you and your soulless sidekick!

Lauren Allam

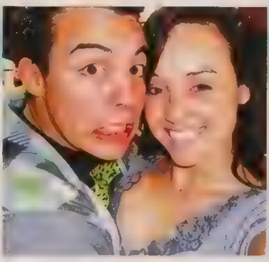
USMC Ground

From the halls of Bancroft, To the shores of Severn Sea; We'd like to say that Lauren is a motivated individual, but it still surprises many that she decided to join the Corps. Those who know her, though, know that she was "hypnotized" into the belief that becoming a devil pup was the right choice for her. Her aggression made her seem perfect for the Marines, even going to the extent of throwing off the door to her room second class year…yes, literally threw it off. Just ask the plebes. HULK SMASH! In addition, her lack of emotions could come across as heartless, when in fact she cared deeply about her people. No one ever had to wonder about where she was, it was always the gym throwing heavy things. #getswol #YOLO. In reality, there is not a more perfect community, especially since they keep peanut butter in MREs.

Robert Andon

Navy Pilot

A proud Texas native, in his four years at the Academy Rob has consistently challenged himself and has excelled in every way. Whether in the robot lab as a systems engineer, at the anchor ringing the bell as Brigade XO, or flying into the danger zone at Lee Airport, Rob has accomplished everything he has set his mind to and more. Rob's closest friends nicknamed him CCR, which serves as a testament to his never-ending, sometimes overflowing pool of energy and motivation which has served him well here. His ambition and drive have led him to succeed in many ways in his time here as a Midshipman, and these traits of his will take him very far in the fleet. The naval aviation community is very lucky that "lil" Rob decided to join their ranks as he will undoubtedly go on to do big things as a pilot.



David Azhocar

Submarines

For those wandering souls out there, one need look no further for a truer companion than David Azhocar. During his time at the United States Naval Academy he developed into a highly intelligent, competent, and compassionate leader of men and women. During his off hours he was often found dissecting Oreos or purchasing more Lemon Pledge. Any conversation that was started with David, eventually ended up with the mentioning of his better half Taylor. Many have questioned how such a beautiful and charming girl like Taylor ended up with a guy like David. Upon an interview with Taylor she divulged that after many monetary bribes and a court ordered restraining order, she finally gave in to David's unyielding determination. It is without doubt that David will be a fine naval officer and have a great impact on naval service

Brittany Bly

Supply Corps

"Protein doesn't make you huge, cupcakes and laziness does"-Brit Bly. No cupcakes for her, but she is a French fry fanatic. But if you lifted like she did, you'd earn your fries too. This bodacious blonde babe can be seen crushing it in the gym or on a disgustingly cute date with her fiancé. Brit is as sweet as her favorite Caramel White Mocha. She's a 4 year veteran of the Navy Cheerleading Team, the star dancer on the sidelines, and served as team captain Firstie year. She created all new dances once she took reign and her legacy will live on every time D&B plays. She would bend over backwards for any of her girls and will be remembered best by her history of bar fights, randomly breaking down and dancing, and her ability to make a whole room of people uncomfortable with her sense of humor. #SemperClassy #SemperCheer

Jeffrey Canclini

USMC Ground

J.D. "Call me Jeffrey" Canclini hails from a little-known place called Texas. His fervor for his home state and his well-intentioned buffoonery during Plebe Summer brought a smile and a light heart to the whole class during our most stressful times. He was notably absent firstie year as he studied abroad at some mythical place he called "Chill-ay." He returned in time to serve as Company Ops and plan events to further cement the company and ensure that our last year here was our best yet. The cause of much laughter and happiness and e-mails, J.D. has a heart the size of his home state and his analytical mind will be a great asset to the U.S. Marine Corps. Crack a Shiner when you get home and remember all the great times and the friends at USNA, J.D!

Andrew Cooper

Navy Pilot

Andrew Cooper is the kind of person who will never say hello to you until you get it on the red line overload; "You never know what you can do until you get up as high as you can go," He always says. He takes on any task pushing it to the limit, walking along the razor's edge and keeping his head up until he is finished. He always fights until the end because one day, his life may depend on it, relying on the strength he has inside himself. He's a true friend and comrade; when he goes out he wants to be the man who goes along with you, willing to walk a thousand miles just to fall down at your door.

Lindsey Darling

Surface Warfare Officer

Lindsey hails from Buffalo, NY, and is the definition of "good things come in small packages." Her spunky, fun-loving attitude and mental encyclopedia of Girl Scout songs, reptilian facts, and plant knowledge never cease to amaze us. On a typical Navy day, Lindsey can be found fencing, sailing, de-seeding pomegranates for a hungry classmate, or telling her roomies creative bedtime stories. She will humbly tell you that she "tries" or "does her best" but we all know that her best is consistently fantastic. She excelled in her role as Plebe Summer Platoon CDR and came full circle from her own plebe year (toodleoo missed parades!), inspiring her plebes with her drill and cloud formation lessons. USS Iwo Jima is extremely lucky to be gaining Ms. Darling (Ma'am!) and we can't wait to plan a reunion on her future cranberry farm after our Navy days are through. Good luck <3

Kevin Deese

Submarines

The struggle is real

Kevin Deese: true Renaissance man. As far as fine arts go, his arts are the finest. His voice is so heavenly that when he sings, broken glass reforms into beautiful crystal wine glasses. His dance moves are so revolutionary that when he moves, even blind men can't help but smile. He could drink you under the table, but he'd rather stand on top of it and make a scene. He has traveled far and wide, including such havens as Western Kentucky, Detroit, and Portland (the Maine one). A real friend, he once convinced some idiots not to throw a rock through the window of a nearby rude fraternity. Good call, Kevin. The man is simply unforgettable. If you haven't met him, haze yourself. If you'd like to meet him, get in line. Not even the long thick hull of a submarine and 20,000 leagues of sea will suppress his exuberance.

Samuel Eby

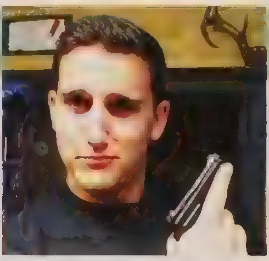
Navy Pilot

A Towson native, Skeebs drove about 45 minutes to arrive at the front steps of the Academy bright eyed and bushy tailed. With his cooler than ice attitude, duck boots, and 'endless summer' tees, it was evident that Sam was Lax Bro by day and scholar by night. Initially looking for a challenge at the Academy, Sam endeavored to be a Mechanical Engineer and D-1 Lacrosse player. An early morning person, Sam sought a bigger challenge as a General Engineering and Fieldball Player. Several naps later, Sam woke up and was selected to be a Flyboy. From adventures in Chestertown to helping at school, Sam embodies selflessness, calmness, and competence in all that he does. He has been a tremendous influence on those who interact with him, has become our best friend, and will be an invaluable asset to the Aviation Community.

Daniel Fisher

Navy Pilot

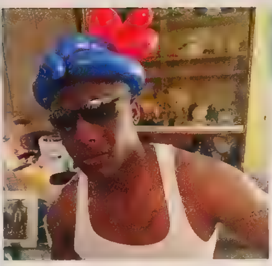
His lineage can be traced back to the very bloodline of Achilles. He has never been bested in physical combat, save by a hotel room wall. He has astounded many heads of state, foreign dignitaries, and fair maidens with his charisma, showmanship, luminous smile, and charming wit. Many have said that he is the personification of Christian Grey. Crowds trek the four corners of the earth to gaze upon his marble hewn visage. He is a seeker of serenity, a humble lord of rapscallions. A true bastion of wine, women, and song, he will soar with the eagles as he takes his place amongst the great naval aviators of our time. Without further gilding the lily, the denizens of United States Navy, the United States of America, and the world over are all blessed to know and love the one and only, Sir Daniel "Godfrey" Fisher.



Christian Freudenberger

Surface Warfare Officer

Any sailor would be blessed to have Christian in their wardroom, as their leader, or as their friend. He is a spiritual being whose moral fortitude is unquestioned by his peers. When Christian stepped out of his room his hair was styled and looking sharp, even before signing TAPS in his signature robe and sandals. Coffee, comfort, and television were essential to Christian's day; he considered himself an expert in these fields. He always worked hard to ensure he got his fair share of the bandwidth, sometimes getting up early to get a few shows in before class. His clever and hilarious comments were so impressive that they could only be rivaled by his uncontrollable perspiration. Anyone who has been so privileged to meet Christian has been touched by his kindness and his charisma. The Navy will surely prosper from his personal integrity and commitment to serving others



Dwayne Gammage

"There is no chance, no destiny, no fate that can hinder or control the firm resolve of a determined soul" - Ella wheeler Wilcox

David Hansen

USMC Pilot

Lauren Hendrix

USMC Pilot

We're not sure if Lauren was ever small, but as a devil pup she dreamed of being in a Naval flight suit and flying the fastest plane possible. As youngster year came to an end her attitude did a 180 and she became a super trainer. Now Marine Corps motivated she will join her roommate sweetheart at TBS with the homesick memories of Bancroft Hall. Our room was known for yelling, mostly her name, because she could never hear us over her unwavering concentration on the latest Disney movie. She thinks of herself as having a lot of brothers, and her lack of emotions are what keep them in the friend-zone. Te-crap-attitude she has always been a constant comfort to those around her. Yut rah kill semper-fi devil dogs.he only two girls she could sometimes tolerate were her roommates, but despite her don't-tak

Brittany Henley

Surface Warfare Officer

Brittany Henley is truly one of the best friends and sea warriors anyone could have the gift of knowing. A true SWOtivator from day one, she has prepared for her DDG debut by completing charts in hotel hallways and spitting out superfluous nautical jargon at every possible moment —"LOOK! BITS!" She'd be 100% content if she could have a flock of buff orpingtons in her apartment and a great view of a certain firstie's posterior. Between walnut fights, spearing oranges with epees, and barefoot dashes on 4th deck, it's a wonder this wild child stayed out of trouble. Then came the parking incident of 2013—lesson learned, don't help out school kids in your spare time! Joking aside, Brittany would drop everything just to listen, console, and mutually hate by obligation. Nothing can stop this powerhouse of a woman! GOOD LUCK, you wacky, weird, and incredibly wonderful chicken-lover you!

Maximiliano Herrera

Submarines

Who is this guy? Basically the most awesome person in the entire deck of fourth. Maximiliano Alejandro-Adam-Andrew-Antonio Herrera, more commonly referred to as 'Max' or Daddy Yankee is a man whose late curiosity with hair length has produced the most gorgeous head of hair that Poseidon has ever graced us with. His impeccable ability to accurately introspect has given him a strong sense of personal honor and an even stronger conscience. This has produced a very strong leadership style characterized by compassion and a stern enforcement of standards.

Xavier Jimenez

Navy Pilot

Legen - wait for it. I've been told that I am the life and soul of a party. Maybe it's because I'm a DJ, or maybe it's because I'm a smooth talker. Sometimes my good looks and charm get me into more trouble than they are worth, but #TurnDownForWhat?! I'm the perfect balance of crazy, creative, and determined. I never give up a challenge and I always go to infinity and beyond. That's probably why I'm serving as a pilot in the US Navy. In the end, how would I describe myself? –dary.

Marshall Liu

Submarines

Impeccably dressed and suavely sophisticated, Marshall Liu can be found reading in a local coffeeshop or cruising in his fly, gas-guzzling Mustang. He'll either be listening to elevator jazz or hardcore dubstep, but either way he is bound to have perfectly-gelled hair. He has a taste for the finer things in life, and can always be counted on to invest in the best of the best. And then to get it tailored. Among many accomplishments, he finished the Ram's Head Beer Challenge in under six months. Destined to cruise the skies at Mach speeds, Marshall is many things besides a pilot. He's a barista and a fashionista; he's a sailor and a serial napper. And if you're looking to smoke a cigar, contemplate the night sky, and figure out how to solve the world's problems... well there's no better companion. Cheers buddy, let's put this place in the rear view mirror.

Joseph Locksmith

USMC Ground

"Keep cool, never freeze."

Alexes Lopez De Arriaga-Shaw

Naval Flight Officer

"Lopez-Shaw? Isn't she in fourth company?" Either way, Alexes will graduate from the herd leaving a legacy by taking on the final semester role of big-bad Train-O. Not even able to pronounce her own last name correctly herself, she ensured that 3 generations of third company plebes knew exactly how to pronounce (or butcher) the entire thing at all times. Best known for her bow-ties, love of glee, and mean-mugging face in the p-ways. Her favorite past time was by far sleeping, even known to be found passed on the floor of her room because her rack was "just too far". All jokes aside, she was the most loyal and true of friends and the NFO community has a true warrior joining their ranks. We just hope she can survive without her room moms, company moms, and team moms to keep her from taking her pants off in public.

Michael Madrid

Surface Warfare Officer

Being the world's most photogenic man, as evident in his Facebook profile pictures, Michael deserves nothing less than the world. His especially witty remarks and spotless room etiquette propelled himself into the very top ranks of the very top people. This man is destined, I say, for greatness. Despite all his omnipotence, Michael maintains a sense of humility and friendliness. Need to go somewhere in life? Mr. Madridaroo is your ship to Madrid. If you ever see him in a port, don't be afraid to drop by and say hi! He may seem as intimidating as a pair of police cuffs, but he can assure you he's nothing but sunshine and smiles.

Awad Mohamed

Medical Corps

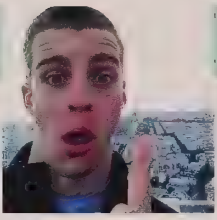
Awad Mohamed started from the bottom, now he's here. He is overworked and underpaid, but his dedication and perseverance will all be worth it someday when he is rich and famous. His capacity to memorize information is so impressive that he could rival a healthy Steven Hawking. He once got a B on a test, just to see what it felt like. His genius is only slightly sullied by his dark side; the side that hopped the wall and mouthed off to faculty, the side that led to substantial occupancy on the restriction roster. But what more could anyone request from a naval officer, nay, a man, than that he have unmatched brain power yet personify a loose cannon? He is a man befitting of his medical billet and acceptance to medical school. I'll be first in line for an examination, Doc.

Tyler Mulloy

Explosive Ordnance Disposal

When Tyler Mulloy comes to mind the word that follows is Red. Big Meech is a fun lovin, hard workin, never stop talkin machine. No man on this earth has dropped more one line movie quotes in a single conversation than this ginger. He is the type of guy who you can absolutely count on to hit the bars hard with you on a Friday night and on Saturday morning he's kicking your butt on run or lift to make you better. He has never had a bad day in his life and his constant grin is a testament to that. He is the type of guy you want standing next to you in every situation except for when you are trying to sleep and he sounds like a grizzly bear starting a chainsaw. His staunch values have led him to an EOD service selection where he will continue to succeed.

Andrew Nesselroade



Submarines

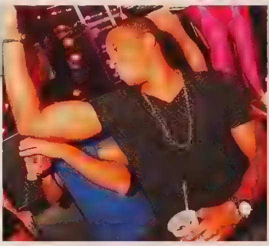
Voted "Most Likely to Be Driving a Mini-Van Full of His Own Children in 10 Years", Andrew Nesselroade (a.k.a The Roade Warrior) hails from Wilmington, NC, which he refuses to let anyone forget. It's been a long road since his days of high school football and BCG-wearing Plebedom, but Andrew's outstanding academic and leadership abilities culminated in his service as Company Commander in the Fall Semester of Firstie Year. Andrew managed to haul the 3rd Company from dead last in the Brigade to 9th in a few short months while still finding time to write 30 pages of research notes for 3 page papers that are due in four month. An outstanding CC and an even better friend, we all hope Andrew will stay close during the six months a year he has above water. Semper deep, brother!

David Ochy

Foreign National, Panama

David Ochy is one baby faced, hairy chested Panamanian you will never forget. You can hear his loud Spanish-speaking voice from a mile away, and can smell his top of the line cologne coming from two! David can often be found at Firstie club pounding back beers, partying with high ranked foreign ambassadors, smoking cigars, and on some rare occasions studying ocean engineering in Rickover. He's a great friend to most and a brother to all. He's always willing to help someone with homework or welcoming others into his Panamanian fortress for unexpected vacations. David will best be remembered by his love for CHOCOLATE, his snoring, mispronouncing "sheet, chit, and $#&%" as well as his remarkable ability to SING any popular song in English, yet somehow can't speak a word of it! David will be incredibly missed when he leaves for Panama to complete his Masters-He's Gone, but not forgotten!

John Parks



Surface Warfare Officer

John's 1000-watt smile and carefree attitude have been his trademark at USNA ever since he backflipped his way to the Academy from Tampa, Florida. JP3's freaky repertoire of talents (handstands, pull-ups, spinning valuable objects on his fingers, music production, dancing, and making/spending outlandish amounts of money) led to his capturing of the title of "Most Likely to Win Any Talent Show" and have made him the life of parties, colleges, and clubs up and down the eastern seaboard. Speaking of the sea, John will be taking his endless skillset to the surface warfare community after graduation and bringing his easygoing nature and charisma to the surface fleet. I imagine he'll also find time to acquire a few more watches and make a few world-famous beats along the way. We'll miss you, Johnny! Don't forget to stay remember your old roomies when you're famous!

Audrey Petro

Surface Warfare Officer

Audrey was chosen to be the first Plebe Company Commander for our class, and she has rode that power trip all the way to graduation. Greek mythology speaks of a creature called a Petro. It is a small and quiet creature that scampers up to those with great potential for leadership and greatness. A Petro is then able to use what it learns to become even better than the people it began following. The creature's only weakness is its shoulders, which are narrow, feminine, and prone to failure. Audrey is definitely a Petro who will learn from others, and soar to levels of command not attainable by most others. As a midshipman Audrey easily maintained the respect of her peers for her dedicated work-ethic and personal integrity. Audrey Petro can be trusted to uphold the highest standards of leadership and will continue to achieve excellence in the Fleet.

Matthew Piotrowicz

USMC Pilot

Matt Piotrowicz, aka Peaches, is a man of few words with a vastly receding hairline. He is a fun loving, hard-charging SOB. During his time here he was the heart and soul of the Navy Sprint Football team. The memories of many hours of cutting weight, early morning 4th quarters, Sprint Football games and trips to Atlantic City is what made him the man he is today. If he wasn't in Wes Brown working on his biceps, or out on the football field setting Spring Football tackle records, you could find him fist pumping the night away at Acme or spending a good chunk of his loan at the O'Callahan hotel. His great attitude and selfless devotion to his friends and his teammates is a testament to his future success as a Marine Corps Officer.

Ramiro Robles

USMC Ground

Ramiro Robles, aka Machete, is a future bartender, oops we mean bar owner, who loves nothing more than his boys, beers, and babes and remains one of the only Mexicans who came to the US by plane. Although the biggest softie you have ever met, Roberto can be the hardest worker in the world when he wants to be which was evident in his transformation from a chubby Chicago street thug to a lean mean sprint football playing boxer who loves his Sperry's and pastels . He will always be remembered for using anything as a urinal, whether in Miami, West Virginia or Baltimore, but will never be forgotten for his supposed sports knowledge, and love and compassion for Chicago, his family and friends and commitment to the country. Never forget the profits are in the margins, and you can front load all of the work.

Andrew Roche

SEALs

Roche is often heard before seen with one of the loudest and most contagious laughs. Anyone who has ever seen him dance can attest to the fact that it was the most remarkable show of sexuality and violence. Girls have actually paid for his dance services at private parties, honest to God. He has grinded more dance floors to submission than majors he's had at the academy, which is a lot. He might hold the record for most number of majors, and classes failed in different majors by any midshipman. He has licked whipped cream off of his friends face. He has a fetish for sticking objects into his overly large belly button, which he calls his docking station. He is not going to be your typical officer, but I think that's what's going to make him the best. Good luck at BUD/s, we'll be there with you.

Austin Taylor

Submarines

People travel far and wide to catch a glimpse of Austin's ability to solve problems, repair complex electronics, be old, tutor, and play the occasional video game. For those that have had class with Austin, they know him as the guy that ruined the grading curve without the use of an equation sheet. Despite all the time he spent disproving Einstein's theories, Austin still found time to set the perfect example as a leader and mentor. His ability to confront even the most difficult of situations and be honest about everything were only a few of the many of his flawless leadership qualities that he displayed every day. Austin has shown that he has limitless potential as a leader and will always be known as one of the smartest people to join Hyman Rickover's Elite Submarine Force.

Patrick Taylor

Surface Warfare Officer

On I-Day I got the opportunity to meet Pat first when he asked in his very thick and exotic Boston accent "Yo dood whars tha barrawl, and have you seen a bubbla im paached?" I had never been exposed to foreigners such as this hardcore Bostonian and soon realized that he meant "hey man where is the trashcan and have you located the water fountain because I am thirsty?" Beyond the jokes Patrick Taylor has been hands down one of the best friends, midshipman, and brother that a person could ask for. The passion he has for watching tv and talking to himself about Boston sports is unmatched. That passion does carry over though to the love he shows towards his two sisters, his wonderful parents, and great girlfriend. At the end of the day this very illiterate math genius is going to dominate the SWO community and all things in life.

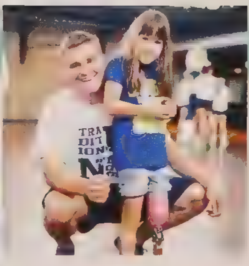
Ian Weston

Navy Pilot

Many were unaware that during his time at the Academy, Ian moonlighted at medical schools modeling his superior physique for students studying the vascular system. If there is one thing women love it is a vascular man. Everyone knew that if old Westi-Boi wasn't in MAC-D he was sitting in his room watching cat videos. Despite his dedication to his massive physique, 1/C Weston still found the time to be an outstanding mentor for the underclass as well as a great friend and roommate. As a leader he displayed traits of compassion, confidence, and competence in all he did. His future as a Naval Aviator is a bright one.

Jonathan Wev

Surface Warfare Officer



Jared Wilson

Submarines

If you travel into Dahlgren Hall during the twilight hours you can study Jared Wilson in his natural habitat, upon the cheering mats. There was a lot of controversy among his friends and loved ones when Jared made the decision to become a male cheerleader, but through sweat, tears, blood, tears, spirit, tears, and a little bit of eyeliner Jared was able to prove to his friends that he is a strong enough man to look great and throw women around a field in the middle of the day. If a boy band wasn't playing, he could be caught rocking out to Tim McGraw or Eric Church. Overall, Jared was the best roommate and friend a midshipmen could ask for. His hard work and dedication will allow him to be successful in anything he attempts. His future sailors are lucky to be getting such a fantastic leader.

Paul Zimmerman

USMC Ground

Paul Zimmerman aka Farm boy aka the dog whisperer hails from upstate New York, even though everyone knows that it is really just baby Canada. When he is not reminiscing about his days in the Girl Scout hockey league he is complaining about papers or saying he has no time while he plays NHL14. He is a true patriot, avid hunter, and lion hearted American, but at first sight one would see this small boy as a record collecting hipster. Despite his large framed lenseless glasses Paul is a beast mode athlete who shows his skills on the LAX field as well as in his scores on every USMC test imaginable. His prowess does not end in athletics; Pauly Z is an ACME enthusiast who can drink any girl under the table. Honestly the man is true born leader who has made everyone who comes in contact with him better.

Adam Magness

USMC Ground

After doing a year of ROTC at Miami of Ohio, Adam came to the Academy and immediately stood out from his classmates with his motivation and leadership ability. Although he initially wanted to return to Ohio, he stuck with it which is a decision that he may still question but one that his friends and company mates are definitely thankful for. Adam devoted much of his free time to hiking, youtube videos, and boxing. However, his boxing career came to an end once he decided to dedicate himself to a higher calling: his rack. Always one to make sure his opinion was known, both Adam's level of self-confidence and storytelling abilities are unmatched by any of his peers. These traits served him well as Company XO, and will undoubtedly serve him well as a 2nd Lieutenant. The Marines will never be the same once he joins their ranks after graduation.

Carlos Alvarez

Surface Warfare Officer

Carlos the Sloth. He has long loping arms that straddle his natural habitat, his rack. He also loves the gym. After a good pump he screams, "I'M MASSIVE, AHHHHHH, I'M MASSSSSIVE," as he looks at himself in the mirror. He runs like... a sloth, which means not at all. He just wants all the things put on top of him, while wearing a fast shirt, and drinking water from his red. He mains Marth, just the tip though. He'll dolphin slash, swords dance, and forward smash to his final destination... the club, where he'll dance the night away. EDM, Indie, and highschool angst are his tunes. The hangers in his closet will forever be in his heart. Call him Carlito, Carl, Emillio, but his name definitely isn't Rick. He'll serve aboard LCS 2 Independence, where he'll conn whilst chilling like a villain. He's a great friend and a great sloth.

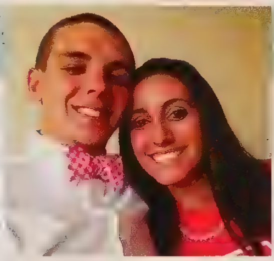
Thorben Brackmann

Exchange Student

Jarrett Brant

USMC Ground

Jarrett Brant was born on January 28th, 1992 in Klamath Falls, Oregon. As testament to his drive at a very early age, Jarrett would later become an Eagle Scout. During high school he played football and soccer on the varsity squads. He was a Quantitative Economics major at USNA. Amidst plebe year, he tried out for the Navy Sprint Football team and made the roster for the next fall. He played defensive end for the team all the way through his first class year. During his 1/C summer, Jarrett dominated Leatherneck aboard Marine Corps Base Quantico. As a result, Jarrett was selected to serve as a Marine Corps ground officer upon graduation. His hobbies include hunting, fishing, snowboarding, wake-boarding, shooting, and working out. His parents are Jeff and Kris Brant. He has a twin sister, Jessie Brant, and a little brother, Kamron Brant, who both attend Oregon State University



Joshua Chester

Navy Pilot

Joshua Morgan Chester is often compared to such great men as Chesty Puller, Brad Pitt, Tim McGraw, and every X Games athlete...if you talk to his girlfriend and now fiance of 13.14257 years, Lauren Bonachoochoo. His specialties include selfies, poorly singing, pretending to be from the South, and purchasing extreme spots gear. When asked what he wants to do when he grows up, he replied, "Dude, like I want to shred as a fighter pilot with a foxy hot wife and watch Pretty Little Liars with her every night, y'all!" Josh Chester-forever loved by all including his roommates.

Daniel Claus

Submarines

Old man Dan was born and raised on the frigid, snow covered rivers of Pulaski, NY. Widely known by all the other fishermen as "El Diablo," they know to keep their distance. His face never gets windburn, his hands never freeze up, and of course - he never chokes when the moment comes to reel in that illusive steelhead. Old man Dan chose submarines so he could dwell under the surface of the vast blue ocean with all the fishies, warning them not to venture into his rivers. He owns the rivers.

Barry Dabney

Surface Warfare Officer

Hailing from the great state of Tennessee, Barry Dabney has always attended the most prestigious institutions, from the world renowned Brentwood Academy to the Naval Academy Preparatory School and ultimately the Naval Academy. When not on tour with his favorite artist Kanye West, or scooping up game winning fumbles to seal a victory against Army, Barry Dabney can be found roaming the hallways of 3-3 spreading his infinite wisdom to the plebes or anyone else who will listen. While he is very approachable never make the fatal mistake of getting into a philosophical debate with him as he is a modern day Plato who cannot be beaten. Overall Barry is one of the most loyal and genuine people you will ever meet. He always puts his friends and his people first which is why he will make an outstanding surface warfare officer upon graduation.

Austin Dahmer

USMC Ground

Amongst close friends he is known as the "Hoot Owl", others know him as Austin Dahmer. Austin is a constant reminder that man was God's greatest creation. Not only does Austin strive for physical excellence while perusing his dream to be a Marine, but he also strives for loving relationships with those for whom he cares most. The "Hoot Owl" can often be seen "spittin' wisdom" at those whom need his help (mainly Beefcake). Austin's inner animal was explored whilst backpacking in Wyoming with the National Outdoor Leadership School. This night owl is often found staying up late finishing up his work as a double major. Austin's education in Political Science and Economics along with his knack for the more elegant things in life will keep him going strong is this world. He is an inspiration and a role model to all, and will be a great asset to the Corps and all its motivators.

Astrid Duran

USMC Ground

I knew the minute I found out her boyfriend was 10 years older than her on I-Day that I got a good one. She's been known to enjoy a glass or five of red wine. She's learned to avoid tequila for paranormal reasons, and a beer bottle is her weapon of choice. But every once in a while the powers that be put someone in your life that just seems to change everything around it. When you take the time to break through the chronic bitch face that she can't help, "it's just the way it goes," you'll find no better friend than Astrid Duran. Through thick and thin, through DC and Philly, she'll be by your side along the way. Although she may not "yut" the loudest, she's going to make one hell of a Marine, and I look forward to being her friend along the way.

Scott Ebert

Submarines

Ever since Scott was born on the crest of a wave and rocked in the cradle of the deep, he's known the Navy was the life for him. Although PF Chang's offered him a full contract as a dipping sauce mixologist, Scott chose to follow his dreams of living far beneath the sea. Always one to party, Scott's most well-known attribute is his love of making friends with his Annapolis neighbors. Sometimes, he became too close with his new acquaintances and went into hiding. But, after a short sabbatical and with the help of his two best friends in all of Bancroft Hall, Scotty-Bones came out of retirement. As a movie connoisseur, Scott has imposed countless hours of Indie and Foreign movies on his girlfriend in the hopes that she'll one day quote them all line by line. His favorite quote is: “Do you want to build a snowman?”

Joshua Elmore

USMC Pilot

Standing 6’3” this North Carolina native entered this world with a Carhartt hat on, a 30-06 in hand and a sense of pride that inspired all of those lucky enough to be graced by his presence. Josh “Shmell” Elmore’s popularity is drawn from not only his lead roles in the films ‘Good Will Hunting’ and ‘Armageddon,’ but also from his true patriotism. When Josh isn’t in the gym sculpting his calves or outside waxing his Chevy truck, you can find him immersed in the duties of VT-NA Operations Officer. This future Marine Pilot has mastered the art of shaved forearms and has left an everlasting legacy between the walls. You, my friend, entered the Academy as a baseball player and a student, but you are leaving an Officer and a Gentleman. May your skies be clear and your hair forever both high and tight.

Christopher Freeland

Navy Pilot

Upon first glance, you would never realize that Chris Freeland is truly a fat kid at heart. His life is a constant battle between stuffing his face with unhealthy food and working out to burn it all off. He's been known to put down an entire dozen of Krispy Kreme donuts as an appetizer to his strict grilled chicken and broccoli diet. His nickname “Vegas” couldn't be more perfect. With legendary bar tabs that run anywhere from $200 to 350 EUROS, Chris is all about the party and making sure people are having a good time. A selfless, hardworking member of the baseball team, he puts in more hours than any of the players do. The Naval Aviation community has received a great Officer as Chris will be taking his talents and credit card to Pensacola for flight school this summer. He's probably already started a tab at “Flora-Bama.” TTBOD.

Caleb Gerard

Navy Pilot

Midshipman Caleb Dell Gerard is a native of Houston, Texas. Caleb is a Systems Engineering major at the Academy, and bears the banner of Group I proudly in a room otherwise full of Economists. Caleb “The Pilot Fish” Gerard, so-called because of his unapologetic nature when requesting help or assistance from his classmates in various forms, can be seen cruising around Annapolis in his 1974 Ford Ranchero (when it's not in the shop). He is also a graduate of the prestigious National Outdoor Leadership School – Wyoming Backpacking course, and enjoys snowboarding whenever the chance presents itself. Anyone who knows Caleb will tell you that he is one of their favorite people with whom to grab a drink, go out in DTA, or simply chill and watch Netflix. Upon graduation, Caleb will head down to sunny Pensacola, Florida, to pursue his dream of becoming a Navy Pilot.

Molly Ginnane

Naval Flight Officer

Molly. Who knew her name would be so popular that it comes up in every song? She brings a smile and laughter to anyone she comes to. The best roommate that anyone could ask for and best friend anyone could know. From random overnights that had led to some great stories in the streets of DC to Philly, she has always been the one to take with you for a fun night. A natural born wing woman, Molly is like no other. We repay the debt to her at the end of the night when she craves Jimmy Johns after a night in DTA. She loves her sandwiches so much that she shares a love for its employees as well. A native born Georgian, she knows her rap songs and would make 2Chainz proud. Great things will come from Molly, she will have you sweatin' as you have to work hard to keep up with her.

Sarah Glancey

Naval Flight Officer

There is a girl who reads, her name rolls off the tongue as Sarah Megan Glancey, but if you call her that, she'll maim you with her extensive knowledge of the English language: IT'S Britney MEGAN betch. She hails from the best city/state in the world, none other than El Paso, Texas where she wowed the town with her affinity for fashion and fun. As an English major her passions include the three N's: Netflix, Naps and rappiNg (with her culturally ghetto roommates) and watching award shows religiously with an open bag of tostadas and painfully spicy salsa. If the NFO thing doesn't work out we expect to find her working for Beyoncé as her right hand woman or maybe even be the pilot of her private jet, although Beyoncé's style would pale in comparison to Meg Meg's and we would never want to make Beyoncé look bad…

Carlos Hargett

Information Warfare

I main samus.

Jon Horton

USMC Ground

Jon Horton aka Brantlayy (as his sister calls him) is one heck of a guy. He loves his family cows farmland and of course his wiener dog. Brantley thinks he is the smartest person when it comes to sports knowledge but really he is the only person in his town who knows how to work google. Brantley is the nicest and kindest kid in the world and if you say anything different. Imma sock you in the face! love ya dude!

Weston Kennedy

Surface Warfare Officer

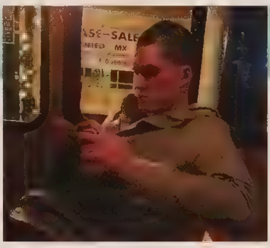
His body, his hair, his tan, and even his stutter is better than yours. He runs faster than you and he doesn't always drink, but when he does he even drinks faster than you (it doesn't matter that by the end of the night he'll clumsily knock shot glasses out of everybody's hand with his cheers). God indeed spent a little more time on him. The best part is he is so humble about it all. If this Herculean description is unfamiliar then you're probably CAT V because where there is fitness there is Wes Kennedy. His mirror is the cover for Men's Health. His modesty is beyond reproach. Girls say "thank you" when he turns down a date. Wes is the prototype for the Ken Barbie. Kate Upton is single because Wes is still on the market.

Zatha Loewen

USMC Ground

Zatha, we are told, is an original Nebraskan name, however, this Aryan goddess calls the beaches of North Carolina home. She has an affinity for shredding the gnar, popping sick tricks on her skateboard, and always picking the BEST meal on the menu. And although she has a love for anchors (and the color pink), she is not your typical lackadaisical beach bum. She can probably outrun you, outswim you, outbike you, and outshoot you all while maintaining her chic style. Z upholds this fashionable persona with a closet that is full of unique pieces; no one would ever call her a boring "Bethany." In the fall, however, she will be sporting a new uniform – desert camis. Rah, Yut, and Semper Fi(fi).

James Loupos



Navy Pilot

James "Gangsta" Loupos is a wonderful individual whom I have had the honor of calling friend the last four years. This is no surprise as he comes from a loving family. He's a testament that hard work does indeed pay off. Though he is not part of the best warfare community on the planet (Surface Warfare!!) I wish him the best. "Lots of people want to ride with you in the limo, but what you want is someone who will take the bus with you when the limo breaks down." – Oprah Winfrey

Nathaniel McCarter

USMC Ground

The Worst-Case Scenario Survival Handbook: Encounter with Nathaniel James McCarter.

Nathaniel James McCarter, commonly know as "Prison Nate" or "McNasty," is an extremely dangerous and violent humanoid mammal. Any interaction with "Prison Nate" is fraught with peril. The key to survival is keeping a clear head. Offer it beer or protein powder. This should placate it and give you time to escape as it imbibes or consumes your offering. Tell it it is "looking small today." It will immediately head to the nearest gym and abruptly start picking up heavy objects. Exploit its weaknesses. Snakes, kissing noises, and nutella seem to perturb "McNasty" deeply. Use this to your advantage. If you wish to avoid an encounter with it, avoid any area with heavy objects or Quantico, VA, where it is rumored that it will be attending TBS after commissioning into the Marine Corps in May of 2014.

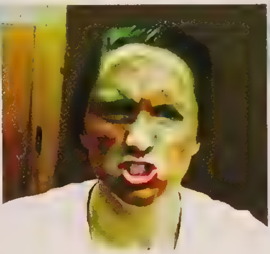
Kathleen Mullen

Submarines

Querida Catalina, from our first days as lowly plebes to last summer donning officer-like collar devices, I have cherished our time together. Español class has meant twice the time with you, an extra dimension for pseudo-top-secret communication, and double the languages with which I can express how much you mean to me. Catholic Choir/Glee Club have allowed us to praise the friendship He made possible. In spite of being busy, Madame President of Dolphin Club, you make time for me. Even as the top pick for IGEP scholarships, you are extremely humble and few others match your intellect. Kathleen, you make me fall in love with life over and over again. Your infectious giggle, the way your entire face engages when you smile, and your sweet and spicy charisma baffle me. Your future submariners will be blessed to have you as their leader, and they will know it. Te amo.

Haley Nowak

USMC Ground



One of the "Ladies of Lejeune," Haley was a dedicated member of the Women's Swim team, even if she slept through practice and the extremely annoying rooster alarm, well more like five alarms which all mysteriously snoozed themselves. Adding to the irony of her inability to wake up, Haley was a known coffee addict. The "Severn Blend" special served up by King Hall never made it back to her room every morning because she guzzled the entire cup before she even took two steps from the coffee pots. You think her coffee has a short lifespan? That doesn't even come close to how she downs yogurt or Red Robin's Freckled Lemonades. Oh, did I mention how gullible she is? You could tell her the most ridiculous things and she'd fall for it...DEY KAWL MIE HAYLIE. Good luck in the Marine Corps, where everyone knows you will be both cool AND tough, maybe ;)

Austin Patrick

USMC Pilot

His name is Austin the "Austallama" P-Trick, he spits mad game and has a real good kick, he wishes he could freestyle like his boy Eminem, but in reality AP's allot better than them, he can only do homework while making weird sounds, and only stay focused by chewing gum by the pound, his hair once flowed, call sign Nightrider, but he traded it to the Corps to "keep it tighter," He lives that SOCAL life, Santa Barbara, Rides waves smoother than the voice of Frank Sinatra, Went from 3364 to 3360, Motha b's melting pot to Helms deep heroes, he'll practice his yuts, hoorahs, and parading, Instead of his favorite quote "it's degrading," I know he can make it through any strife, I really would trust this guy with my life, though we may go separate ways don't stress. I'll always be your dancing power source, JJ Reyes.

Caleb Prox

Surface Warfare Officer

Caleb Prox is an adventurous and unconventional person. A ex professional restrictee, beach bum and overall good guy. He traveled to the edge of the universe, stared into the abyss and jumped in. An aspiring surface warfare officer, he should have no problem traveling the oceans in search of the perfect wave and his next adventure. He can be summed up in eight words, "Too weird to live, too rare to die."

Joshua Reyes

Navy Pilot

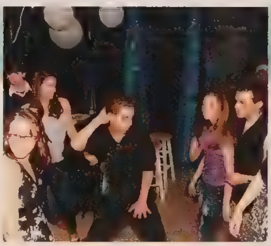
Affectionately known as "J.J. 101 one-and-done wild turkey Reyes," Josh lives his life the same way he plays super mash, with a passion. His generosity knows no bounds and neither do his dance moves. JJ can frequently be spotted creating dance circles in Pusser's circa 1am. Whether he's crushing Saki bombs, 101 whiskey, or throwing it all up, JJ always rallies for the dance floor. B-boy, philanthropist, humanitarian, chemist, descendent of Bruce Lee, and most importantly, altruistic friend, JJ is most selfless person you will ever meet. Whether he's harvesting for the hungary, teaching his roommates the token Asian accent, or lending them his passion to facilitate their crude and visually offensive dance moves, JJ always has a smile on his face.

Ericka Sample

Surface Warfare Officer

The Honorable E-Babes Sista Samps is a quiet little mouse. Should she end up in your great Naval path don't let her soft-spoken nature and affinity for the soulful and soothing beats of Tyga, Drake or the great Hova dismay your potential friendship. She is a scientist, generally speaking, but isn't too nerdy to impart the wisdom of the streets to you and all those she encounters. It may be difficult to get Urricka to break out of her shell, but if you leave her a trail of gummies and promise to be SWOtivated at all times, she will take to you like a cat on a hot tin roof. So, keep your eyes peeled for this little nugget of cultural wisdom, she will tell you truths you never knew and show her affection through caring "meeeeeps" of love and the excitement of a child who just wants another snack.

Robert Slye



Navy Pilot

MIDN Robert Slye is the coolest and toughest person to ever grace the halls of Bancroft. With his chest puffed out, constant stream of "aiight, thanks man" to everyone he sees, as well as cries of "ugh, I hate NARPS" on his way to intramurals or MacD, you know he means business. If you ever need to find Rob, look no farther than his rack. He sleeps whenever he's not working out or in class, so basically whenever he's not in class. He even sleeps through formations and intramurals because those are only for uncool people. He also decided his service selection entirely based on how cool they were: As soon as he realized his true service preference of submarines was only for uncool people, he immediately switched his selection to the much cooler Navy Pilot. Now he can sleep, eat and gel his hair all he wants.

Cody Stueve

Submarines

I'm here to tell you why Cody Stueve is better than you. You need sleep? Cody doesn't need sleep. You eat food? Cody doesn't eat food. From humble beginnings on a dairy farm in the small town of Hereford, TX, Cody has evolved into an All-American winning machine that succeeds at literally everything he does. He actually is one of those guys that wakes up every morning and pisses excellence. But above all else, Cody is the greatest friend a guy could ask for. We've been good friends since those hot days of plebe summer, and I can honestly say that I am better for it. Cody, I wish you the best of luck in everything that lies ahead, and I know we will stay in touch for a long time to come!

David Szabo

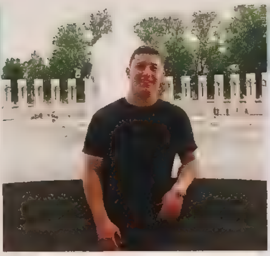
Naval Flight Officer

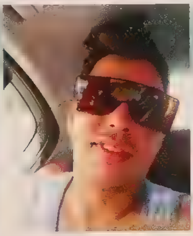
Son of Margaret and Frank Howard Jr. Born and raised in Houston, TX. Enjoys fishing, camping, and drag racing. Assigned to be a student Naval Flight Officer starting July 11th in Pensacola.

Alejandro Tavizon

USMC Ground

Alejandro, known by Hondo among friends, was born in El Paso, Texas and then moved to Broken Arrow, Oklahoma. At a young age Hondo came to realize life in Oklahoma was rather dull and that the only way out was to join the Marine Corps. He applied to the United States Naval Academy and was sent to the Naval Academy Prep School for a year to smooth down the rough edges. Arriving at the Naval Academy in the summer of 2010 as a member of the almighty 4th company he never looked back. There is no better friend out there to help you get back on your feet, always ready with a movie quote for any situation, you can't help but smile. Hondo will be an excellent Marine Corps officer; let's just hope he's learned his lesson when it comes to cleaning his rifle.





Ryan Warner

Surface Warfare Officer

Definition of a HATCH: A Peter that is the most fun-loving, class-clowning, chill-maxing, bro-dapping, stache-sporting, flow-combing, chart-making, boat-driving, ship-conning, YP-commanding, ocean-navigating, poopsuit-wearing, hell-raising, free-cursing, rule-defying, pit-raging, party-pumping, show-stopping, day-drinking, beer-crushing, shot-taking, lip-packing, dip-smashing, candy-feasting, dorito-licking, cheddar-munching, soda-sipping, monster-drinking, nap-taking, sleep-crushing, madden-playing, movie-watching, carhart-praising, brazzers-loving, marlboro-smoking, hard-hitting, loud-singing, lax-playing, goal-scoring, pipe-shredding, money-blowing, time-wasting, tail-wagging, bear-hugging, pillow-fluffing, blanket-cuddling, smooth-talking, girl-baiting, chick-charming, penn state-cheering, double-dipping, sick-faking, class-skipping, excuse-making, communist-hating, star-spangled, rebel-hearted, hard-body that I know.

Spencer Warren

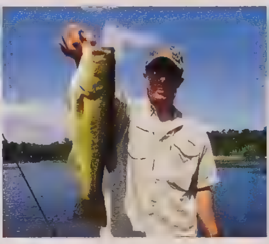
USMC Ground

Spencer Warren came to the Naval Academy from the third world country of Kentucky not knowing how to speak English, wearing no shoes, with a dip in his mouth. Most people know him as Beef-Cake (pronounced with a slow, caveman like accent), because of his tree-stump like body shape and disproportionally large head. However, those who know him best refer to him as the alpha nerd. He does a decent job of hiding his true character by pretending to pick up heavy things in the gym and scoring barely passing marks in all of his classes. In reality, he is a complete and total nerd. When he is not farming for Isk in Eve, he is typically bothering his roommate Rob Slye about useless computer science jargon that his roommate politely pretends to listen to and care about. Oh, and ask him about the 28 day wrestling camp he went to.

Brendan West

SEALs

Brendan West, AKA Peter Pan, hails from the densely populated state of Idaho. When Peter is not preparing for his future life as a SEAL, he enjoys watching animated films such as Hercules, Lion King, and Frozen (Tangled is his favorite though) and losing to his friends and roommates in video games, especially Mario Kart on Wii. His patriotic charisma and love of sea faring men led him straight to the Naval Academy. Since he first stepped foot on campus he has made himself known as "that blonde hottie" who levels unworthy opponents on the football field. As a SEAL select, Lil' Peter, has a challenging future ahead of him, but with his gritty work ethic, large collection of stuffed bears, perfectly chiseled bod, and rugged good looks he will unquestionably overcome any obstacle in his path. Forever awake and forever busy Peter will do great in the fleet.



Justin White

USMC Ground

Justin White was born November 1st, 1991 and is from Suwanee Georgia, a suburb of Atlanta. During high school at Greater Atlanta Christian School, he was captain of the football and lacrosse teams. At the academy, he rowed heavyweight crew during plebe year but stopped to focus on his academic achievements as an Honors Economics major and Mandarin Chinese minor. He was chosen 1/C year as Company Commander of 4th Company as well as one of two Midshipmen to represent USNA at the Center for the Study of the Presidency and Congress in Washington D.C. He served as Vice President of the Omicron Delta Epsilon economics society during his 2/C and 1/C year. Justin was selected to serve in the United States Marine Corps as a ground officer upon graduation. He will attend TBS after marrying Brooke Tabor on June 6th. He enjoys hunting, fishing, shooting, golf, tennis, and snowboarding.

Andrew Zellman

Submarines

Some know him as Sloppy Joe, El Coolio, or maybe even the Frog Myster. Although those belonging his inner most circle of friends call him Andrew. If you know him well enough you would know that his favorite type of food is Chilé. The man talks about it whenever he gets the chance. On those rare occasions that he isn't talking about his favorite food, he is talking about his favorite state, Cali. He loves to brag about being from North Cal. or maybe it was So. Cal I don't know. It doesn't really matter though it's the same thing right... He is a part time student, full time gamer, and full time frisbro. If you do not understand how that math adds up just go talk with Andrew, he is a math major after all. Oh and he is going subs.

Connor Zeman

Navy Pilot

On the day of his birth, Connor Zeman emerged from the soil in God's country—Syracuse, NY— via pickup truck exactly in the image of his present form. Whilst at the academy, his tolerance of others and approachable attitude earned him the position of Executive Officer for Fourth Company during the first semester of his first class year. Rooming with two future submariners (nerds) he immediately reached a status of "cool" in comparison to those he surrounded himself with. This resulted in an honorary induction in to the naval aviation community where being cool is a prerequisite—and if anyone is cool, it is Connor Zeman.

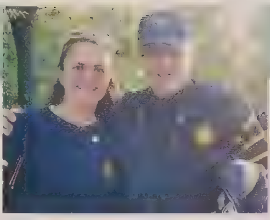
Ruth Bates



USMC Ground

While she may be a hippie, Duchess Ruth Louise Margaret Bates of St. George, Maine has excelled in the tightly controlled environment of the yard. She has overcome her fear of Dubeeous Carrs, crustaceans, and Hair to become the fearless company commander in the tower. With her title, she upholds the most becoming uniform and hair standards always in accordance with MIDREGs. Despite the twin setbacks of a broken collar bone and a tragic love affair with Billy Joel, she has blossomed into the most aggressive devil pup on the yard. If she is not in her room writing limericks, she is probably biking cross-country in her steel-toed boots. The free-spirited duchess cannot be caged as she narrowly dodged the confines of Navy wifedom and began firstie year in full force and lap.....dancing the night away.

James Breuer

Medical Corps

When he's not crushing NARP's in Intramural Soccer, James "JET" Breuer spends his afternoons "cooking" in the chemistry lab or frying up the members of his old platoon. More recently, he's taken to curing the plebes of 1st Battalion of their soupiness, one pro-quiz at a time. His weekends are dedicated to the planning of his wedding to "Lovey" or spent pinning over her absence by playing video games. He gave up the comforts of his plebe company for romance and high altitude training on 3-4, where he became a permanent fixture on the soccer team. Always one with a kind word for his roommate or an inappropriate one during a Disney movie, James is working on developing a bedside manner to rival Dr. House. As practice for med school, he broke his own knee in martial arts class and then operated on it, right there on the matt.

Laura Burzenski

Navy Pilot

LEB, Laura's plebe roommate, was a great deal more than a capable mariner. Many a night, Laura spent coddling cuddling, cajoling, snuggling, and hoisting LEB. Always the patient roommate, Laura cleaned up coffee stains and sprayed Febreeze when necessary. This care and attention wasn't enough, though, and LEB left Laura's life. After several unsuccessful attempts at the West Point 500's night and local burrito stores, Laura eventually found love in a hopeless place (Michaelson). She soon developed a passion for diving. She also loves Nutella and using Scott tissues. An avid marathoner, Laura's favorite part of plebe was leading the company in regimental runs. She later pursued this passion through her synchronized rhythmic chopping around goat court. Her favorite songs include: what I need, just a friend, and when you say… just a friend. Laura looks forward to what awaits her: a three year paid vacation in Pensacola.

David Calderon-Guthe

Navy Pilot

David "CG" Calderon-Guthe, is without doubt one of the greats. Following a long line of USNA graduates who entered the Submarine community, CG followed in his father/grandfather's footsteps and excelled at anything technical that he ever encountered (tutoring firsties in Thermodynamics while he was a youngster). However, in a strategic move to avoid the nuclear community and fulfill his dream of becoming Maverick, David became a Chinese major, studied abroad in the People's Republic, and went on to begin his masters in National Security Studies at Georgetown - everything and anything unrelated to nuclear power. Like anything else he sets his mind to, David has been selected as a Naval Aviator and we - his classmates - will sit back and watch as his far superior mind takes him either to the moon or to the White House.

Quinton Calmus

Navy Pilot

Quinton "Q" Bernard Calmus. His personality is just as unique as his archaic name implies. Q hails from the deserts of Washington state, and - as would be assumed coming from a town centered around a nuclear waste facility - he certainly is odd (he glows green at night). His hobbies have included (but were not limited to) playing harmonica, becoming a tobacco pipe aficionado, and chasing only the most perfectly aged (and committed) women. Although a seemingly successful systems engineer, Q could more often be found in his rack than in the bowels of Rickover with his calculator and pocket protector. Quinton lived (slept) by the philosophy that if one could spend 50% of their day in the rack, then they would only have to spend 2 years consciously dealing with the Academy grind. He seems to have been successful.

Conor Campbell

USMC Ground

You'll never meet a younger grandpa than Conor. His famous catch phrase is "help I've fallen, and I can't get up!" His old limbs and back limit his athletic abilities outside the pool, so you won't find this devil dog doing any Tough Mudders. However, he is known for liking mud……flaps. Not your typical ladies man, he's been known to jump the gun (Training trip 2012), leaving little to the imagination. Speaking of guns, he'll proudly be joining the Marine Corps in hopes of earning his father's love and avoiding a beating. In all seriousness, you won't find a harder worker or more dedicated guy. The Marine Corps is lucky to have him, and I'm honored to call him a teammate. NMSD proud.

Alexander Clark

Navy Pilot

Alex Clark is a rootin tootin Texan that is able to blind even the most well protected eyes with the sheen off his balding pate. A bow toting, NOLS tested mountain man; he is also a fierce supporter of and really loves to get into girls lacrosse. Alex "AJ" Clark has an affinity for cowboy boots and the Shiner Bock libation. A life goal of his is to grow a mustache even half as good as Ron Swanson's. As a proud Texan whose heart is in Philadelphia, his American flag shirt has seen more action than America itself. The world renowned "greatest engineer" of all time has utilized his talents for everything from cruise control robots to breaking and entering. The man of many talents who is willing to do anything for the people he loves. Alex Clark The Bald Eagle.

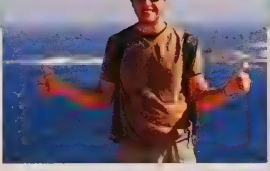
Mark Colby

Submarines

Mark Colby had several homes during his time at the Academy. At first it was Charlie Company where he earned the nickname "Rate-master 1000" for his commanding knowledge of plebe rates. He then moved to a new home with two immature and unfocussed classmates—both of whom benefited greatly from Mark's good sense and judgment in-between water balloon wars and other bouts of tomfoolery. For a brief period, Mark's home was the Severn River where his voice ordering, "Damn the Torpedoes FULL SPEED AHEAD" from the coxswain's seat could be heard cutting through the fog before the sun rose above Annapolis. Mark undoubtedly made Rickover his home as well. But Mark will soon find a new home under the sea as he begins the next big chapter in his life. I couldn't be more exited for this guy. He'll do great things.

Vytautas Drejeris

Lithuanian Naval Force



No, I am not Russian. My name is Vytautas Drejeris and I am an international exchange student from Lithuania. I like traveling, but more importantly I like taking pictures of me and my friends traveling. Over the last four years I have made it through summer camp, building 276, Norfolk, up and down the Grand Canyon, to Podunk, North Carolina, hiked the hills of the beautiful Application Mountains, survived the rainforest of Puerto Rico, seen the Keys, walked the strip of Vegas, seen the good life in Colorado, as well as the grey life of Army, woken up at to 2 am to see the Commander-in-Chief get sworn in, ran the same path that Forest Gump ran, and been to the Big Apple. I have learned a lot from my American shipmates, but the they can be summed down to three things: what it means to "chill on the block with my homies" (at the best sponsors house ever, the Goulettes), I learned that if Americans don't get good customer service that bitching will just about always fix the problem, and finally that it is in the American DNA to never quit even well all the odds are against you. Thank you my friends and my shipmates for a opportunity to grow and learn from you. It has been a great four years!

Earl Ehrhart

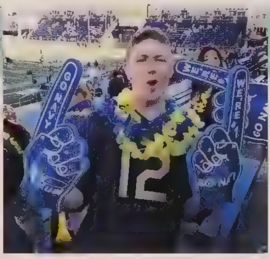
USMC Pilot

He hails from the sunny state of Georgia where the peaches grow and true Marines are born. From an early age he knew he wanted to eat dirt and use grunting as his primary form of communication. According to his parents his first words were "YUT" and "according to MIDREGs" so it was no surprise when he applied to USNA. Earl is not only a model midshipmen, he is also a phenomenal friend. Most of his time at the academy included tutoring his shipmates and making spreadsheets for fun. He also liked looking up fantasy football predictions, hording ketchup, and browsing dictionary.com.

Seamus Fish

SEALs

Never has the Academy seen such a man. In the summer of 2010 he was so successful he was awarded his own platoon, only weeks after becoming a Midshipman. It is no surprise then that his hard work led him to become the captain of the lightweight crew team. Totally devoted to rowing, Seamus spent endless hours up before the sun, learning the secrets to "free speed." When he wasn't on the water, he was resting up for his next test piece or admiring pictures of himself bending the oar. Although he was initially disappointed that he didn't get subs and couldn't be with his roommate forever, Seamus has since come to take great pleasure in getting wet and/or sandy. Always the guy with a sense of humor, Seamus Fish will continue to do great things in life, as long as he can manage to take a strain.



Gregory Forrester

USMC Ground

Gregory "Vernon" Forrester aka French Greg has spent his time at USNA working hard at never working hard. Transitioning from a Varsity Track athlete to an overweight NARP, Greg has never missed a meal and he routinely fends off his immense hunger with bottles of Easy Cheese and boxes of crackers. In addition, he has never missed an opportunity to brag that he is from Traverse City, Michigan (though no one understands why this is a sense of pride) and will often force his friends to watch Michigan sports teams lose. Greg's greatest expertise lies in playing video games, wooing youngsters, and spending way too much money on clothing. As Greg moves on to bigger and better things in the Marine Corps, all of his friends and family know he will excel as an officer (as long as he doesn't develop a disease from eating too much junk food).

Aimee Gennaro

USMC Ground

"Do you know who I am? I'm Aimee Fing Gennaro." This queen of the NARPS is USNA's very own Beyonce. The standing NCMO has spent her years booty popping and thigh clapping her all the way to the USMC. As the quiet mannered captain of NWL, patty-cakes came from the humble beginnings singing Taylor the Latte Boy to anyone that would listen, to starring as Penelope at every Karaoke bar. But hey, who wouldn't want a piece of her cause, she got a cute face and her booty so fat? Although never one to unlock her box, she's a true thick gurl that always appreciates a good motorboat. As a fanny pack wearing, tap dancing, strong side attacker,. Aimee Patricia Gennaro is a surviving member of the 15%, a strong side attacker and a believer in WAWG.

John Godfrey

Navy Pilot

A linguistic phenomenon, XO handled the company with care, but more memorably, the NARP Nest. Jack spent much of his athletic career at USNA crushing dreams on the pitch with the intramural soccer team, where he was a 6-time Brigade Champ. While he thought his luscious afro could hide his ice in China, the light shining off of his pasty calves made it quite apparent to BDD, who sunk that sub before it could surface. On that note, Jack's service selection preference adjustments numbered nearly as many as the number of women chasing after his heart. While not a computer scientist, Jack's devotion to a new kind of binary scale showcased his always "turn-up" attitude. Jack valued friendship above all else, and his compassion will not only help him strengthen his current ties, but also build countless more in the future. Win Often, Crush All Odds: NEHP. Go 'head.

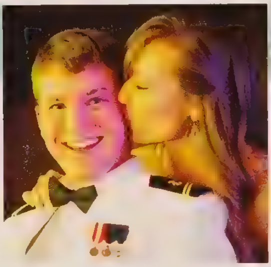
Alexander Goulette

Navy Pilot

Jared may be the only midshipman ever to be mistaken for Mahmoud Ahmadinejad by a Chinese national. When he's not ruling nations or being the Ravens' #1 fan (#raylewis), Jared is the quintessential NARP-scholar and, undoubtedly, the most athletic NARP to ever reside in Bancroft. He possesses an unrivaled pension for dreaming big and shouldering a sometimes unfathomable load—not limited to orchestra, volleyball, 21+ credits, drinking pijiu with his Beijing gemers, unforgettable nest chats, writing "simpy" poetry, grooming his hearty beard and his singing voice, and endless hours of Mandarin study. Yet, amidst the biweekly all-nighters and visits to the 3rd deck of Nimitz, he somehow finds a way to excel in all his endeavors. Jared's enthusiasm for life and the navy are contagious and can uplift the mood of any situation he enters. His future squadrons are sure to benefit from his candid personality, unrestrained compassion, humble determination, and irreplaceable presence.

David Harrelson

Surface Warfare Officer

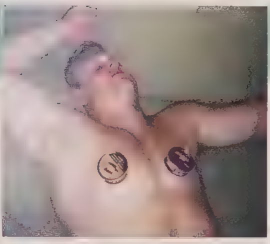


David Addison Harrelson is a boy from the South. He started killing ducks at the age of four; therefore, by the time he got to the Academy, he was already an expert of weapons. During his free time here he used to watch "Duck Commander" and during the weekends he was hunting all kinds of ducks around the Baltimore area. Even though he was an irreplaceable asset to the intramural soccer team, he has also led a lifestyle of a NARP exceptionally well. This principled gentleman also has a huge heart and was always willing to help his classmates at any time. The passion for guns and ships, taking care of the people around him will make him an excellent surface warfare officer. However, God, please have mercy on ducks' souls in Hawaii…

Daniel Johnson

Navy Pilot

"Good weather always follows bad."



Patrick Kiernan

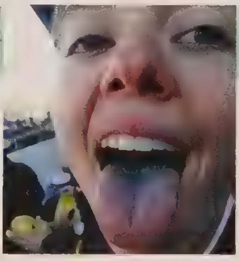
Surface Warfare Officer

The first time you meet Patrick Kiernan, he will probably say nothing and look at you with his deep beautiful eyes, but fear not, he's one of the chillest dudes you will come across. Sure he gives off the vibes of a serial killer at first, but if you are lucky enough to get to know the scoop master, you will come to learn that he is a lion on the lacrosse field, a dedicated family man, and one of the best friends you could ask for. People often comment on his un-shampoo'd blonde locks and wonder how anyone could acquire such flow…only PK can. Just play a little Bon Iver, throw on some InfinityList, and you will have found the way to his heart. Enjoy boofin in San Diego, you sexy beast, no doubt you'll make everyone back home proud. Send us some stupid snapchats of the Pacific.

Evan Ladner

Navy Pilot

Evan Ladner, a Mississippi swamp man, whose burrowing skills are only matched by his poor dice throwing ability, is a mole among men. He is a man who loves living simply and listening to his dad's advice while rolling with the tide. A man with an unparalleled ability to find flaws in any woman, Evan is a warrior poet at heart that on occasion loves to hang out with DARF laying waste to any bamboo that has the audacity to stand in his path. Later on in his academy career he met a woman who changed his ways with a love so good it could have been 'fake.' He is now a straight shooting Top Gun man who allegedly converted from the SWO community when he heard that all pilots get a mandatory 8 hours of sleep each night.



Crystal Lunkwitz

Surface Warfare Officer

Crystal Lunkwitz came to the Naval Academy for North Platte, Nebraska. Don't feel bad if you haven't heard of it, it is quite literally the middle of nowhere. You won't find a harder working, more determined person than 1/C (Now Ensign) Lunkwitz. A Chemistry major, and more often than not she is the most loyal person in the room. She'll bend over backwards for anyone she considers a friend; but she wouldn't want them to know it. Personal relationships aside Crystal will do the same for people working with or for her without batting an eye. After a brief modeling career plebe year for an illustrious publication read daily by midshipmen throughout the hall; Crystal selected SWO and is one of the only people I have met that was legitimately excited for the opportunity. I have yet to witness a challenge too great for her, and I doubt one's coming.

Katelyn MacDonald

Navy Pilot

Katie MacDonald was born in a mighty castle near the bustling metropolis of Goshen NY, but she is no upstate girl. She is genuine warrior princess with refined tastes that include Strawberritas, mojitos, white wines, and the movie "Frozen". When she isn't being classy as all hell you can usually find MacD in MacD or running pipes. She is also a fantastic volleyball player. On the rare occasion that she is caught doing homework she will usually try to convince you that she doesn't know what she is doing but then turns out to be the only person to get an A on the exam. On the weekends she enjoys backpacking, kayaking, hang gliding, swimming with dolphins, frolicking in flowery fields, and spelunking. Somehow she still manages to find time to come out with perfect hair to morning quarters each day.

Stephen Picchini

USMC Pilot

Stiff doesn't always meet a nice girl, but when he does, he meets her boyfriend ten minutes later. Young Stevie started out his days on the Navy football team, where his kicking was perpetuated by lifting legs every day in Ricketts. On weekends, you could undoubtedly find him in Pussers with a RBV (not Dock Street, because that place sucks). Always down for a good time, you could always count on him to be a road warrior, tearing it up at other schools. Above all, Stephen is an awesome friend. He will have your back, no matter what the circumstance. His loyalty will make him a fantastic leader as he pursues flying for the United States Marine Corps. He will kill it at TBS and beyond, no doubt. Short hair, don't care. Chill blue, frat green, daddy orange. Nothing to it but to do it. Low key. Latah muh. RIP.

David Piekut

USMC Pilot

From the first second of Plebe Summer swimming, this man knew he was destined to be a land loving, dirt eating, ground pounding, weight lifting Marine. That is, until all of the ones and zeroes finally hard cracked his own brain and helped him see that this Jordan wearing baller needed to be in the air. After all, it's been far too long since he's enjoyed the company of his good friends, Mason and Dixon. And what better way to get back to his roots than in Pensacola? I hear they hunt Manatees down there… careful. While much has changed, some things never will. Lifting weights will always be Davey B's King James and Uncle Sam.

Nicholas Pillari

Nuclear Surface Warfare

מוקשים הזהר DANGER MINES!

Nicholas Pillari made life at Annapolis look easy. Through razor sharp diligence and an uncanny ability to take the "long view," he met the daily rigors of the Naval Academy with patience and clarity. Always willing to lend a hand to his classmates, underclassmen, or his rambunctious roommate, Nicholas routinely took on some of the most time-consuming jobs, both in and out of company, simply because it needed to be done. And, he always did the job well. A true brainiac regarding all things economic, political, or military, he was often found gleaning news articles late into the night, or caught in a fiery (but always respectful) debate with his classmates. An intelligent, professional, and devoted patriot, he was an outstanding midshipman, will be an even better officer, and is an awesome teammate, roommate, and friend. He will be sorely missed by his shipmates of the great Class of 2014.

Jake Reid

Navy Pilot

To the haters, he is King NARP. To Acme's employees, he is Lurch. To his company, Jake Reid is Daddy. His title arose not only from his enormous stature but from his abounding paternal instinct. For the past four years, he has been a faithful zookeeper to his beautiful panda, and accordingly, the wingman of all wingmen—when his children are in need, Daddy provides. When he is not recounting his high school glory days as an All-American receiver or sizing himself up in a lime green speedo, Daddy passes his days fervently contemplating strategies to get yoked in MacD. When day turns to dusk, he converts this same intensity to carbohydrate counter insurgency operations—demolishing CT Crunch, Parmesan Triscuits, and Big Macs as if the world was perpetually on the cusp of Armageddon. Jake's light-hearted, magnetic presence can be summarized in one, universally applicable truism: if you want a party, find your Daddy.

Wave Ryder

Navy Pilot

Wave Kupono Ryder was born in Kailua, Hawaii at five in the morning after Christmas in 1991 to Michael and Wendy Ryder. Named by his mother Wendy, after a Hawaiian Reggae song 'Wave Rider' by Butch Helemano—she thought it was fitting and unique. Wave Kupono Ryder was the first of three children to Mr. and Mrs. Ryder. His siblings include year younger brother Blaze Keka Ryder and four year younger sister Kealani Kuuipo Ryder. He was raised an island boy on the island of Oahu in Kaneohe. He enjoyed playing sports such as football, basketball, baseball, and also running track and field. His hobbies included surfing, body boarding, fishing, spearfishing, and other ocean sports with his family.

Alexander Scott

NEW

SEALs

Sander is a noble midshipman and will certainly make a solid future officer. He carries with him the "Scott family tradition" of being nothing less than a Scottish-German Warrior Scholar, plowing the path before him toward greatness (like Alexander the Great) on his way to being a SEAL. When he wasn't stoically studying ancient Arabic literature, debating frivolous topics with his roommate, or drinking coffee, he could always be found "pillaging" his body on the treadmill or in the pool in pursuit of his warrior desires. Sander truly embodies the line from the Frogman's Ballad, "anything in life worth doing is worth overdoing," but in a good way. He will surely carry on his family's legacy and do great things in the future.

Kelis Secrest

USMC Ground

"Rah rah, rah rah, yut yutrah rah rahyut yutyut rah corps rah yut. Yut yut yut yut, rah yut yutrah rahrahrah yut yut." Translation: "Rah rah, rah rah, yut yutrah rah rahyut yutyut rah corps rah yut. Yut yut yut yut, rah yut yutrah rahrahrah yut yut." There is no finer US Marine than Kelis Secrest, he forgot how to speak English in his endeavor to become a part of The Corps.

Cassidy Simmonds

Surface Warfare Officer

Cassidy Simmonds is like a work of art. At first glance, you see what's readily available upon the surface: someone who is addicted to working out, has long, luscious hair that brings all of the boys to the yard, and is an obvious class act. Upon further inspection and time spent with this magnificent mermaid, you realize that she is the epitome of excellence, the accepter of the absurd, the guarantee of grace, and the lyricist of loyalty. Never has a truer friend been found, or one who is so ready to be awkward in public. Any sailor she ends up leading will be truly lucky to have this creature of the sea lurking about. May the odds be ever in your favor, dearest Cassafrass. Nipple blades.

Jefferson Talicuran

USMC Ground

Old Doc TC is a man of experience and integrity. Coming into Plebe year at the crusty age of 22 after overcoming enormous challenges during his prior service was no simple task. But, TC provided a solid base of wisdom and confidence for his young classmates when dealing with the stresses of the Academy. He took everything he did seriously, because he believes in doing the little things correctly to be the best. When TC wasn't training the Plebes or training his classmates, he was setting a positive example for his peers and fighting hard through his academics, and his motivation never waned. He is universally respected by those around him and exemplifies what it means to earn your way through life and tackle tough challenges head on. His experience and steady hand will surely be invaluable with his fellow Marines.

James Thomas

Nuclear Surface Warfare

Sir Jamus Bradford Thomas of colonial North Carolina is the last remaining British Loyalist in the US Navy. His greatest disappointment after emerging from the cloisters of home schooling in Charlotte was the scarcity of sailing ships in modern navies. Always the hopeless romantic, Jay's figurative heels rarely find themselves below his head. His roommate has filled two log books with names of previous infatuations and will be turning over the watch upon graduation. A member of every religious and musical organization on the Yard, Jay likes long watches on the bridge, Shakespeare, and River Dancing in a Kilt.

Johnathan Thornton

Navy Pilot

Johnathan Thornton is a fine example of a future naval pilot. Laid back and possessing a great sense of style, his presence is almost as large as he is. Coming in at 6'4, 250 lbs with -3% body fat, he never misses a chance to tear up a field and crush the dreams of other collegiate athletes with his fellow rugby teammates. However, really a gentle giant deep down inside, Johnathan knows the importance of praising Jesus and uses his Barry White sound-a-like wind pipes to harmonize in the gospel choir. He balances work and fun with a good whiskey, and has been known to walk on life's edge with a flask of fireball. This midshipman knows the sky's not the limit but instead the doorway to his dreams.

Jeremy Vasquez

Navy Pilot

Jeremy Omar Vasquez better known as Jeremy, Omar, or Vasquez is a unique character who intertwines his diverse skills and interests in order to give back. If you can't find him on the yard, you can find him relaxing with his favorite Johnny, his partner Gürer or drinking coffee and reading poetry. As an Arabic major, when practicing his languages in Annapolis at every opportunity wasn't enough, Jeremy decided to spend Fall '14 abroad in Morocco. A true Renaissance man, Omar enjoys all the unique treasures the world has to offer. When he's not spending time at art museums or attending alternative concerts, he's hanging with his best friends, also known as the "core four", which includes: Anthony, Lorna, and Kenyon. With his relaxed demeanor, thrill-seeking personality and superior work ethic, this New Jersey native is a sure fit into the Navy Pilot community.

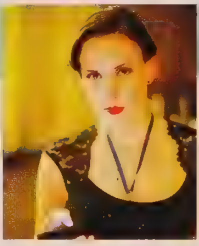
Graham Vickers

Surface Warfare Officer

HI! I'm Steve Irwin, and today, we observe the wild Graham "Graham Cracker" Vickers in his natural habitats. The football locker room held this alpha male for four years, strutting his prowess on the field, toppling opponents much much bigga. However, when observed in his den deep in the depths of Bancroft in 5th company, he is found surfing the web for movies and his daily chive. On occasion the Wild Graham Cracker will celebrate. However, with this his attack capability is severely impaired, and results in a condition known as, "Bull in the China Shop". Only once, have we observed the Wild Graham Cracker in the rarest of all moments, the ceremonial pee dance conducted while wearing undersized Army PT clothes. This occurrence is only partially understood, as he was tranquilized before completing. And now, he is being released to the surface fleet! Good luck little fella!

Logan Wilk



Surface Warfare Officer

Logan Eileen Wilk lives by Baudelaire's commandment to "Always be a poet, even in prose," and to reduce her to a paragraph would be akin to having an engineer analyze the subtleties of Hemingway... Struggling through broken hips and lengthy french essays, Logan has managed to escape the confines of the yard and the Dungeons of Rickover for the four corners of the world (or at least a coffee shop with a cheesy romance novel). When she's not traveling across continents or pages, she's helps the engenir's of 5 Company write goodly. This bleeding California heart flows over the stones of Bancroft into the outside community, bringing SoCal sunshine to everyone she meets. As a California gurl, she despised the Mid-Atlantic climate (wintry dark ages, humid summers, and spray-on tans) throughout her years by the bay. Subsequently, without trepidation, she chose her first ship out of tropical Hawaii.

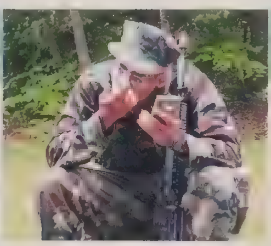
Justin Adams

Explosive Ordnance Disposal

Justin A. Adams, a true southern gentleman, hails from a town in the middle of nowhere, known as Vidalia, Georgia. Yes, like the onion. From his po-dunk roots, this well-polished man enjoys sweet tea, campfires, and flannel. He is just about as reserved with his words as he is with his money; free is always good for Justin. However, this man spares no expense to his thrill-seeking pastimes. Even though he enjoys snow-skiing, kite-boarding, and mountaineering, this unsuspecting daredevil has chosen to play with explosives for a living. A man close to his faith, Justin takes on any challenge that lies before him with steadfast humility and perseverance. With a body comparable to a Grecian God, Justin finds no time for naps, junk food, or Steerage Justin is an example of a genuine friend that everyone would like to have. Good luck pal, and remember, always cut the red wire.



Aaron Arellano

USMC Pilot

A man confused with his own personal identity, this wanna-be-Asian, Hispanic man from the ghetto of Southern California is a man of many diverse qualities. When he isn't dreaming of his glory days back in the land of Mickey D's and El Caminos, you can almost always find him indulging in Asian delicacies with an episode of Dragonball Z on the screen. His Academy experiences include STEM, Company Commander and even military-style "nose jobs", all while playing musical chairs with the numerous roommates who have put up with him. Don't try to debate with him though; he is in fact correct ALL the time.....only 2% of the time. It's guaranteed that after playing in the mud with the Jarheads, he will spend the rest of his days enjoying the exciting life of IT: sitting in a chair typing at a computer.

Ian Balczewski

Submarines

For the love of Poseidon, don't call him "Balz" or you'll get the worst cold-shoulder that the former Soviet Bloc can offer. In a word, Ian is a gamer, hippie, writer-engineer, harmonica virtuoso, mountain climber, world-class beer drinker, backcountry expert, equestrian enthusiast, particle jamming researcher, Lego mastermind, lumberjack, world traveler, graphic designer, ukulele maestro, funny hat collector, maze-maker, and internet spaceship fleet commander. While his ADD could be blamed for his contradictory lifestyle, it is also responsible for intermittent spells of obliviousness to his roommates and chronic sleeping in class. Astute in the ways of the nomad, this lover of Northern California, and now graduate student is going to become the most covert submariner in the reactor corps with a Master's in National Security studies.

Taylor Batye

USMC Ground

Taylor hails from Tampa, Florida where she enjoys days on the beach laying out and getting her tan on. You don't meet many people like her She marches to the beat of her own drum. She's very strong willed and one of the toughest most athletic girls I know. She was not only fierce on the soccer field, but Taylor lifts heavy weights and can hold her own on a pull-up bar. Taylor is going to dominate as a marine with her great athletic ability, giving the guys a run for their money. She's not only a beast, but super compassionate and wouldn't hurt a fly . . . or a cockroach! She's smart, funny, and absolutely beautiful. Taylor is an awesome person and the bestest friend a person could ask for

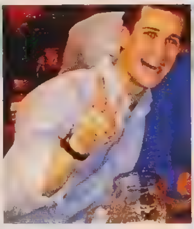
Caron Bryant

Naval Flight Officer

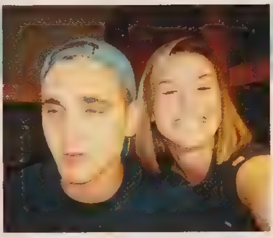
Caitlin is a woman of many faces: The Friend. The Teammate. The Peacemaker. Hand raiser. Hufflepuff. Shoop shoop girl. She sold her soul to crew 9 years ago and has the mark to prove it. She doesn't have much free time between riding the academic struggle-bus, Varsity Ergs and 3V problems, but her Gender Matters performance informed us all how she likes to spend it. As the nicest girl in 6th company, she is never without her trusty black skinny jeans or well-loved converse. When she's not trying to stuff a motivational 14 hearts into a Build-a-Bear, she can usually be found drinking coffee, listening to J. Biebs, shopping for vegan protein and giggling at the lamest joke you've ever heard. The NFO community is lucky to gain someone as incredible as her. NWC 2014: ROLLOUT.

Nathan Burt

USMC Pilot



Nate, Nathandaniel, Burt hails from the smallest of villages somewhere in China but for legal purposes we'll say New Jersey. It's not confirmed but rumor has it that Nate has already watched 80 percent of Youtube. There's no doubt Burt has changed the lives of many people, one small boy in particular who now lives with an irrational fear of sleeping in hotels. After one short year at his online college, Nate saw greener pastures at the Academy and it has never been the same since. We're all a little skeptical about Nate's enthusiasm toward the Marine Corps, since we have it on good authority that he cried every night of Leatherneck. Nate is sure to get a laugh out of anyone, even if it's at his own expense. Words cannot express what he's brought to this room or what he'll bring to the old Corps.



Thomas Cowhey

Explosive Ordnance Disposal

Known around town as the boy with the fever of a yellowish tinge, Commy Towhey will unfortunately never be a man after his Man Card was permanently revoked by the Joint Chiefs of Boss in a unanimous decision in which no members actually knew the charge. Thankfully he was able to compensate his loss of testosterone and his Y Chromosome with hours upon hours of dedication to his one true love, Super Smash Brothers. Cowrichard was nonetheless a man of many talents, the main being the ability to piss off as many people as he wanted, yet still have them come crawling back to him, demanding help in EE. A pioneer of debate tactics, this renaissance man discovered that 99% of all arguments could be won by simply calling 'time-out' while the other person is talking then proceeding to elongate every adjective spoken while screaming as loud as humanly possible.

Carinne De Leon

Surface Warfare Officer

Who is that bouncy, sticky-up haired plebe bounding down the hallway at O-dark-thirty in the morning? Plebe Rinn! The transition from that quiet but strong person to the stand strong leader she is now was created by many different events in her life. Plebe year spring break, hobo man, missing graduation for zero block training, years of summer school, Spring break 2012 go big or go home, hours of movies, discovering the wonders of the Fleet, Michael Buble's Fever, Estoy Poopin', Midnight mob of the Academy, scroll scroll scroll, Spring break pool side, and ship selection night. These memories created strong bonds between her best friends that will last forever. People would follow her to the ends of the earth and back, but the whole time chanting her cry, "Life is too hard, time to be a cat!"

Luke Diaz

Naval Flight Officer

Luke "the Duke" Diaz was born to roam the virtual world. Since training day one, no one understood his ancestral origins. This "Asian Sensation" dedicated large portions of his weekend to pouring fuel injector cleaner into his 1998 Toyota 4runner and made sure that his pristine upholstery remained immaculate. One day you will find this hard-charger strolling through his vineyard, reminiscing on the countless hours of his youth spent eating MRE cheese spread while playing World of Tanks. Luke was the most optimistic midshipman to ever walk the halls of Bancroft. His sunshiny disposition always brought cheer and smile to the faces of those around him - some say he bore a striking resemblance to Adam Sandler in "Anger Management." Never one to stop when the gaming is good, Luke Diaz was one whom others could seek advice from if they were getting "pwned."

Samuel Dodson

Surface Warfare Officer

Sammy Richard was a pioneer. Among other notable contributions to the intellectual conversations of the Joint Chiefs of Boss, he coined the phrase "sucketh to sucketh" (referring to all musicians other than John Mayer). Never one to miss a moment to serenade anyone willing to bleed from the ears, Sam could often be heard striking the the same three Mayer riffs well into the wee hours of the morning, at which time he would depart for the parlor. There, he would invite all the ladies to accompany him and to engage in tugging on him for attention. The bouncer at the parlor usually asked him to pay a cover, but Samuel Scott would angrily reply with "Don't joke about a dollar fifty!" Using the money he saved from bypassing the cover, he would casually order a milkshake, before hopelessly declaring that the milkshake would be miserable.

Austin Drayton

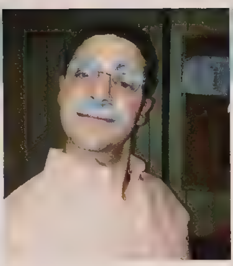
Surface Warfare Officer

When the Richard Sippers released their debut album BOOW!, their frontman was met with immediate fame and glory. Within weeks Soup became a household name/dinner. Soon, however, he was marred in controversy because no one could recognize his rear end. Luckily, a breaking news story at 11:00 cleared the air and reinvigorated his waning fan base. His fans, however, all but disappeared when he assigned them all copious hours of watch, spending over 3 years completing all the watchbills without sleeping, all while "labbin', bro." He soon embarked on a noble quest to locate the source of potpourri on the sink and the cat in the room. Unfortunately for Soup, he was never able to find an answer because he is incapable of waking up to his alarm, or the fire alarm, or really anything aside from a gentle whisper of his name.

Nicholas Dubee

Surface Warfare Officer

Nick aka Dubes aka Mr. ACME comes from one of the three towns in Rhode Island. A four year varsity soccer player, Dubes spent the majority of his time on the old pitch, not studying the English language. You won't find a better person to venture downtown with on a Friday night and with his tantalizing dance moves, he is quick to turn the heads of women, on and off the yard, but mostly on. He is a fan of 2000's rap music, the Patriots (only in the playoffs), and Snapchat relationships. His tastes have truly hit rock bottom, but some things are better left alone. If you're in search of a roommate who rarely showers and will cry consistently look no further. Good luck in the fleet brother and try not to call Duff EVERY day



Ryan Duffy

Submarines

Ryan, aka Duff aka Fat Duffy aka Fluffy, hails from the great city of Philadelphia, PA (actually about 30 minutes outside but he would never admit it). He can often be heard throughout the halls of Bancroft by his obnoxious sneezing or cheering for any of the "prosperous" Philadelphia sports teams. There is no doubt Ryan will redefine the term "silent service" when in the fleet. At the Academy Duffy maintained a high GPA with the a very specific study motto, "Don't do it." Instead his time was spent working on his lax skills, eventually landing him a spot on the Women's Navy Lax team where, results pending, he might get to start this spring. A short story from Duffy is as rare as an appearance from his girlfriend Danielle. Good luck with that dude.

James Ellerbe

Navy Pilot

James "The Ginger" Ellerbe, better known by his alias, Luke, is a good ol' Southern Boy from the paradise that is Pawleys Island, SC; a land of babes, booze, and surf. Luke has done his best with the ginger genes he received and refuses to let his red-hair and freckles be a setback. A huge fan of oreo brownies, Luke was once discovered with hundreds stashed about the room. He hides them in his pillow for a little late night snack. Luke is a regular at gymnasiums and jamborees in order to maintain his self-proclaimed "American Gladiator" body. A future star of "Party Down South", Luke is the epitome of the GTL lifestyle. Ellerbe is ecstatic for his future pilot career, as long as the Navy maintains its general issue of SPF 50.

Sean Finney

Navy Pilot

Sean Finney reigned supreme on the intramural fields of the United States Naval Academy. Before every flag-football match he would braid his lengthy chest hair, done battle attire, and lead 6th company to undisputed victory in every match he deigned to participate in. Finney epitomized the iconic warrior—some bloodied opponents considered him a modern day Achilles, witnessing the spirit of Conan displayed in his brutish strength and blood-lust. However, one would be remiss to remember Finney as only a formidable barbarian. Beneath his hair-coated chest beats a heart tempered by the rigors of USNA intramurals but softened by a woman's love. If Sean was absent from the fields of competition one could find him in his room in quiet meditation, writing love sonnets that would have cast hues of red to even the cheeks of Shakespeare. Finney is in all ways the manliest of men.

Samuel Johnson

Naval Flight Officer

Sam "Sleepy" Johnson came to room 5051 from what he describes as heaven. Others call it New Jersey. Sam will be proud to accept his superlative "Most Likely Not to Show Up for Graduation" but don't be fooled by his graduation tears either, they're 100% joyful. If the stars do align and you catch him awake, he'll' probably be grinding away at the newest tv series or a Chipotle burrito in the depths of his man cave. To see him in his prime, though, you'll need to venture to a club lacrosse game where he makes magic happen. Sam's most prized possession is definitely his friendship with Nate. Countless movie dates and a shared obsession for Chipotle have forged quite the bond between the two. A brother to us all, Sam's taking his talents to Pensacola where he'll be sure to steal the show once again.

Corbin Judstra

Surface Warfare Officer

For Corbin, MIDREGS wasn't seen as a list of regulations to abide by; rather a list of achievements to check off. Yet somehow his silver tongued eloquence eased him out of any situation he found himself in. His biggest legacy though would have to be his hair. At one point, AS FIRST SERGEANT, his hair was long enough to pony tail, all because someone told him he couldn't make it an entire year without a haircut. To his credit, he made it. However, though his blonde locks flowed freely, no one ever attempted to correct him because, well, "It's Judstra. Don't bother." During his time by the bay, he enjoyed more freedoms than most commissioned officers. In all, he's a great guy to have on your side in any situation, never hesitates to disagree with someone (regardless of rank), and will fight to the end for something he believes in.

John Kania

Intelligence

John Kania, aka "Candy Kania" aka "The Wolf of Bancroft" has been snappin' necks and cashin' checks since he arrived on I-Day. This natural athlete and self-proclaimed history buff can't say no to a party, and his love of DTA usually ends with him passing out in his second bed, the shower floor. When not acting as his roommates' second conscience, John enjoys invading others' OODA loops. This Philadelphia native often purchases surprise "toys" for his roommates... even if it means a little credit card fraud is required. An honest friend, he's never afraid to tell you you're wrong (actually enjoys it). He has a penchant for finding others' weaknesses and has mastered "faking the funk". Hard as a rock, sharp as a tack, he puts the 'smart' in intelligence. This future spy is probably saving the world right now, but we'll never know it.

Shanon Lavin

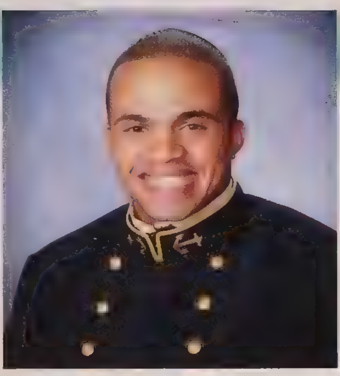
Surface Warfare Officer

If Shanon could have service selected "Navy Dance" she would have, but she will proudly serve as a Surface Warfare Officer instead. This dance pioneer single-handedly started the Naval Academy's first ever Dance Team. She's known for her voluminous hair, bright smile, great taste in music, and jazz walking across the Nimitz Library. It's hard to find her not in the process of choreographing a new routine or simply just dancing when it is or is not appropriate. She came to the Naval Academy on a whim and it changed her life forever—she'll leave with an education, adventures, and a team full of sisters. As she heads out to see the world, she'll remember the advice given to her by her Dad, Leslie Lavin: “"Pull in your clutch, hit the shifter hard and roll the throttle...and don't let the occasional missed shift embarrass you too much." In the words of "Shanjam" Lavin, "just leave it on the dance floor."

John Mackovjak

Navy Pilot

John Michael Mackovjak AKA 'Fat John' is the lesser of the two twins, but we still love his quick wit and hot man cleavage. When not passing out naked in his roommate's bed, John can be found schmoozing with vulnerable, middle-aged, housewives in the greater Annapolis area. Instead of playing real sports, John focused on becoming 'the best at exercising' and joined the Triathlon Team. This Seattle native and future fighter pilot has an endless amount of goals; all of which are sure to be accomplished. John lives by the simple quote, "you have to slay some dragons if you want to get the princess." Well...he's left a long, bloody trail of dragons, but no princess has ever been seen on the other side. This former company commander and butt-egg enthusiast will forever be missed by those he leaves behind

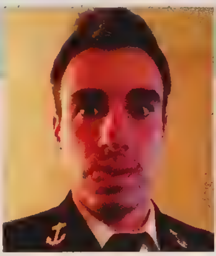


Nicolas Martinelli

Surface Warfare Officer

A man of his word and a man who holds his alcohol, Nic is the epitome of a best friend. Whether it's pacing for the PRT, paying for a Cancun vacation we never took, or stumbling back to a San Juan hotel, Nic is there to assist. As he has trademarked and said at many bars "There are big ships, there are small ships,There are tall ships and long ships, but the best ships are friendships." After many stops on the Mid-Train, he finally found the reptile of his dreams who was the one to finally convince him to spend more time off restriction than on it. Sometimes, when looking at mountains of his stuff that could serve as its own department store, his quiet giggle can be heard. Wherever his lead foot takes him, he'll always live down the street.

Delano Martins



Nuclear Surface Warfare

Delano "Del" Martins is from Jacksonville, Florida where the rest of the Martins clan lives. Del was prepared for anything the Academy had to throw at him, except weather below 70. Unlike the rest of our class Delano is just moving back home after graduation. Delano also owns one of the few Jeeps in the nation whose backseat is ridden in more than the front. It is truly a multi-purpose vehicle. A term was also created in his honor, the "Delano joke." A Delano joke is one that only a 5-year old would laugh at. Once told, it typically leads to silence and confusion. Enough Delano jokes in one day can lead one to lose speaking privileges. One of the few fans of the Jacksonville Jaguars, Del spent most of the NFL season scouting potential 1st round picks in the upcoming draft. Fair winds man. rica!

Zachary Motter

Submarines

Fondly known as "Motorboater" or "Motorhead," Zachary is one of the finest examples of a Midshipman ever produced by the British intermediate school system. A top-form swimmer, he is often seen running or cycling; regularly getting in the way of Annapolitans or exploring the ever-uninteresting Baltimore woods. He enjoys trekking the purple mountain's majesty seeking the wonders of nature...and women. This motivated sailor lives by the well-known motto "Semper Deep", a hard-charging, hard-working member of the only real corps - the submarine corps. His professional demeanor and overwhelming motivation will only get him so far, perhaps to flag grade but no higher.

Michael Murphy

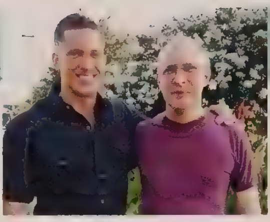
Surface Warfare Officer

This whiskey-tango gentlemen hails from the far-off land of Leb'nin, Tennessee. Home of the famous cracker barrel restaurant in which he was conceived. It is lacking the arid climate and charming locale of the often mispronounced "Lebanon" but makes up for it in greasy food, lifted trucks, excessive drawl and tanktops. This southerner truly lives up to the stereotype with his love for sweet tea, football, and redneck 'murica. Don't let his Southern disposition fool you, Murph is knowledgeable of the world beyond small town Leb'nin and is renowned for his prowess in the art of political debate and his suave charm with the ladies.

Timothy Perkowski

USMC Pilot

"Don't take life too seriously. You won't get out alive."



Daniel Ramos

Nuclear Surface Warfare

There are many ways to describe the ever-changing Daniel Ramos: Partier, European techno-enthusiast, failed criminal mastermind of the Saratoga 7, self-made barber, and Spaniard to name a few. He may be seen at B-Dubs playing trivia under the codename 'Seymour' as bystanders cannot associate a man of mocha complexion with such a name. He is a connoisseur of 'As Seen On TV' products ranging from the Perfect Push-Up to Snuggies. He maintains strong Spanish roots, all of which he acquired in 5 months. Daniel Ramos can be seen EVERY weekend enjoying an adult beverage at the local watering hole. This includes an attempt to circumnavigate the World in 100 beers at Ram's Head Tavern. Fluent in Korean and Mexican, he can often be found reciting political quotations from the famed Ron Paul. So don't worry if he points out the "knick knacks up your sleeve"; he may just shout "MAHALO."

John Reader

Explosive Ordnance Disposal

Very little is known of this enigmatic figure's comings and goings, but tales are told throughout the Brigade of his unrivaled ruggedness. Once a rattlesnake bit him, after five days of excruciating pain, the snake finally died. In museums, he is allowed to touch the art. He once started a fire using only dental floss and water. His sweat is the cure for the common cold. He lives vicariously through himself. He is fluent in all languages, including three that only he speaks. Once while sailing around the world, he discovered a short cut. He was chosen by the EOD community for his ability to shame a bomb into disarming itself with only a disapproving glare. John is a man of many cloaks: a Guatemalan coffee farmer, a cattleman, an Alaskan salmon fisherman, and the Most Interesting Man in the Brigade. Above all, he is a friend without whom my life would be entirely incomplete.

Amanda Shade

Surface Warfare Officer

Amanda Shade hails from the small town of Wilmington, Delaware. Don't let the looks fool you, Amanda can beat up anyone. This 5'0" ball of energy is skilled in the arts of mortal kombat and powerlifting, making her a lethal hybrid of Bruce Lee and Arnold Schwarzenegger. Remember that time she choked out Tommy Cowhey? It was awesome. She loves to wear at least 3 rings on each hand while in uniform and is incapable of styling her hair according to military standards. In her free time she loves to drink pink grape juice, challenging people to pull up contests, and grappling. She suffers from a contagious optimism and is always smiling. She is the nicest, most open-minded person and will be the most SWOtivated officer on the USS Mitscher.

Michael Tauskey

Naval Flight Officer

Michael H. Tauskey hails from San Mateo, California, and has been rocking a sweet high and tight since the time he was a Devil Pup. When not busy socializing in MacD, he can be found recovering from a night in DTA, sleeping in class, telling blonde jokes, standing restriction, or steaming up the wardroom. Though he thought his true calling was as a trigger puller in Afghanistan, this Jimmy Neutron impersonator will make an outstanding NFO. Having spent his entire second class loan on a truck and Bodybuilding.com, it's a good thing the paychecks will soon be rolling in. Besides being almost completely absent-minded, MH is a great friend; he will drop whatever he's doing (probably not homework) to help a shipmate out. "One team, One fight". His protein shaker will forever be heard echoing the p-ways of Bancroft Hall. Thanks for keeping the terrorists from winning, Tausk..."Stay Frosty!"

Michael Watrol

Navy Pilot

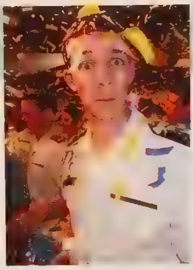
Uncle Mike managed a number of commitments including MAG, VTNA, Honor, Moustaches, and spearheading Operation BARBARA. His resume will surely boast of numerous accomplishments that he hardly put any effort toward, showing his early aptitude for political office. In fact, his steadfast commitment to never doing anything, but always appearing as if he was greatly involved, is probably his greatest accomplishment. The only thing more steadfast is the garbage on his chair, which was never moved in his final 3 years at the Academy. He always claimed he would move it when he finished watching Gossip Girl, which was coincidentally the same day he would quit Pepsi. Unfortunately, his phone only allowed him to set 40 alarms which was never enough to wake him up from his nap, so nothing was actually accomplished. Since a third of his life was spent on the toilet, he simply never had enough time.

Tyler Westover

Surface Warfare Officer

There's no doubt in my mind that Ty Westover is the human incarnation of Goofy. He can turn any frown upside down and bring joy and motivation to any person on Earth, even if he doesn't speak their language. He's going to make an incredible Surface Warfare Officer (probably the best) with his character, dedication, and drive to bring out the best in others. Couldn't have asked for a more awesome friend!

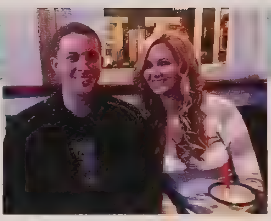
Robert Francisco Yerkes-Medina



Surface Warfare Officer

Robert "Paco" Yerkes-Medina is commissioning from the United States Naval Academy with a major in Naval Architecture and a minor in Excel Spreadsheets. What time wasn't spent in Rickover with the rest of the NARC crew was spent out on the water with YP Squadron. In squadron, he was a stalwart Navigator, the organized Train-O, and the residential Roomba. His guidance and mentorship was always welcomed by the underclass and his passion for the sea and the service will take him far. To you sworrior, we wish the best with fair winds and following seas!

Kendall O'Neill



Navy Pilot

Kendall James O'Neill hails from the clearest of water in the sunshine state and is a midshipman with his priorities in order. Given his questionable, but proven fitness routine of naps and Midstore snacks, Kendall has had an illustrious intramural career here at the academy, bringing home 3 championship trophies. He is an esteemed member of the company and one of the most frequent members to steerage. No stranger to a good sea sparrow, he might be seen making multiple trips in one night to get that free refill. When confined to the room, Kendall might be found watching movies, keeping up with world affairs, or showing off his favorite pair of transformer cuff links and action figures. One of the most efficient workers I have ever met, it has been an honor to be your roommate. Thanks for taking me in… Good luck, fly high.

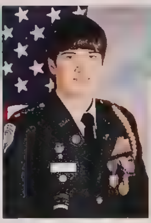
Wesley Althaus



Navy Pilot

From an early age, Wes wanted to be a Navy Pilot. As one of the good ol' boys from Chattanooga, TN, he takes his ability to drink heavily as a God-given right. The only member of 5220 to drink 80 fluid ounces in the time it takes to unroll the duct tape, Wes not only owns more guns than the state of Wyoming, he can also quote any movie ever made in the history of movies.Ever. Having never been accused of being reasonable, Wes would love to tell you about 'seriously the best song he's ever heard' or 'literally the worst meal he's ever eaten at King Hall'. There is no in between. In fact, some say he exaggerates but I don't indulge in such speculation. Props to him and Mel for waiting it out for two years, but he's got places to be. Like the Heineken factory.

Bradley Andre

USMC Pilot

Brad grew up in the beautiful Pacific Northwest, with the Cascade Range right outside his front door. After four years in Maryland, he still isn't used to the obnoxiously high humidity. Whenever he was asked where he was from he'd always receive a look of confusion from the person who asked, as it appears no one knows that Oregon is a state, or where it is on a map. Brad became interested in automobiles and aircraft from an early age, and remain his main interests to this day. On any given weekend you can find him off on a drive, if for no other reason than to just go for a drive. He wouldn't be where he is today without his friends and family, and he looks forward to a long career in aviation.

Brett Beeson

Surface Warfare Officer

Brett -- If we had to choose one word to describe you, it would be a coin toss between "quirky" and "insane." You've survived four years of inappropriate jokes, lights on till the wee hours of the morning, and the incessant request for hugs. In turn, you've given us love, patience (sometimes), Turbo Fire, and hot chocolate. They say you can't pick your family; however, we beg to differ because you are family. Your laughter that fills the room, your angry outbursts over American-Muslim relations, your smile that spreads ear to ear, and your impromptu displays of affection will be missed dearly. If there is anyone that can change the world, we would hedge our bets on you. Your love, compassion, and stubbornness know no bounds -- and for that, we thank you. Thank you for being starry-eyed, goofy, and loveable... but, more importantly, thanks for becoming family. CF&BC

Cameron Benner

Navy Pilot

King Duster. After a traumatic experience as PCC, his future at the Academy came into question. However, he turned his life around and started to focus on the things that really mattered. He now makes sure to keep his car bar fully stocked, and his friends fully hydrated… always making sure he is around to gather photo evidence of the aftermath. His favorite hangover prevention is a bottle of chocolate milk before bed… if he can then keep the splatter off his sheets, desk, computer… If you ever need information on someone, anyone, Private Stalker Benner will be sure to uncover the deepest secrets of their life. #creeper

Teronda Brown

Surface Warfare Officer

A girl of many names, Teronda Nechelle Brown is a true representation of an all-around excellent midshipman: the best of friends, the most supportive of captains, the farthest of throwers, and the most sleepy of English majors. She is someone you want to get to know…even if she might seem like she doesn't want to get to know you. She will always stand for what is right. None of us (ask Jeff Haller) wanted to go against you in pugil sticks. Whether you're T, Weetie, T-Breezy, Coach Little/Medium/Big Dog, Mama T, and/or Pistachio Addict, though, you still can't explain a story without drawing a diagram to save your life. TRI. NAPS '10. God has great plans for you!

Beatrice Joyce Cayaban

Surface Warfare Officer

Maybe by chance, maybe by fate, or perhaps just dumb luck, we got stuck with each other plebe fall. Thank you getting me through the Academy: with bumps, bruises, scars, fits of laughter and tears, angry post-it note wars, late night talks, and adventures to prove it -- we're finally done. So perhaps the days of 0200 chart parties, two-hour public transit trips to Baltimore, pulling all-nighters for futile NARC projects, and screaming over Doctor Who and Sherlock are behind us. We may never again need to "open" locked doors in Rickover, or scramble to undisclosed locations in regulation blue-and-golds for the perfect photo. But bigger things await us. There are mountains to conquer, ocean depths to explore, tea shops to discover, and foreign public transportation to get lost on. 1,660 miles apart, but even more miles of adventures to be had. And so we go! - Cassie

Derek Deeb

USMC Pilot

Born on the sandy shores of Corona CA, where the Germans founded the infamous beer of the same name in 1904, Derek Deeb has been living the SoCal dream ever since. He holds the title of most accomplished beach volleyball player in the Brigade, mostly due to the fact that no one else knew it was an actual sport until he told us. When he's not shredding the courts in some jean shorts, he can be found on his XBOX playing Dungeons and Dragons, Minecraft, or whatever and pretending he is a pirate… which no doubt has had a negative impact on his status as a SoCal chiller. Derek Deeb is the name…Nerd games and Sea Shanties are his game.

Cassandra Fach

Civil Engineering Corps

If there are three words that describe us, they are "partners in crime." We've been friends through everything and have had more than a few adventures along the way. From sauntering like ghosts through the bowels of the Academy to ascending into the heavens of Hawaii, we always managed to stay out of trouble. Brilliant! Right? I still remember when I first ran into you outside your company officer's office, and now you're set to go be a civil engineer with NAVFAC. My little hippy child has (somewhat) grown up. You have no idea how proud of you I am. But just because you're going off to Guam, don't think you're rid of me. I'm harder to shake than that! Just remember, when times get tough, there's an old saying. A phrase of great power and wisdom and consolation to the soul in times of need. Allons-y! JAF

Jorge Garate

Hailing from the land without plumbing, Puerto Rico, Garate has always been always an overachiever (just ask Ramsden). This existential fellow has accomplished a lot: he's filled up his bookcase with leather bound books from Amazon Prime, completely and absolutely quit lifting, spent all his money on designer clothes from Nordstroms, has replaced his bookshelf with tattoo books, and loves Woody Allen (wait, have you ever seen Annie Hall?). His trips to Spain brought many valuable experiences including a 3-in-1 back door deal. His short temper (especially with Torres) and many obsessions will always be treasured by all of us. Whatever he does in this world, whether it be the Navy, a writer, a lawyer, or a drunken, pissed of Puerto Rican, we will always have a special place for him in our hearts #makeroom. Love, The dusters of 7.

Roberto Garcia

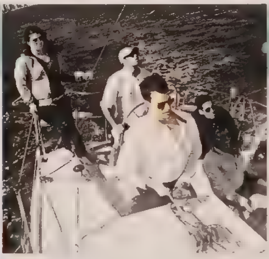
Surface Warfare Officer

BOOM#navyboxing

Andrew Geisler

USMC Ground

Hailing from the majestic suburbs of Pittsburgh, PA, Andrew Geisler has been combat sleeping since his days in the D.E.P. A classical education in photography at an all-girls art school has prepared him well to grab the reigns of the 7th Company Mustangs, sign hundreds of chits, and move lacrosse goals as Reg Sports Boss. From his humble origins as Ramsden's favorite… and Knollmeyer's (Come Say Hi) first salute… MIDN Geisler has carried on a legacy of true excellence. "On a scale of 1 to Andy Geisler how down are you gonna get at Fed House tonight?"



Randall Gregorius

USMC Ground

Your eyes, beautiful.

Call me back Catalina.

You are not your eyes.

-J.P.H.

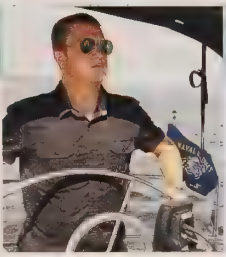
Shane Hass

Navy Pilot

Too bad there's nothing to write about this guy. Shane always drank in moderation and remained in control of his actions. Oh wait… Enter the Creature. The Creature lives by the motto "No Shirt, No Shoes, No Phone, No wallet, No Dignity, No Problem." When the Creature comes out, all bets are off. He has taken Shane on many delightful rides, including free rides back to base against his will. Although his wallet may go missing, the Creature can always count on a piece of gum for ID. His favorite color is red "Hay Temple," and his favorite saying is all aboard the Shane Train, next stop Pound Town.

Aaron Hill

Navy Pilot



General A.P. Hill obviously mistook YP for VT since this future Naval Aviator can regularly be seen patrolling the Severn with his proudly displayed YP Squadron Commodore star. As 5220's permanent roommate of the week , A-A-ron can often be found honing his military skills as he micros his macro and bests the company at Super Mario Smash Brothers. As the club soccer goalie, Aaron loves to catch DC United games, particularly after a meal at Baja Fresh. Aaron's athleticism is unparalleled on the soccer field, but he has some issues on the ski slopes… just saying. Aaron regularly corrects his roommates on topics such as computer engineering, pool etiquette, and the proper usage of good and well—which he does very good, or well, or goodly. Who knows? As Aaron looks to the sky, there's no doubt his quick wit and positive attitude will take him far. You couldn't ask for a better friend or roommate.

Elizabeth Hoerner

Submarines

Roses are red, violets are blue...John. We have 99 problems and Bits ain't one. You have reinvented the jersey turnpike dance move. Thanks for being such a great team captain and for raising the team's cumulative GPA. Class secretary, Patagonia enthusiast and driven, you'll be incredibly successful officer. Your hard work on the team is inspire to us everyday. Thanks for always putting us first and showing us the true meaning of selfless. We are so proud of you for being selected for submarines... can't wait to hear from you when you surface. (F.E.W.S.)

Steven Jordan

SEALs

Scuba Steve Jordan, slamming down beers since 19..wait no 20…well we're still working on it. Most of Stinky Steve's efforts have been focused on 100-mile races…leaving little time for the ladies, or normal social interactions for that matter. While Slimy Steve may be amongst a few Mids with a 100-miler under his belt, he most definitely is the only one who still drives a 4-door hatchback. Sleepy Steve is great to bring to a party with limited sleeping options. Give him enough sips of ginger ale and he'll lie flat on his face in a stone-cold slumber, just so his boys can take the beds and couch. Scumbag Steve can be found in the corner of the bar, making sure none of his boys settle for those hard 5's in Philly. A shepherd of sorts, Steve never leads the Wolfpack astray.

John Karam

Lebanese Navy

This Lebanese National has come along way since stepping foot on American Soil: From shaving his head over plebe summer with a straight razor, to Syrian beauty fishing, drug runs to Columbia, overcoming a hernia, inviting a squirrel to get a nut, "Prudente", and cougars, he has taken advantage of all that America has to offer. After he finishes his term in the Lebanese Navy, he plans on accepting his position as the head bouncer at Fed House where he is an honorary member and manager.

Dylan Kelly

Navy Pilot

Dylan "Beer-Muscles" Kelly is the definition of all bark and no bite. Weighing in at a whopping 135 pounds, he is known for using his quick wit and Strong-Island tough guy tendencies when confronting threats. Dylan "Pear-body" Kelly is real life proof that, contrary to popular belief, you in fact ARE NOT what you eat. The under-cover, soon to be Wolf of Wall Street's diet consists of hot pockets and Long-Island Iced Teas. When he's not crying about another Islanders loss, you'll find him taking a nap during sports period or sticking future Navy SEALs in the face. However, if you ever need help with homework, Dylan will be the first person to act like he'll help, and then not help at all. But don't be misled. "Fists of Fury" Kelly is as a dominant force when it comes to hookin' deep sea giants and upholding the standards of brotherhood.

Ann Kitzmiller

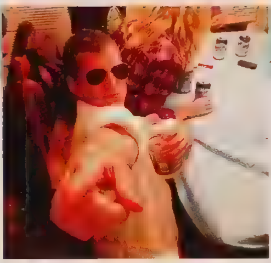
Nuclear Surface Warfare

Looking for Annie? Try searching Dahlgren, Alumni, Nimitz or Sampson, the Rotunda Chapel, heck – the real Chapel, Georgetown, or any room in Bancroft except her own, unless of course it's after 2230 (because then she's asleep). She's always fashionably late yet still arrives in higher fashion than anyone else. Annie is your go-to girl for anything concerning paper editing, sundresses, international travel, ball gowns, history, saris, classic movies, cocktail dresses, cooking, baking, and list making. She finds any opportunity to travel, and her naturally outgoing personality has made her friends from Morocco to Hong Kong. Her gregariousness is often mistaken for flirtation however, which has led to more than a few disappointed beaus during her time here at the academy. In reality, though, no one can ever stay mad at Annie Kitzmiller because she truly is one of the most naturally lovely people you'll ever meet, both inside and out.

Christian Link

USMC Pilot

Always a fighter, Christian Link challenged himself throughout NAPS and the Academy, taking on tough tasks, enduring Naval Architecture, and standing firm with his sense of right and wrong. A daredevil at heart, known to be a spear fisher, dumpster diver, kite boarder, and a man who would push his body to the limits in any field that he took. As a member of 7th company, he was always there to help those who asked and to go above and beyond what was asked of him. It was his actions that saved 5th wing from the smoking microwave and the terrified mate frozen with inaction. He will join the ranks of the Marine Aviators and terrify the enemy as he protects the ones on the ground. To define who he is in a single phrase-"No better friend. No worse enemy." Semper Fi in all that you do.



Eric Markovich

Navy Pilot

During his time at USNA, Eric Markovich continually set out to differentiate himself from your stereotypical midshipman. While his methods may be extreme, nobody can argue with the results brought on by his impressive Goodwill collection of Hawaiian shirts, flamboyant maroon Toms, and of course his infamous leather jacket. Despite the minor technicality that he didn't actually live in 5220, Eric has fooled many a visitor (and his own roommates) into thinking it was his permanent residence. Eric was a student of computer science but, more importantly, a student of life. As such, he never let a little thing like homework get between him and experiencing the world. Or, you know, playing hours upon hours of Super Smash Brothers. Whatever floats your plane. Eric's uncanny ability to talk his way out of a Turkish dumpster will undoubtedly come in handy in his future career as a Naval Aviator.

Derrick McCanless

Navy Pilot

Hailing from cartel land, this future aviator loves to spend his time walking on the beach, big cat hunting, and yelling things out of the shipmate van. Derrick never gives up on his dreams and is even more persistent when he is trying to make a phone call after a couple of rounds outside of Pussers. If you have never heard of Skid Row, just leave. If your last name rhymes with "De La Cruz" you will eat this Oreo and like it! Sundays will usually be spent in front of the television watching the Broncos win anything since John Elway #Getalife. Nonetheless, Derrick will be marrying the love of his life (In-N-Out) after graduation, and also Jenna. But seriously we wish you a wonderful future and a great person to spend the rest of your life with. Who know, he might even make admiral one day…

Lyndon Moorehead

SEALs

"All men dream, but not equally. Those who dream by night in the dusty recesses of their minds wake up in the day to find it was vanity, but the framers of the day are dangerous men, for they may act their dream with open eyes, to make it possible." Awake.

Connor Murphy

Surface Warfare Officer

He hails from the South Side of Chicago… and he'll make sure you know it #actuallyfromSC. He dances his way to girl's hearts, but it's just too bad that he can't close… just like DA BEARS can't win a game. Connor has an intimate love for trashcans, cops, and Virginia Beach. Regardless, we all know that you'll make an awesome SWO, and just remember if your sister's roommate doesn't work out, maybe Bertha will.

John Powers

Medical Corps

This old salty bastard has been shoe dancing his way to a beautiful hairless covenant with the almighty ever since we first laid eyes upon him way back in twenty-ten. Little did we know that his sole purpose in life is to heal the sick....and eat eggs. Johnboy, we'd like to thank you for waking us up at the crack of dawn every Sunday for four years. You've taught us that a clean heart is worth more than a clean closet. Thank you John, for sharing your wisdom. We love you. MY HEART! PS - make sure to warn Bits about the wall effect....and good luck finding your toothpaste.

Mark Powers

Navy Pilot

His birth certificate reads Mark, but to his friends he is PAM. He's got the upper body of Hercules and the legs of Bambi. No, he doesn't wear clown shoes, that's just the illusion effect from his dainty ankles. His hobbies: writing papers, lifting legs, and compulsive gambling. You name a casino, Mark will give you the date and time he was thrown out of it. Girls love going out to dinner with him so they can finish the rest of his food. You can always count on Mark to lend you a shirt in case somebody throws up on yours. His famous abs workout and tanning oil will have you ready for spring break in no time. Mark has set himself up for a successful future and will make a great Navy Pilot.

Christopher Ramos

USMC Ground

When he isn't in MacD completing his daily regimen of 150 pull ups, Chris can normally be found in Pusser's swooning Brazilian Au Pairs. Back at NAPS, Chris could be found sleeping at the position of attention and ironing his boot socks. That all changed once he decided to take the plunge and study in Japan for a semester. He came back to the United States as a new man.. he had style, confidence and a new outlook on the dating world. Personally, I just think it was a lack of protein powder available to him in Japan. Either way, Chris certainly found his niche during his tenure at the Naval Academy and succeeded as a Powerlifter, Mathematician and Japanese scholar. Above all, Chris is a friend for life. His unwavering loyalty and good sense of humor make him someone you want to have around.

Christopher Reynolds

Submarines

Chris Reynolds made a lasting impression on us when he announced he was from Fort Meade. With his hood voice, slick shoes, and many swaggery ballcaps, this intimidating fellow has done little but instill absolute fear in the entire Brigade. His MOOW watch standing reminds people of someone usually referred to as Fuhrer. He can be found valiantly yelling at restrictees, yelling at restrictees, or yelling at restrictees. When he's not yelling at restrictees, he proudly rocks his YP pin, blows his tuba, and swims to keep his cardio up (yes, all at once). He is a great man with a great pair of eyes to show it. Soon he'll be underwater, where his outstandingly long arms will allow him to convert into his spirit animal: the dolphin. We wish you the best of luck, and we are sure you'll be a swell submariner.

Thomas Schofer

Navy Pilot

When Tommy showed up to the academy he had yet to finish a beer… and he still hasn't. Since plebes aren't allowed to eat in drydock he had to take his Fries in Lejeune. As he made his way through the Academy he lost his dog… and still has never found it. He will never forget to remind his friends when they have had enough… baby, seriously… you've had enough… please. Popped a beer, vomited in his rack. WOO! Anxiously awaiting a new development in chap stick almost as much as his friends are anxiously awaiting him to wash his workout gear. We all love you Tommy and us dogs are never far from your side! #PCB2012 #hideYOcellphones
Love, Navy Water Polo

Colin Schuhlein

Navy Pilot

Our fearless Battalion Commander Colin Schuhlein has earned his reputation through his hard work, loyalty and level headedness. Always the epitome of selflessness and caring he makes everyone he meets feel like family and will never turn you away. We were fearful along with his father that his dedication and perfection as YP Commodore may sway him towards SWO but his true aviation bloodline prevailed and he will be souring through the skies as a Naval Aviator. As a member of 7th company his compassion and selflessness is renowned; no one would dare hit his room during army week out of pure respect. There is no doubt in my mind that Colin will be a spectacular leader, aviator and Naval officer. He is capable of excelling at anything he puts his mind to. A passionate leader, an understanding mentor and a true loving friend never forget "RUN FOR THE SUNRISE!"

Jonathan Shepherd

Surface Warfare Officer

" ..... I come to this place of my ancestors, and I remember. Like these blossoms, we are all dying. To know life in every breath, every chip of tea, every life we take. The way of the warrior.... that is bushido." May the fighters heart never depart you.

Mark Steblein

Navy Pilot

A rugged surfer out of southern Texas, Mark brought his love for the ocean with him to the academy and invested it in the world's easiest major. When he's not busy getting stabbed by ex-roommates, Mark spends his time rock climbing, brewing ales, and growing forests big enough to make surfboards out of. It's not uncommon to see this stud strolling around covering his manhood with nothing but a speedo and an Alaskan lumberjack hat. Dressing this provocatively allowed him to attract an amazing foreign girl, one which he will need to zip up his naval flight suit and brush up on a dying language just to visit her in Norway or Albania or … wherever. Mark truly does have what it takes to become a great naval officer; perhaps someday he'll even have enough stripes revisit his giant sequoia—Little Mikey —in the Supt's garden.

Emily Strong

Surface Warfare Officer

Everyone's favorite redhead since Maureen O'Hara, Emily is the nicest soulless ginger the Brigade has ever seen. If you've seen her cinematic biography "Brave" in theaters, you know this sassy Stowaway puts "Army Strong" to shame. If you ask her to "sing for me!" you'll be in for a treat! Emily's star has shone brilliantly throughout her four years in the music department. Maybe it's all the reading she did as an English major, but Emily is an old soul with wisdom beyond her years, for as we know… not every woman in the world is a Yente. She's the first person her friends look to for advice, and although we don't always heed it, she hasn't been wrong yet. Emily is headed to San Diego for SWO-tastic adventures aboard the USS Anchorage where her bright smile will light up the lives of everyone who crosses her path. True? True.

Ian Sugg

Submarines

In his four years at the Naval Academy, Ian "Hottest-Man-Alive" Sugg has set a new world record for most time wasted watching Youtube videos of cats. When he's not home schralping some luscious pow-pow in the beautiful Colorado back country, he's displaying his dominance in either the Engineering Department or on the Rugby field. Scientists have recently discovered that "Soooge" has the ability to convert foods containing pure sugar into rock hard muscle. It seems "Deedans" only weakness is his inability to not poop his pants...people don't forget. When he's not tractor beaming every woman he passes and pretending he's an real gamer, Ian enjoys letting out the most intoxicating, albeit obnoxious laugh you've ever heard; probably at something that's not even funny. But when it comes to friendship, there is no rival, for "Deedle-dat-look-at-that" has imbued within himself the highest ideals of chillness and brotherhood.

Zachary Tingley

USMC Pilot

The academy has changed Zak Tingley in many ways. Gone is the doo-rag, Express Jeans, and rosary necklace… in is the beanie, RVCA shirt, and Henley. But just like the racing stripe on his Mustang, one thing that hasn't changed about Zak is his desire to be huge. Equally as likely to sting a corner, score a sick try, or melt a girl's heart at ACME with what he claims are dance moves, Zak is never one to disappoint. After –the- Fact Zak has many regrets in life, but one thing he definitely does not regret is that 7th buff chick. Apple Zak's 5-to-5 chill-to-pull ratio is rivaled only by the ease with which he pounds quadruple shots. The Man, the Myth, the Legend…Tight Tingley.

Jason Torres

Navy Pilot

Dubbed the 5220 fidoucher and keeper of coin, Jason waited to learn the difference between a barrel and a keg until after he ordered 3,968 fluid ounces of beer for four men and one weekend. His exuberant financial responsibility led to his $42,000 Chevy chick magnet which, along with his flight suit and Shiek's short hop f-air, will help him pull in all the single ladies in Pensacola. There he will continue his legacy of never having turned down a shot as well as his legacy of brown outs and early nights (no correlation). Having the brains of a mediocre Electrical Engineer and the perseverance required to stick to his guns despite being wrong in literally every argument will serve Jason well in his naval career.

Christopher Voss

Navy Pilot

With his eyes focused on the heavens and a head full of ideas, Chris has constantly set himself up for success from day one. His focus and drive is unmatched and has led to his selection as a Naval Aviator. To Chris, the sky is not the limit: his dream is to shoot for the stars as a cosmonaut in the future. And if anyone has a chance, it's him. Showers in space will be just as quick as they are for him back in Bancroft … except if it's for two. Chris is a phenomenal scholar-athlete who makes the effort to ensure that 7th company will be just as successful as he was during his four years. I hope to serve with an exceptional performer such as Chris in the future. I hope to see him amongst the stars.

Erin Walsh

Surface Warfare Officer

Erin Walsh is a dynamite in the hall, on the lacrosse field, and in the streets of DTA. Hailing from the great state of California (and she won't let you forget it), Erin left the best coast for a quick 4-year stint at Canoe U, where she has made her mark in countless ways. A typical day in the life of "E" includes predicting the weather during her oceanography classes in the morning, getting huge in the Wes B weight room at lunchtime, stopping plays and causing turnovers on Farragut turf in the afternoons, and presiding over honor boards by night. A scholar, an athlete, and a professional--and the only four striper with the fabled black N--she has taken Annapolis by storm. Even more impressive is dedication, compassion, and fierce sense of friendship. Don't mess with her--a point she made exceedingly clear to the Class of 2017 during her tour as Delta Company Commander. Erin is a force to be reckoned with, and will make her friends, family, and classmates proud with her future Naval service.

Johnny Watson

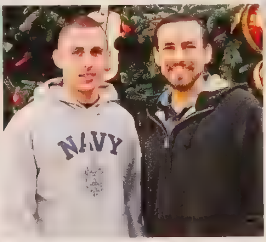
SEALs

After a long five year journey, Johnny Watson departs from the Naval Academy leaving behind a shining illustration of what not to do as a midshipman. Addicted to the limelight, Watson has spent his undergraduate career making sure that he is being constantly accepted. Most defining of Watson is his taste for things that are of no significance, including: dubstep, wearing flamboyant clothing, references to the college Greek life of which he was never a part of, browsing Facebook to impress girls that have no interest in him, and letting everyone know when he intends on "going hard in the paint." When he isn't nose deep in Britta's Facebook page Watson can be found at ACME asking others to buy him RedBull-vodkas. Despite the daily ribbing he receives, anyone who knows Johnny can assure you that he will leave his mark in the fleet, bringing his loyalty and hard work everywhere he goes.

Timothy Winkler

USMC Pilot

Shabbat Shalom - When the sun goes down, Timmy Winkler is on the prowl. Don't let his reserved and quiet demeanor fool you. Between his nightly trips into town, maxed out credit cards, and unquenchable thirst (luckily his con locker is well-stocked), he is the model Midshipman, but really. Tim spent a suspiciously long amount of time with a certain Senior Enlisted, but assures everyone it was purely professional. Any CMOD can testify to the frequency of the words: "Mate, go get the XO." On a more serious note, we know you'll make an outstanding Devil Dog, and the Corps is lucky to have you.



Yoseph Yoo

Navy Pilot

Hailing from the only place that matters #socal, this fine young man has a two beer limit #asianglow. So strong is the glow that his sister outdrinks him #shots and he ends up routinely ignoring beautiful women #ks. This sensitive individual has developed a strangely intimate relationship with his tech that grows with buying Apple products; it is like a blossoming flower that cannot be tamed by nature. With his earphones in and his computer on, you never know if he's listening to you, doing homework, or sleeping (but actually, he's always sleeping). There is no limit to what this young man can accomplish--he is soon to replace Dennis Rodman as official ambassador to the greatest country in the world. We are all sure that Yoseph will go on to become a great pilot.

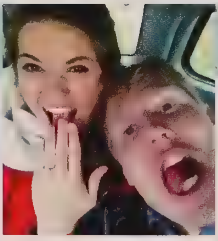
John Curtis Andrews

USMC Pilot



David Arnold

Navy Pilot

Don't let that innocent smile and friendliness fool you; Big Dave Arnold has mean skills on both the soccer field and volleyball court that will always be remembered at USNA. You'd be surprised that Dave has a musical touch as well, hitting high notes or spitting out freestyles on the spot with his buddies. Dave has a forward looking future as well, and his class ring is not the only ring that he has purchased as of recent (hint hint) Dave's a super fly guy, and there is no better community that fits him than aviation. Big Dave will be a guy that we all will miss, and behind the lanky legs and the luxurious flow there's a great person that anyone would love to be around.

Parker Bailey

Naval Flight Officer

Parker Bailey is a lazy student, but a studious worker. He takes every job given seriously and performs it efficiently. Parker gets along with everyone he comes across and is someone you can depend on. He takes cares of those he cares about and is willing to do anything for them. Parker is also a huge ravens fan. He religiously checks his Ravens app just to read about what is going on with the team. He has a great sense of humor and considers himself to be a good listener, although if you ask him what you said ten minutes later he doesn't remember. Parker can usually be found in his room streaming Netflix and counting down the days until the weekend. To those who know him best he's described as having a great memory for random facts, which he plans to showcase on Jeopardy someday.

Jacqueline Barnum

USMC Ground

Passionate, driven, dedicated: a few of the many words to describe Jackie 'Bean' Barnum. But let's not forget outrageously funny. Her ability to turn every conversation into a song or dance while she's cleaning the room is a talent above many others. Her hilarious Disney impressions and story-telling capabilities would leave even Amy Poehler and Tina Fey jealous. She's a true triple threat: sing, dance, and lift. She's one of the masterminds behind the very successful Crossfit Blue & Gold Team and could squat her roommate Kellie (roughly 110lbs) if need-be. This future yut-yut has organization skills 'off the wall'—but literally—her charts, calendars, and post-it notes usurped the walls around her and turned an ordinary room into a working "command center." Joking aside, she single-handedly made 8th company the second-best in the Brigade because of her dedication to training. She's an astonishing person, friend, roommate, daughter, girlfriend, sister, and now Marine. Semper fidelis, Bean. We love you.

John Blum

Navy Pilot

There are few people as old as John Thomas Blum. With his old age have come wisdom, senior citizen discounts, forgetfulness, and an ever increasingly large bald spot. John's age has not stopped him from reliving his younger days though. He can regularly be found trying to fit in with the younger generation at the local DTA hotspots, and has even been seen wearing clothes popular in the early 80s. When not reliving the "good-ole-days," John can be found running parts of an ultra marathon and procrastinating on homework already well past due. As 8th Company Commander, John was able to share his many eons worth of knowledge with his shipmates. Imparting lessons like "restriction can be fun for company commanders too" and "why save money when you can spend it," John has taught each of the meaning of priorities and the importance of friendship.

Elizabeth Corcoran

Submarines

Even though she originally mistook herself for a sorority girl, it didn't take long for this reptile to realize she was cold-blooded. With a stare that kills and a dangerously sharp mind, Liz easily struck fear in...pretty much everyone. If her high class rank and rowdy father didn't intimidate you, her tornado of a room with five full bags of laundry, clothes hanging everywhere, every designer shoe on earth, several empty boxes of Cheerios, and a couple of the latest Lego sets usually did the trick. Queen Elizabeth's reign will not simply end at the Academy - With the addition of her favorite SWO-daddy, Lizardbreath has high hopes to take the Fleet by storm and pop out a few mini-Rickover's along the way. She's the best friend you'd ever have and the most difficult date you'd never want. Hooyah Liz! The Submarine Corps better be ready for what's coming.

Daniel Cozad

Navy Pilot

Daniel "N* Khoz" Cozad has been trying to live up to his dad's motto of "if you're breathing and you ain't drinking, you ain't $#!t" during his time here at the Academy. Khoz can typically be found at Acme's or Pusser's despite his best efforts to save money and avoid drinking in DTA. In between drinks he casually stalks hot bitties on facebook and plans trips to schools with the hottest sororities. Back in the hall Cozad dedicates most of his time to picking berries and saving truffula trees to preserve economic balance in the world. He also enjoys lifting butthole and always strives to get the most out of his workouts. Khoz will fit in perfectly when he moves to Pensacola, being a Florida native he will thrive living the life of a beach bum drinking beer and burning his skin burgundy red in the sun.

Christian Dane

Naval Flight Officer

Dane comes from the land of ice and snow, with a thousand lakes and sub zero cold. No wonder he spent every winter morning in Maryland thinking, "it feels like spring today." With his "Mega Mind," Dane became valedictorian of his homeschool class, divided by zero successfully while participating in plebe summer, and maintained a higher than 3.5 QPR as a physics major, all while being in bed before 2200 every night. It has been rumored he achieved his great academic feats by following the advice set forth by Albert Einstein, "If the facts don't fit the theory, change the facts." Dane, is a one of a kind friend. His genuine compassion, morals, and faith make it a privilege to serve alongside him and to have him as a friend. His service in the NFO community will benefit this country and everyone he meets.

Grant Dubyak

Naval Flight Officer

If you've ever had a conversation with Grant "Dub-Sak" Dubyak, then you're already fully aware of his tactful and articulate way with words. He is about as cuddly as a porcupine bread with a honey badger. Don't be quick to judge, however, because 4 years of braces at USNA would make cold souls out of all of us. He and his best friend Emile will be heading to Florida as Naval Flight Officers. Finding time to work on his manners shouldn't be a problem as a back-seat tag along. Keep an eye on this one; he'll surprise you if you get to know him. Grant will surely be an Admiral someday, sharing his expertise and honest mentoring skills with the entire Navy. Good luck in the Fleet, buddy!

Zachary Duncavage

USMC Pilot

Conceived from the seed of Zeus, Zacharias DunSavage, ruled over all lesser beings while atop Mount Olympus. He descended the mount only to lead training in the Spartan agoge. Hammer, shot, and discus were his weapons of choice to destroy the feeble milquetoasts of West Point and other insignificant challengers of the Patriot League champion. When Lord Zacharias is not parading his marbled figure and pet python, he sports his varsity sweater laden with countless wilting stars, trophies from his conquests and a testament to his poor seamstress skills. However, this demigod is not without an Achilles heel. Despite being blessed with the strength of Zeus, his flight of foot is no greater than that of the crippled Hephaestus and his pre-PFT chronic back pain would make Ephialtes of Trachis weep. He will make a fine Marine Pilot and follow in his earthly father's footsteps to Top Gun and insha'Allah not fall victim to the plotline of Burning Blue. It's been a great four years brother and noble warrior and may we once again clasp forearms and feel each other's warm embrace. Strength and Honor.

Michael Fineis

USMC Pilot

Mike Fineis is the golden child; a man to which fathers beg their daughters to marry. A man bound by honor, creed, and a code of loyalty that endears all those around him. He is as true to duty as the needle is to the pole; a leader of action yet patient. The first to buy a round for all his brothers in the bar and then responsibly leaves when he's had enough. Yes, the soul known as Mike Fineis does in fact leave, however his body does not. It is instead taken over by another evil entity…The FINEISER! Satan's closest minion who is nights away from permanent control, the Fineiser can only be controlled by brute force or 100cc of industrial grade horse tranquilizer. Headbutts, physical abuse, emotional trauma, demonic speech, and  slurs are common side effects of this demon's possessions. If not seen doing push-ups on the curb, this belligerent creature will likely be found studying the language of the enemy. Hell of a four years together Mike. You definitely put the devil in devil dog. Semper Fi Brother.

Sarah Fogleman

Medical Corps

She's the only one who'd walk across a fire for you! This argyle vested blond bomb shell is the total package. Brains, brawn, and a perfectly shirt-stayed rack! When she's not tearing up the lacrosse field, wrecking it in the weight room, or crushing books in the library you can find SA zipping around in her sporty red convertible. What she lacks in pop culture exposure or any sense of rhythm she makes up for in Karaoke enthusiasm at Castle Bay! Don't let her know how she really performs or else you'll be at the mercy of her dreaded hammer fist (which earned her straight A's in martial arts). She wasn't always in the great Eight, but it didn't take long for her to warm up and become the raucous Adel impersonator we all know and love! And 3-2 pedestrians surely would not have been as entertained without the raucous nightly outburst with her better half!

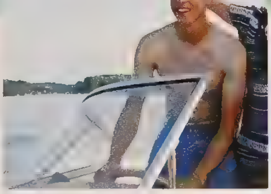
Robert Fusco III

USMC Ground

Midshipman Robert James Fusco III, a Mathematics-Operations Research Major from the 8th Company, has received a Service Assignment of United States Marine Corps Ground Officer. Midshipman Fusco is living proof that contrary to popular belief, spending over 6 years in college does not automatically earn you a graduate degree. Never relenting in his goal of pursuing a commission into the United States military, his path towards May 23 2014 has been anything but typical. From professional hockey to bobsledding to traveling the world to the day to day life at the Academy, he would not have been able to get this far without the endearing support of his friends and family. He especially and with much love would like to thank Mom, Dad, Cara, Zach, and Ally. He would also like to leave the Brigade with the following thought; "Nobody has ever ellipticaled into combat, jog it home".

Gregory Gerlach

Submarines



"Grandpa Greg" and "Mr. Safety" are names that will quickly pull this panic-y physics major from his books about reading books. Often his thoughts focus on the world's pressing problems like air mattresses and electricity (or is sailing a varsity sport?), but occasionally he is convinced to teach proper winch handling procedures—displaying that he is the manifestation of precision. Whether taking the time to laugh until crying about some ridiculous story, or dissecting the ethics of an officer's decision, he is always aware of what is most important—ping pong. On many occasions he has offered advice to his friends, been willing to stand up for his teammates, and he has always dedicated himself to doing the right thing. He will claim that he really is not that great, but his example has made me strive to be a better person and officer. Thank you, Greg.

Kellie Hall

Surface Warfare Officer

It was I-day when a flash flew by with a piercing scream of "Go Navy Sir". The tiny Kellie Rene Hall in her sub 3 minute mile had just run by. This brown haired beauty has taken over USNA with all around pizzazz, pop, sizzle, and style. If her spunky, fiery and tenacity didn't lure you in when she was a mere young underclassmen, then her fashionista wardrobe caught your eye as a 2/C. Many people wonder how she still stayed close to 100 pounds with a diet of Oreos and McDonalds, but it all made sense when she strutted her stuff on the dance floor with the first ever Navy Dance Team – what are the chances?! Between being the only real one and only PAO and her love of googling pictures of pandas, Miss Hall certainly has made an impact on almost everyone she has met. Never has a person had a bigger heart that will be there for you whenever you need and be able to whip your ass in shape when you're in the wrong. And when in doubt, you can always count on her to blast America's Top 40 music hits every morning when you wake up.

Jeffrey Haller

Navy Pilot

When he's not at the gym, this solid hunk of meat spends most of his time jamming out to 90's music and watching lion documentaries. When his friends are fortunate enough to be graced with his presence, Jeff is a blast to hang out with and a great wingman. His artificial surfer tone makes every lady within earshot squeal with excitement. A few fun facts about Jeff: he will never pass up an opportunity to crack a joke about his dickie roommate, he is always up to watch a Navy Women's Lacrosse game, the Shipmate van has permanently blocked his phone number, and he's made it his personal mission to tell every lowly berry picker how much harder his major is than theirs. Jeff has a bright future ahead of him and will make a great Navy Pilot.

Brandon Hooper

Navy Pilot

Brandon Hooper is a Southern Boy from Atlanta, GA who can always be found saying offensive things before thinking. This former triathlete turned CrossFitter traded in his running shoes, bike and swim trunks for muscle and freakishly fast jump-roping skills. If you need monetary advice, Brandon is your man. He spent his entire 2/C loan on his class ring! He also spends his entire paycheck at Whole Foods...every weekend. This underachiever has a 6.0 QPR, is the Varsity Aero team captain, and was top two for his Aviation OOM. When he isn't at his sponsor's house, he is on his way over. When he finally gets his wings he can fly to China and make some poor choices. With his dry and sarcastic sense of humor, he always enjoys having a good time with his friends, unless they're going to Jiffy Lube Live. Good luck Hoops! "Cut your legs off!"

Alexander Kavall

Surface Warfare Officer

Hailing from the proud state of Connecticut, Mr. Kavall brought a distinguished taste for outdoorsmanship, fine coffee, and dirty rap that would make even 2 Chainz blush and run for church. Since the moment he stepped foot in Canoe U, he made his presence known with his charming facial expressions and comforting words that left many a shipmate asking, "what?" A man of refined intellect you could find him on any given evening roaming the halls of Maury, tackling the school's most daunting engineering problems, such as how conducive to graduation Netflix and Steerage can be, or how his role model (and likely relative) Mikhail Gorbachev could have torn down the wall with just a little more bass from his speakers. Yes, this renaissance statesman has grown tired of Mother B, destined for greatness and perhaps a few minor lawsuits out on the waves. SWO on Alex.

Marcus Kinney

Navy Pilot

James Mackovjak

Navy Pilot

James Matthew Mackovjak biked across America. He is a man committed to excellence…excellence in academics, in sports, in his hipster wardrobe, and in his ability to bum rides off every friend he has. In school, he has managed to maintain a 4.0 in his JV major while tirelessly reapplying to scholarships meant for high school seniors. When not studying, James can be found investing time in his other hobbies such as having heat strokes during sprint triathlons, buying clothes, nominating himself for awards, and telling people about how he biked across America. Some of James' most prestigious accomplishments include serving as 2nd Battalion Commander, having more shoes than a shoe store, biking across America, and winning the Got Milk Scholarship for having biked across America. His excellence is unwavering and his future looks bright as a future Navy Pilot.

Shelby Mass

Naval Flight Officer

Shelby became the pride of Calvert County, Maryland when she boldly ventured to a life of service at the Naval Academy. Or, at least she was until being overshadowed by the legendary emu hunter. During her four years at the Academy, Shelby made immense contributions. She could often be overheard yelling "KILL", whether it was on the volleyball court or outside her hatch during make-up pro quizzes. She's known her place was in the sky as an aviator, long before she spent time on the open seas (and Davey Jones' locker claimed her military ID). A great midshipman, and an even better friend, there is no doubt that Shelby Mass will make waves in flight school and enjoy a successful career as a Naval Flight Officer.

Luke Moragne

Naval Flight Officer

Saree Moreno

Naval Flight Officer

My name is Shane Francis Quinn and I was born to be a Devil Dog. I'm as fearless as they come. I have trained my body, mind, and soul to prepare for the Corps. After a night of drinking, I make sure to do push-ups in T-Court for Chesty. I'm a good Christian, I believe in the Father, Son, Holy Spirit, and the Corps. I have battled invisible alligators at a golf course pond in Florida, and I have beaten a man with my words for a hot pocket, while naked. I am ready for any challenge Chesty can throw at me, as long as he doesn't throw it from my left. I don't look left. Armed with my awkward charm, boyish complexion, and dazzling blue eyes, the world is my oyster, raaah.

Kenneth Motsay

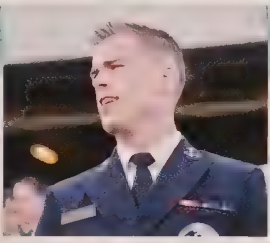
USMC Ground

Never before has so much come in such a small package. Growing up in the throngs of Baltimore, the short trip to Annapolis changed his life. Scared to death of water, Ken will be heading to Quantico to learn how to get big. Not only is he challenged vertically, he also can't distinguish colors. Or do math. His other accomplishments include going weeks without shaving and still having nothing to show for it, hallucinating while running 100 miles (the second attempt), and working out more than going to class. While he may look like a small child, Ken will surely YUT YUT RAH KILL!

Arin Nunes

USMC Ground

Rule number one in Arin's philosophy on life: Don't take a PRT sick. Rule number two: The best way to prep for a night out is to wax your eyebrows and correctly fold your pocket square. Being the best at what he did always came natural to Arin, and his times drilling the Brigade as Drill Officer were some of the best in living memory. His friends will always know him as one of the most genuine, caring people you could ever meet, and he is no doubt destined for greatness, both in the Marine Corps and beyond. Besides, the circle expects nothing less.



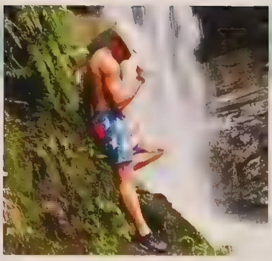
Brendan Obranski

USMC Pilot

The myth, the man, the legend: the "Bro-branski." A proud Connecticut native, Brendan is well-known for his gorgeous blonde "flow," captivating blue eyes, bright orange jeep, love for IPA's, and overall "bro" attitude. Like his father, he's no stranger to restriction and has sculpted his badass image via his max conduct offense and throwing punches in the boxing ring (before he threw one punch too hard and had to retire). A proud inhabitant of Mac D, Obro spends most of free time lifting heavy objects to solidify his masculine physique. His decision to go Marine Corps was largely based on the fact that they're ripped, beautiful, aggressive human beings. When asked for his most inspiring quote he often refers back to his 8th grade yearbook when he quoted Joe Namath: "I can't wait until tomorrow because I get better looking every day." You'll make us proud our dear Bro-branski. In the words of The Eagles, "Take it Easy." Semper Fidelis.

Evan Palelei

USMC Ground



Ethan Palmer

Naval Flight Officer

Ethan Palmer can be described as a blonde god…much like Thor. Even though Ethan was given offers to row at many prestigious institutions, he decided that rowing alone was not tough enough for him. Therefore, he chose to come to the Naval Academy to row and bring up the average attractiveness of the Brigade with his blonde locks and killer bod. He ran into some issues at the Academy, but most stemmed from an officer or senior enlisted being jealous of his prestige. Ladies, if you are looking for something to sway him, mention that you love Land Rovers and you have a good shot, but if you want a definite date, mention that you love classic cars (Mercedes), working out, and the outdoors. But beware, to this man there are only two parts of the country; New England and the rest.

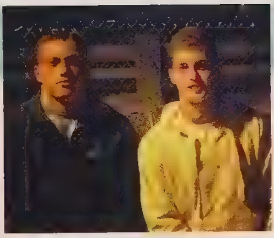
Tyler Pichard

Navy Pilot

What are the first things that come to mind when you think of Tyler "Little Richard" Pichard? Cultured? Refined? Wise? To most, he embodies all of these traits. To those who know him best, he is a wizard, a fat cousin, a commissioner, and Candace. When he takes a break from looking at trucks on the internet, he can often be found sitting in trees with a gun or vacuuming the carpet on his lower back. He is a man who prides himself on knowing bravery and never quitting… even in the face of serious injury. There is no deer too small, and no woman too big for this future pilot. As long as Mississippi does not secede from the Union, he will have a long and successful career in the Navy.

Anthony Ramos

USMC Ground



Christopher Rixey

USMC Ground

When he isn't hanging out with his girlfriend, Chris is either lifting neck or sleeping. He has touched a lot of people with his grace and presence, but be careful not to let him touch you with Weird Finger. He fuels his chiseled greek god body with Big Texas rolls and prizza. After all, he does need energy for each "new" workout program that he will stick with for no more than two weeks. To many, Chris is a quiet, reserved guy that has it all figured out. However, his friends know he's an all around dingus that just wants to have a good time and draw goblins. Chris has a successful future ahead of him and will make a great Marine Corps officer.

Grant Sawyer

Naval Flight Officer

Baby G. Little Grant. Beans. Rawdog. These are just a few of the nicknames Grant Buford Sawyer has acquired during his time here at the Naval Academy. Being a man of many words, he was always known to have something nice to say. He is the epitome of the phrase "life of the party" because if he was not conquering the high seas on Assassins Creed or preparing for fantasy football/hockey/basketball/baseball/nascar domination, you could find him throwing down brewskis or ripping shots at his second home, Pusser's. His boyish charm and steaming hot sex appeal caused women to flock to his side. I am confident that when he rekindles his warrior spirit, which has been missing since high school, he will be a great NFO and make his country proud.

Daniel Schneider

USMC Pilot

Dan Schnidly, let's just say that the NSA has been tracking this fugitive and hardcore conspiracy theorist for years. Born in…nobody fing knows…Dan has spent most of his time planning, developing, and executing covert missions of little or no importance throughout the country (mainly within the brigade). Not known for his speaking skills, tact, or trust of the government, Dan is by far the best wingman or friend a man could ask for. However, his appointment as the company academics officer is a cunningly evil paradox that would bewilder even the greatest minds of academia. Creatine, carbs, protein, and PROtein are the chemicals responsible for this skinny Eagle Scout's transformation to rugby warrior and future Marine Corp Pilot. Just know that our homes will be available to harbor you as you evade capture by multiple organizations for the rest of your life. Semper Fi brother.

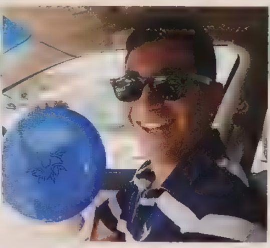
Matthew Sheeler

Submarines

A man of distinct personality, Matt has been likened to famous characters like Shawn Spencer or Rhett Butler. Mostly these comparisons come from his frequent uses of the phrases, "I've heard it both ways," and "Frankly, my dear, I don't give a damn." It has been speculated that the former is never true, while the latter is always true. If Matt were a super hero, he would be Mermaid Man. But instead of an Orb of Confusion, he has women. Honestly, it's like the same thing for him. His nemeses include large masses of lumber and alarm clocks. Matt has cultivated a reputation for enthusiasm and sincerity as a member of 8th Company. Despite being more accident prone than Tom chasing Jerry, he has an indefatigable dedication to his subordinates. He leads with integrity and character, and his southern heritage will be well represented by his service to his country.

Emile Toscano

Naval Flight Officer



Anyone who knows Emile Toscano will tell you, he is a hoot to be around. Emile has an outlook on life that can put a smile on anyone's face. A diehard UNC basketball fan, Emile will go from talking about his Tarheels to his "Toscano Weekends," all in an impressively entertaining monotone voice. Some may know him from his sport, which is better known as a vegetable, but others know him by his random room visits, which at times can be a bit much; however, he somehow redeems himself by telling one of his stories. You've probably heard one of these stories if you've talked to him at any length, they usually start with "So...This one time..." Emile will always be remembered for his fun nature and will be an awesome NFO.

Spencer Wilson

Surface Warfare Officer

Spencer aka Derf, is a strapping young gentleman who hails from the lush desert plains of Arizona. It has been said that during his early childhood on the rugby pitches of New Zealand Spencer earned his keep as a man of athleticism and physical beauty. To reward his mighty champion, Zeus himself rode a golden chariot from the heavens in order to bless Spencer with godly flow and charm that forces men and women alike in a 5 mile radius to change their panties and hasten forth to the sight of golden flow. This glorified champion is not known for his uniform standards, or personal and material cleanliness, but these meaningless details are quickly disregarded upon sight of Spencer's pulsating bicep veins. Veins which are developed daily by super setting every lift with bicep curls and also by substituting bicep curls for any lift he deems uncomfortable (squats, front squats, cleans, snatches, or legs in general). It's been a hell of a 4 years brother, and we couldn't have asked for a better roommate, friend, and shipmate J. The SWOs got lucky with you this year.

Julia Zook

Navy Pilot

If the energy of the sun could ever be captured and put into a person, that person would be Miss Julia Scattergood Zook. She doesn't just bring the party – she IS the party. With her contagious laugh, bright smile, and kind heart, Julia can brighten up anyone's day. No Grumpy Gills allowed around this lady! As a roommate, she always initiates room sing-alongs, which really turn into shout-alongs, and arranges The Bachelor viewing parties. Julia is fearless. She is true to herself and has never and will never let life's obstacles get in her way of success and happiness. We are so incredibly proud of you and all you have accomplished; we are so blessed to have you as a life-long friend. Love, your sisters, JB and KH.

Logan Bridgewater

USMC Pilot

After a NAPS career defined by misery and spite, Bridgewater was ready to start fresh at USNA. Logan drives a billion dollar BMW, and he has a rear end the size of the Nutty Professor. He can be easily spotted waddling his way to MacD to work on sit-ups, or maybe back to his room to watch the same loop of SportsCenter for the 4th time. He has an unmatched kind nature that can be attributed to the hours he spends on YouTube watching animal videos. Conversations with Logan consist of violent hand movement and lots of mumbling, and he will launch you like an Angry Bird across a King Hall table if he has to. Although he has had a great career making citizen arrests in the bars of DC, this devil dog is headed to the Marine Corps, and he's bringing his heartburn and tendinitis with him.

Michael Buck

Navy Pilot

Michael P. Buck entered this world flying out of his mother's womb at Mach-10 speed with a head full of golden locks and a pearly white grin. He proudly dons the title of "Dirty Mike" as if the heaping, putrid pile of clothes crawling out of his wall locker is something to be proud of. Despite his high GPA and steely blue eyes, he managed to avoid any type of leadership role throughout the majority of his Naval Academy career. Most assumed this was due to his large academic workload as a Chemistry major and his strict 2130 bedtime. But those closest to him knew that behind that Cheshire-cat like smile and straw colored hair lies a brain the size of a walnut, capable of doing only two things: winging chemistry exams and flying jets. Although his High School football career has FINALLY come to an end, this smiley Georgia peach has a bright future as a naval aviator, where he'll spread his contagious smile to even the saltiest of chiefs.

Jeremy Cadiente

Submarines

Jeremy "Sloppy Joe" Cadiente is headed to join the submarine force, a decision he will probably regret for the rest of his life. Hailing from the Philippines, young Jeremiah spent his childhood days lazily relaxing under the shade of the banana trees, waiting to fulfill his Destiny. When he finally did arrive at the Naval Academy, this little bubblehead immediately found success as a track runner, but his closest friends know that his true love is physics. One of the smartest and most genuine guys you will ever meet, Cadi has a knack for school and a propensity for keeping his hair out of regs. It is hard to imagine that this energetic young submariner is meant for anything less than excellence in the fleet and his life afterwards. Best of luck Cadi!

Michael Carps

USMC Pilot

You haven't heard a story unless you've heard it from the "Carp Dog". And you haven't heard a Mike Carps story unless you've heard it 6-7 times, from every angle and perspective imaginable. There is nothing he would like more than to dethrone Whoopi Goldberg as lead host of "The View". This chatty Kathy hails from the great town of Wadsworth, Ohio, where nothing is actually great except for its annual Blue Tip Festival and local high school basketball team #grizzlynation. Hobbies include: binge eating, bullying his closest friends, rubbing his gut in the mirror and reflecting on his life decisions out loud. Ask around the Brigade and they will tell you "Carp Dog" is one of the funniest, most entertaining people around. He will make a great addition to any squadron as he gets ready to trade in his Grizzly jersey for a fresh set of Marine cammies.

Harrison Chaires

Supply Corps

No matter the day, No matter the season
You better believe that we will call him Steven.
Mouth open, empty mind, ignorance is bliss
Anything productive, he will quickly dismiss.
"His is so fun!" Says the majority
Even though showering is not his priority.
Although what is going through his head is a mystery to all…
Neanderthal.
But through all the layers and all the stories to be told
Is a warm heart that can never turn cold.
A quick smile can have a doubtful man believin
Ya, you better believe it, I'm talking about our Steven.
For our Steven, we would fight off a thousand bears
Because you know we love our boy, Harrison Chaires.

Ryan Dallas

Surface Warfare Officer

Ryan "Ry Ry" Dallas, eternal 9th Company CDO. A momma's boy from South Carolina, he is still under the impression that SWO-ters are fashionable. He wakes up every day at 0615, and still struggles to complete his morning routine by formation. Between the shower, hair gel, and facial exfoliation, he comes out hard-charging every day...unless he is CDO. His other accomplishments include a successful Tinder date to Ring Dance, being the only SWO with a leadership position in Semper Fi, unwavering dedication to the Marathon Team (but mostly stretching), and having more fashion sense than that rest of the 6-man combined. With a heart nearly as big as his pores, young Grandpa Ryan will undoubtedly serve his subordinates with the self-sacrifice and Marine Corps motivation necessary of any respected Surface Warfare Officer.

Clay Elward

Navy Pilot

A native redneck of Illinois, Clay Elward stands by his core values of long cut, neoconservatism, and abstinence. A brief conversation with Clay will tear down years of social progress and hope for mankind as a whole. Being an Astro major, a record-setting runner, and a professional lightweight has led Clay into the world of Naval Aviation. While Clay's struggles at the Academy have been tattooed on his character, he has put that behind him and graduating with a beautiful fiancee will truly be the cherry on top. A truly rounded individual, despite being an engineer he maintains fluency in Elvish, proficiency on the bagpipes and penny whistle, and a knack for finding love. His time management is truly impeccable, as he can be a model Midshipman and still find time to use all of his minutes on the phone each month.

Daniel Fallon

USMC Pilot

The epitome (pronounced epi-tow-m) of a modern artist, Daniel "Daddy" Fallon has collectively spent more time hand-illustrating his snapchats than he has spent studying his Econometrics. Though he hails from Redondo Beach, California, you can't go anywhere (but seriously. anywhere) in the world without running into one of his relatives. Some would even argue he attends the Naval Academy--his constant presence at Georgetown gives him the impression he's a normal college student. Dan is afflicted with a rare brain disorder. Every thought moves through his mind in an uncut circular manner. Like his picture suggests, Dan is never afraid to get dirty. Unchained by decency and social norms, Dan's heckling of his roommates is likely to draw the attention of the NSA. A true foreigner from across the pond, it is still undecided if Dan should be accepted by the American people, or the Marine Corps.

Jade Geif

USMC Ground

It was a long long long road with many struggles but I made it! And am lucky enough to go Marine Corps Ground.

Rowland Girling

Submarines

Eddie came to the Academy with high hopes of validating his entire four years in one summer, and nearly succeeded. Instead, he decided to take the five year route, including a mission to Africa for a year and semester in Singapore. Although he posts quite a resume as a student and a traveler, don't be fooled, because Eddie spent the majority of his free time as an underclassman digesting ridiculously large sir sandwiches and scouring the entire company for people to "edit" his papers. Known for his raptor-like tendencies, Edd had an affinity to pounce on unsuspecting roommates during their study periods. Good luck in the fleet Eddie, those submariners will love your ability to explain math and science to us mere mortals. Just remember you'll always have a place in the heart of your fellow jabbasaurs as the "creature." Engage clutch sir.

Ganesh Harihara

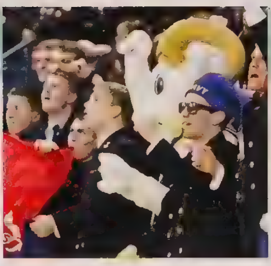
Submarines

Ganesh "Hari" Harihara is the computer whiz of the Brigade. While growing up, when the average Joe like you and I were fishing with our dads, he was coding C with his. His knowledge of computers doesn't stop the fact that he should have been a History Major. You may be lucky enough to hear one of his history "fun facts" once in a while. The Submarine Community should be honored to have him...until he leaves and starts the next multi-million dollar tech company.

Benjamin Hunter

USMC Ground

After memorizing MIDREGS in high-school, Ben Hunter was bound for an appointment to the Naval Academy. Always ready with a boring, historic anecdote, Ben Hunter is sure to bring any table conversation to an irrecoverable silence. Clothed in attire that may only be fashionable for a Midwestern peasant or an extra from the movie Django, Ben Hunter is always eager to hit the bars with his buddies, where he is bound to strike out multiple times. Surprisingly, his pickup-lines, stemming mostly from western books no one has ever heard of, are widely unsuccessful. This may be due to his obviously fake country accent, leaving less of a Jason Aldean vibe, and more of a Texas Chainsaw Massacre feeling. This emphasizes that despite his personal opinion, most women are often creeped out by Ben, his repulsive dipping habits, questionable mannerisms, and overall appearance. However, this has never stopped his efforts.



Michael Larson

USMC Ground

A die-hard Chicagoan from the south side and a full-blooded Irishman. He may look like the Notre Dame Leprechaun but of all the NCAA managers, Red Lightning doesn't compare. He is the driving force behind Navy Athletics and has won more Federal House Fan of the Games than anyone in school history. Always there to tutor a struggling classmate and constantly goes above and beyond the call of duty for his friends. Mr. Larson is also the only person in recorded history who gets mad about not having work to do. He is a lean mean fighting machine who gets the job done. In the event that there is no job to do, Little Michael will find one and do it. No matter what challenges Mike will meet in this life, he will conquer them with unmatched focus and enthusiasm. He is the model roommate, friend, Midshipman, and future Marine.

Christopher Lee

Nuclear Surface Warfare

Bachelor for life, there is no chance this man is ever getting married. Coffee in one hand, spitter in the other, he is the definition of a Southern gentleman. So polite, in fact, that he currently holds the record for being the best interviewee in the Brigade. He also receives monthly disability checks for excessive razor burn and permanent tone deafness. Like the neighborhood bicycle, Chris has been taken for a ride by every community before being welcomed into the warm, loving embrace of Nuke SWO. Excited for his new career, Chris will soon be heading to Hawaii (men of Honolulu-- hide your wives). Hopefully he won't catch the fever, as his only desire in life is to return to good ole' LA. By the way, he's still waiting on his bottle of Makers.

Sergio Logan

USMC Ground

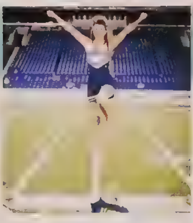
Sergio surrounds himself with females, and usually not in a creepy way. He's a simple and patient man that appreciates the little things, like bacon, a coloring book, and batman socks. With his slow talking and completely random thoughts he's horrible at telling stories, but that won't stop him from being a great Marine Corps Officer, just like his sister. As long as he gets BACON…lots and lots of BACON! Good luck Sergio...the Women's Track and field team and coaches will miss you. It'll be tough trying to find someone else willing and able to run the workouts repeatedly every day, even if it means doing more than twenty 200m sprints that practice. "Don't ever be Player Two."

Vincent Mauro

Navy Intelligence

Hailing from the great state of Florida, Vinnie Mauro is always there to help a friend. Built like a brick house, Vinnie is arguably the strongest Mid in room 5263. Furthermore, he even has been known to offer his Company Officer physical fitness advice. As an Oceanography major, Vinnie has a keen interest in aquatic animals and being a steward of planet Earth. After his Naval career, he would like to go to Japan and save the dolphins. Growing up on the beaches of Ft. Lauderdale, Vinnie spent much of his time outdoors, spearfishing and boating the waters of his home state. Although time can move slowly in Annapolis, Vinnie and his roommates help each other stay optimistic about the daily struggles this fine institution has to offer. An all-around great guy, it is no surprise Vinnie will be an Intelligence officer with a 4.0 GPA

Cynthia McDaniel



Naval Flight Officer

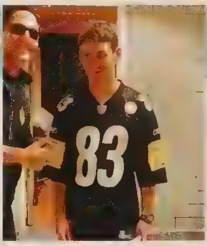
Cynthia "Mac-diesel" "Big Mac" McDaniel came from the bayou of Louisiana to the shores of the Severn River. Having served as a valiant leader of the Corps of Restrictees while at NAPS she moved on to become a loving leader of 9th Company. She started as a motivated and enthusiastic Devil Pup but we were fooled when she emerged into SWO Bro and became an NFO. She could pack a lip bigger than any of the guys on the Yard. She mastered Astrophysics like her artwork. After 5 years I couldn't have asked for a better roommate. We made it.

Bo Merritt

Navy Pilot

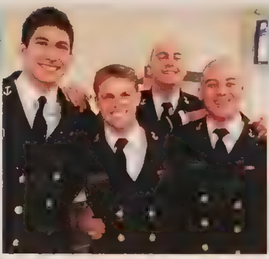
Men, hold your women tight. Women- hold your men tight. The most flirtatious member of the Brigade is on deck. Hailing from Galesburg, Kalamazoo County, Illinois, his momma taught him to be a ladies' man, so naturally he will be a Navy Pilot. He will be well prepared for Pensacola, learning to party hard during a late night run to Pussers. If only the CDO wasn't such a stickler, he would be a pro by now. Dominant on the basketball court, he shows that white men really can jump, and dance too. Bo will never forget his dear roommate whose promising naval career was sadly cut short. Extremely loyal to friends and family, will Bo have an N.S. or S.D. tattoo over his heart by the first class reunion?

Andrew Miller



Submarines

Aside from his psychopathic smile, Andrew Miller might be the kindest, gentlest soul 9th company has--unless you disrespect the Ravens or Baltimore, those are fighting words. He has continually given of himself to his friends, everything from his house on the weekends to his dad's amazing Cuban burgers. Drew is so genuinely kind he even isn't afraid to let others borrow his ride. From helping his company mates to 100 Mile runs, Drew is always running from something—most likely whatever he did during his study abroad in Germany. Whether diving to the bottom of the ocean or a UMD bathtub he's been destined for the Submarine Community. As company commander Drew broke away from his reserved shell to rule with an iron fist like his submarine brethren before him. Drew has found success in both his private and personal life and we hope the best for him.



James O'Boyle

USMC Ground

Formally know as Patrick O'Boyle, Joey Riggs was the family man of the group. Notorious for being a heavy N150, one could always anticipate an extra hour of sweating on Fridays at 5pm. Nevertheless, his sacrifice garnered the highly coveted Joke Cup. Shortly after ending his lightweight career, Joey's final destination was determined. From early mornings in Smoke Hall, to crazy times in the mountains, this catholic boy can party with the best of them. You would never guess this tall drink of water would be a Marine, but he decided to take himself and his out of regs hair to the Corps. Best of luck in the Marine Corps Pat, we know you will YUT with the best of them!

Matthew O'Dowd

Navy Pilot

The O'Dowds are a great ______ people. An unmatched gentleman of royal blood--but like the castles of his late people his immune system is continually overrun. Destined for space and a pilot from birth, the "Doctor" has groomed himself for the job. He is the true Renaissance man, excelling in everything from investments, to rocketry and debauchery, to practicing medicine without a license. Recently, he also started a study of the Russian tongue and culture. He has wanted to be an aerospace engineering major since I-day, a decision which has continued to haunt him ever since. A true beer connoisseur, the Doctor enjoys drinking Budweiser and on special occasions will indulge with Natty Boh. Bold and assertive, Matt is not afraid to pull the trigger, but only after he's decided.

Catherine Oakley

Navy Pilot

O Cate, O Captain, O Moral Compass. If it weren't for our robo captain, #NWC14 would have burned down most of DTA. The standout rower has been a leader from the start. But watch out…don't let her lead you anywhere in the dark…or over speed bumps. Her radiant smile, beautifully scented hair, and unbreakable faith are what helped get Cate her seat in the 1V 8. The future Naval Aviator intends to lead from the sky, and watch out world, I heard now she can even give high fives. The Navy is lucky to gain a natural leader like you, Cate. NWC 2014: ROLLOUT.

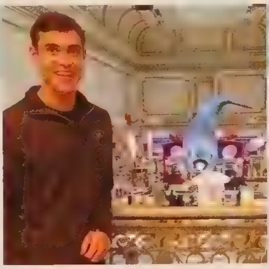
Andrew Ogden

Naval Flight Officer

Andy Ogden, The ginger cowboy that hailed from the great state of Texas. No argument is truly settle without Andy on the case and with his partner in crime (Crapdog) making people weep is just a pass time activity. Andy didn't really had much of a childhood, his one of those kid that after first grade, just started reading the newspaper on the porch and yelling at the other kids not to throw the Frisbee at him. I do not know any other midshipmen who would spend more than half of his academy carrier in someone else room than his. Some people even call him the wandering ghost, in and out of the room with not even saying a word. Where in other occasions, he would starts random discussion; making his on model UN, arguing on quote on quote "better ways" to do homework rather than just doing it.

Stephen Perez

Navy Pilot



Stephen Perez was born to attend the Naval Academy. The son of two alumni and the nephew of two more, Stephen has more than earned his place in the Perez family legacy at USNA. He could often be found playing video games. Schooling everyone in Gears, Call of Duty or even LT in Pokemon; though only losing because of "lag". However, he never let gaming get in the way of socializing with the ladies of the Brigade. Stephen's time on Honor Staff did not save him from being accused of an honor offense, which was eventually dropped. His easy smile and ever present laughter will serve him well in Naval Aviation.

Paloma Perez-Urena

USMC Ground

Hola senorita! Your notorious mood swings always kept us on our toes. Your words were few but powerful. You always lead by example. Within the last four years you have really broken our of your shell and we're so grateful. Your bright colored cleats make it easier for us to track you as you sprinted down the field past everyone else. You are a friend and a teammate that would drop anything to help them. Your quiet confidence is inspiring, never lose confidence in yourself. Don't forget skittles for all your FEXs next year. P.S. Rudder says hello (F.E.W.S.)

Andrew Pfau

Submarines

Andrew Pfau, aka Pfauser is as a dedicated a Navy man as they come. In fact, by the time 2/C year rolled around, he had already been referred to as "seasoned JO" . You could put him in a hole in the ground for five years and as long as you told him he was serving the Navy, he would do the best hole-sitting operation on the face of the Earth. A straight-edged follower of rules and regulations, in our four years we have been hard pressed to find him ever breaking them. When approached by the dashing ladies of Ireland, his response was " I don't think this is a good idea you guys" as his shipmates were trying to have a good time. Also, do not ever assume he is sarcastic, for he is always deadly serious. Many have said that it is their life goal to make Andrew smile, but I doubt that they will ever succeed. The submarine force should be proud to have such a stoic warrior.

Alexander Pybus

Medical Corps

Dr. Plybus(Alexander Pybus) if you ever meet him in a white coat you are in serious trouble. The first time I met him I thought he was the son of a professor until his dad walked in and the company disappeared into their burrows as a SEAL Admiral came to see his son's living quarters. We were originally the Three Musketeers until Pybus realized he could not save Grandpa. It was sad to see Grandpa go but Pybus kept up the hard work while double majoring in physics and chemistry to go to Med School. God's List sounded impossible until rankings came around. Either way with the brains of a Genius and the son of SEAL nothing is impossible. The Navy Med Corps will be excited for his arrival.

Evan Rose

USMC Pilot

Rosepup became pack leader of the Dog House despite not having the loudest bark (Carpdog) or receiving the most attention (Cody T). Ever since that giant head first landed on the steps of Bancroft, this joe-broni has done nothing but excel; whether it be flying himself home for leave, hiking the entire state of Alaska, napping his way to an A on every PRT, doing Bridgewater's homework, or becoming fluent in a cowardly language. "The Most Interesting Man in the Brigade" truly made a name for himself during his time here, becoming quite the politician as he befriended almost every midshipmen and officer on the yard. At times his stubbornness and bewildering vernacular (vocabulary) could be infuriating, but it's hard to get mad at a fellow who has a cardboard cutout twin. A determined young man, who wanted to do nothing more than follow in his older brother's footsteps in becoming a Company Commander and Marine Officer, has done exactly that and so much more. His drive, compassion, and loyalty make him more than just a competent leader; they make him a great friend.

Martin Sanchez

Supply Corps

He is smooth, fast, and very good looking.
He shakes and bakes on the field,
He is a DC veteran and number one in our hearts.

Cody Thompson

USMC Ground

The local Annapolis bar scene hit a serious boom in production once this loose cannon turned 21. Pretty soon his drinking career took precedence over his track career and before you knew it, every hostess this side of Eastport had his number on speed dial and every bartender was asking to be his sponsor parent. The added beer weight and lack of homework pushed Cody onto new endeavors as he joined the Sprint Football team his final year and made "First Demo Team All Conference" in addition to making more girls cry than the ending of "The Notebook". Annapolis will surely miss Cody T's gangly pear-shaped body and frivolous spending, but one man's loss is another man's gain as the Marine Corps is sure to gain a fiery young 2nd Lieutenant. The only problem is that there's no such thing as "Big Beer Wednesday" when you're dug into a foxhole.

Brynn Umbach

Surface Warfare Officer

A true Texan, Brynn always has a smile and hi y'all ready for everyone. From solving the world's energy problems, to raising her very own pet algae, to curing cancer, Brynn has done it all. You can't help but feel safe around this skilled martial artist, and if you're lucky she might even bust out some crazy good dance moves. There's nothing her sense of adventure shies away from, especially when it comes to travel. From Spain to Uganda to Asia to sketchy D.C. nightlife, she's always game for a new life experience. Our number one ship selector, Brynners is now off to hunt for the best Tex-Mex food around in sunny San Diego. Fair winds and following seas, SWOtivator! We know that with your compassionate spirit, unmatched work ethic, and heart that seeks the Lord, there's nothing that you can't do.

Samuel Von Paris

Nuclear Surface Warfare

SVP, Sax, Swamp-rat, all names used to describe him but Samuel William Baroody von Paris is best known as most interesting man on the Yard. With a savant-like intellect, physical freakishness, and the ability to obtain 18 hours of sleep a day, Sammy is truly an anomalous figure. Swamp's hobbies include, but are not limited to, wood chopping, gun shooting, animal killing, beer drinking, and music making. He is the quintessential man's man, a true outdoorsman. The son of John and Patty, and brother of Johnny, SVP was born and raised on the outskirts of Baltimore, Upper Falls to be exact, and with family like his, it is no surprise that Sammy finds himself at home every chance possible. He is now off to pursue Nuclear Surface Warfare Officership, a small pit stop before making his fortune, marrying his beautiful wife, and raising his bad-ass kids in Upper Falls, Maryland.

Love, Your Roommates- Mikey and Vinnie.

Awangku Abdul Rauf Bin Pengiran Yusof

The Royal Brunei Navy

Awangku Abdul Rauf Bahar Bin Pengiran Haji Yusof has a name as long as his bangs. Outranking every Mid and SEL, his inability to speak the English language hindered his dominance. Just like Jesus, Rauf lived alone for 40 days in a cobra infested jungle. He has also served as security detail for the Sultan and claims to have broken 8 men's arms while blindfolded. Most impressively, he has never failed a PRT and boasts a record average of 12 hours sleep a night. Tough times were met with the arrival of Skyrim and Minecraft, but Yusof powered through to become one of the most recognizable Mechies. The lone wolf in him found solace in solo adventures to the cinema, Johns Hopkins, Key West, and Disney World. One day we will reunite with our prince in the magical land of Brunei, where not even [insert joke about Sultan].

Allyn Bennett

USMC Pilot

The loud, boisterous, blonde with a resting B face and a killer yut yut cut is not nerdy enough for the nerdy club. You comic loving, ferret petting, Big Lucky lover...how are you single? This motivated future Marine Pilot has the capability of taking the stairs in the most coordinated fashion, a questionable attitude "problem", and a habit of telling highly factual stories. When not wrapped up in Battlestar Galactica she keeps herself busy with CC, Ballroom Dancing, Rowing, cinephilia and Sea Trials. Ranting while contracting lung cancer on late night walks with Big Bird Frank or Thanksgivings in Louisiana will never be forgotten. Your sarcasm will be truly missed by all who have been lucky enough to star in your feature length stories. Cheers to you, you motivated yutter! The Marine Corps is lucky to have you! Remember: Always move to the sound of the guns! NWC 2014: ROLLOUT.

James Browning

Surface Warfare Officer

Such computers. Much Science. James Browning, more commonly referred to as Trey, thoroughly enjoys training. Trey comes from the great Dallas, Texas. A prideful Texan through and through, and "that guy" who you just know will be someone important one day. With a super computer mind he is quick to help out a shipmate with his simple computing machine. However, he is not a complete nerd, despite countless hours spent playing computer games, Trey also dominates on the field ball field. THE luckiest man alive: He spent a year in Japan, failed out of college, enlisted and went to nuclear power school, still managing to come to the Naval Academy where he found a hot girlfriend to head off to Norfolk with while working on his top choice of ships. The dude has done it all.

John Burns

USMC Ground

Juicy JB [Gay B], Old Dusty, Decrepit Burns, will always be remembered for hitting the deepest squat in the brigade and severing his working blues in two. Quick to pack a lip [its casual], even quicker to get demonic off 7 and 7; Dong would often awake to facial injuries [State!...Workoutband?]. Buns--always at half-mast and never wearing drawers was always eager to save a buck [I'll take the eggs …for $3.50] . With hair like Brillo, and a heart like Steelwool, "John" would not hesitate to stack six grown men into a Utility Van for interstate transport. An economist, known to never skip leg day, Boat Shoes Burns enjoyed a daily media package consisting of Fifa, The Sopranos, Monopoly, and a heavy dose of PH [safe search off]. A great man, he will be greatly missed by the Dojo… "There was a dream that was Rome."

Xiao Chen

Navy Pilot

Chen Daddy, or as he was more affectionately known, Swamp Chen, was one of 10th Company's most respected elders. When he wasn't falling asleep at briefs or trying to win the platoon competition, he could be seen from a mile away in his orange flips flops, or, if he was eating an apple, heard from even further. Conversational and easy to talk to, Chen was always willing to share his opinions on life, love, and dental hygiene. His mastery of working out to look good and the art of seduction attracted suitresses from a multitude of nations, age groups, and relationship statuses. More than anything else, however, Jeff will be remembered as a trusted friend with an excellent sense of humor who knew what was important in life. He will make a phenomenal pilot. Welcome to the Danger Zone.

Garland Christopher

Surface Warfare Officer

Baby loved clothes shopping (100$/30yrs), but not more than he loved the Brigade Duty Doc [blood from jawnt]. Blackfoot was a scholar (Double Major—Honors History—History), a gentleman ("beat it up, beat it up…), and a dreamer (no lumbar support backpacking in 'Nam). Fetus was quick to mix the ketchup with the mayo, and quicker to open up in excess of 1000 tabs on his desktop [WorldStar]. Draped in fluorescent green G-bron James was a false engineer [NSBE], false atheist [Free thinking club], and false prophet. If you couldn't find him trolling Reddit he was most certaintly at the local aquarium, Banana Republic, or physical therapist. Bald, Black, and Beautiful G-Marcus Russel would suck your shampoo and body lotion dry in one hygiene period. Goobie Miles, we finally "made it" and we know you will always be "Out Here" for us, Viva El Dojo….Be Perfect

Justin Dion

Surface Warfare Officer

Justin Dion: the man, the Burger King eater, the Justin Timberlake wannabe, the womens' gymnastics fan. His favorite thing on Earth is his Twitter account. If he was as good at studying as he was at memorizing Drake lyrics he might be at the top of his class. If the Patriots lose on Sunday, don't bother talking to him. Justin is convinced his dance moves will one day pay off, and there are hours of video evidence of him shirtless in the Youngster back shaft moving to the beat of "Ants Marching". The only successful relationship he ever had was his love affair with Crocs. Wore his high school track sweatpants through Europe without a second thought. 5-4 will always be his horcrux. Nothing was the same.

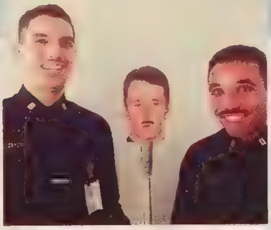
Alex Doolittle

Surface Warfare Officer

Alex, Doo, Big Doo, Doo Doo, Big Black…whatever you choose to call this Texan behemoth you will surely be greeted with a booming "howdy!" crushing hug and in infectious smile. A man of unparalleled strength and size he often strikes fear into those the first time they see him. It only takes a few minutes before realizing this man is a teddy bear with the character and manners of a true southern gentleman. Whether it was on the football field or within the Brigade his personality has served him well. Throughout our short time together we grew from more than friends and became brothers. Whether we were in New York, Baltimore, Loyola or Annapolis there was surely never a dull moment and we both have the scars to prove it. Just remember when things seem impossible "smile, smile, smile". Best of luck Doo, the fleet is lucky to have you.

Kelvin Edmonds

Civil Engineering Corps



Kelvin "Frode" Edmond's journey to the Academy from the heartland of America, St. Louis, Missouri, was not an easy one. Forced to leave his beloved dog Spike behind, it was time to move forward and forge new lifelong friendships in "Company E, Platoon 10." Having two future SEALs as squad leaders didn't coerce him to D.O.R., unlike half of 3rd squad, but rather primed him for the challenges coming his way. And winter came. However, Edmonds possessed the intelligence of Walter White, the leadership of Ned Stark, and the bad ass-ness of Happy (SOA), and was able to weather the storm. He excelled at everything from jumping out of airplanes with the Army to climbing mountains with the Marines. Devoting his time and efforts to systems engineering, working out, training plebes, and revamping the wardroom, Edmonds was a natural Seabee from the start. "Build and Fight" in the Fleet, Seabee!

Jesus Figueroa

Surface Warfare Officer

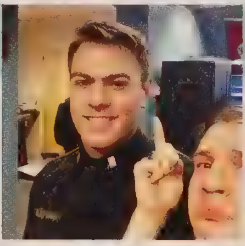
Pig will be remembered as-- a cheeto gorger, Mexicali porkchop, fieldball enthusiast, generous gift giver (Pete's blanket), noisemaker, dodgeball thrower, roundhouse kicker, and chemistry ace by all (LT Cory), but possibly not by anyone more than the Frenchman J-Luc (GlutenFree). Figuero was a great friend but there's not a chance in hell he remembered your name, and was always quick to ask Bob to get his dry cleaning or make a mail room run ("Thanks Buddy!"). Figueroa the Honorable…wait did he sign the Weekend List? You could walk in on Salvador with his leg on his desk in a deep squat mid Soovoo or wrapped in his sheets like a pig in a blanket resting so tender and mild. The sneaky coward...the cookie thief, Fig will be missed and loved by all of the DOJ, buenos suerte en Japan… ¡Ya se armó!

Alexandra Freeman

Surface Warfare Officer

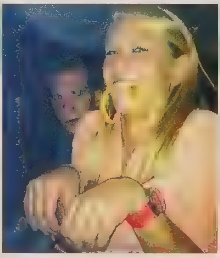
Alex, My coffee spilling, naked push-uping, germaphobic friend. We were teammates, classmates, and roommates as plebes. Although through the years we have struggled through teams, Russian, and dating, you never failed to be bright, loving, and patient. Practice makes perfect and I will never forget the 2012 disaster Ring Dance or your triumphant return from Georgia for OUR's. You've grown so much in the last four years, from a cute little plebe into a strong woman and GUIDE Commander with a killer marathon time. Our friendship has taught me that there are no problems that Robot Chicken Marathons, or candy binge eating, can't solve. Our morph, which started as an inside joke, is now a way of life. Thank you for being a mentor, listener, and friend. GO FORTH AND DO GREAT SWO THINGS IN JAPAN, never struggle to find good sushi, and keep educating and mentoring those around you.

Christopher Fron



USMC Ground

When not getting his Jeep stuck wheelin' through the world's smallest puddle, heckling opposing goalies at Navy hockey games, or watching Netflix until 3AM, Chris can be found digging to find the floor on his side of the room. Chris' unbridled passion for twirling batons and marching in odd geometric patterns has led him to the pinnacle of the Naval Academy drill world, becoming both the Brigade Drill Officer and CO of the Jolly Rogers at the same time. (WOW!) His "enviable" status on top of the drill pyramid (scheme) has given him numerous exciting privileges, most notably infinite liberty and excusal from hair regs. Seriously, with flow like that you'd never know he's a future Devil Dog. Good luck at TBS special bud - hopefully Mama Fron sends you as many cookies at TBS as she has over the last 4 years.



Caroline Jacobs

USMC Ground

Sweet Caroline! There's no one in the world with a bigger smile and she's always ready to pass it on. She's a lean mean fighting machine who spends most of her days tearing up the volleyball court. When she isn't slamming kills in her opponent's face or making a new PR in the weight room you'll most likely find Caroline having a laugh with her family and friends or taking a lovely Neature walk. She's the best person to split a few bottles of wine with on a cold winter night, or spend the day with while scouring Whole Foods for the newest health craze. You'd be hard pressed to find a better or more caring friend whether you've just met or know each other for your entire life.

Samuel Jones

SEALs

Samuel Eversfield Jones is a character. Chances are you've already heard of him. He's sort of a big deal and if you didn't already know that, he will probably tell you. Want to get to know him? Offer to buy him a beer at Acme- he would generally offer first, but since he is paying to support the dog he bought with his with his ex-girlfriend, he could use the spare change. If you haven't heard of Sam Jones, or quite literally heard him shouting a story for all to hear, or yelling a joke at you two feet away, then you are missing out. He is an incredibly supportive friend that you'd want by your side when the going gets tough. A tremendously gifted athlete, Sam is a four year starting attackmen for the Navy Lax team. Good luck trying to meet a guy who is tougher, a fiercer competitor, or has a more relentless work ethic than Sam. This kid knows how to get the most out of life. Love ya kid. "Brothers. We all suffer. Never quit"

Katie Laderer

Naval Flight Officer

At just north of five feet "tall,"
Katie is as old as she is small
If you think she doesn't look like much, you're right
A classic case of all "yip" and no bite.
Did I mention she's old? That's right, twenty-THREE!
I mean, come on Katie, six years for an English degree?
Thank goodness she went to Spain this year
Where she learned "dos cervezas;" her tolerance for beer
Her closest friends are Keats, Whitman, and Thoreau,
Followed closely by Hostess, Hershey, and Nabisco
She's never been into that whole "crossfit scene,"
She hates burpees, running, and "eating clean."
Despite her unwillingness and inability to lift,
She's a rational creature, just like Taylor Swift
But as long as my name is Ansley White,
If loving her is wrong, I don't wanna be right
Every day, no matter what my strife,
She's always been there, my roommate for life

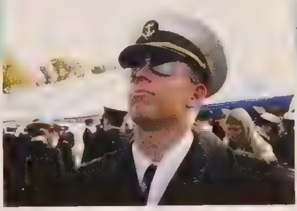
Derek Lee

Navy Pilot

Bob, a slave to ziti, a dreamer (color blind), a niche jumpshooter, a Pop Warner cornerback, a stoop Rat, and an avid bowler (with wristguards?) was never one to work out more than 3 days a week. The schlafen king would travel to any hole, crevasse, or porter potty for a discounted chili dog. The creep the weirdo, threw up at youngster party, and was never a stranger to the porcelain god. Knobby Bobby escaped the hole for semester 6 in the Orient (Ying Yang), but has never fully returned full body fluids after being Waikiki sneaky'd during semester 4 Spring Break. BobDong will be missed by his 4 friends (no new friends) and will surely look to feel the wind in his hair..and the blood..rushing to his jawnt—[Strippaz].

Cameron Little

Navy Pilot



Cameron "Special Bud" Little. There is nothing "Little" about him, as everything is bigger in Texas. The police often question him just because they find him interesting (and/or because he's breaking the law). He is too cool and tough to ever be sub drafted. His cereal never gets soggy. It sits there, staying crispy, just for him. When watching 'football' he roots for Liverpool. Ghosts don't always haunt him, but when they do, they're named Sadie. What are the odds? The odds are always in his favor. The Danger Zone doesn't welcome him, he welcomes danger. He doesn't always drink beer, but when he does, he prefers Newcastle. He is (almost) the most interesting man in the world.

Christopher Maldonado

USMC Pilot

Besides being a native Texan and Marine Corps Aviator, Chris Maldonado is the best friend a person could ask for. He is there to push you farther when you need help, and to punch you when you're doing something stupid. He is always willing to lend a hand, and would never turn down an opportunity to help. I am lucky to call him friend.

Jeffrey Matcham

Navy Pilot

Bone loved cookies, but Bone loved apple cider donuts more. The sugar ate away at his midsection like an unstoppable rebel force leaving floppy love handles, nevermore..nevermore..nevermore. First to leave peanut butter and cheerios on your desk and last to show up for 1800 chow, Boner was not the most punctual of little guys. Although Joffrey was afforded countless arranged marriages and Prima Nocta, no female other than the nameless Chive whooahs featured on his desktop backgrounds could ever satisfy young Joffrey's hunger like Donna's rich and succulent khalua cake. A surprising super nerd who would parade his feathers like a graceful pterodactyl when playing hoops, but he never did win any awards for Donna. Your friends look forward to seeing young Gizz settling in at his natural weight of 215, and reliving the glory days at Highland, keep chowing and not committing, the best is yet to come…One Love…State!

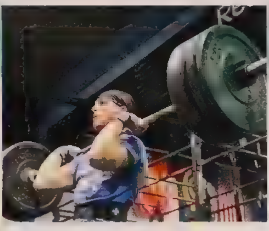
Katherine Moore

Surface Warfare Officer

Since she joined the Navy in 1965 at the salty age of seven, Kay Moore has come along way towards becoming the crusty prior she is now. As the founder, president, treasurer and soul member of MA(A) (Master at Arms Anonymous), it has now been a proud 1311 training days since Kay Moore has used the words "100% on watch." However, there is more to Moore than a recovered addiction to duty swap chits and an affinity for blood chokes. In case you haven't heard (which, let's be honest, you know you have) Kay is engaged to Emma! They're adopting a young boy from the middle east(ern coast of the United States) named Justin Dion and giving him a home. Kay's favorite words are "yut," "rah," and "#$%*," and her favorite song is "Sail" by Awolnation which reminds her of the good ol' Navy days



Alexander Mychalowych

Submarines

Persistence and determination are words that best describe Alex. He pursued crew and jujitsu to distract him from what was a bit of a transition plebe year, where he often drew the unwanted attention of his detailers. Not truly being fulfilled by either activity, he really found his passion for challenging his body and strength in crossfit. When asked to join the team, he made it his mission to lead his teammates to several victories. He is generally quiet but a bit high strung. A perfectionist, yet a procrastinator. Always thinking, never sleeping. Alex's friends would say that they can always count on him to lend a hand. Whether staying up all night to help and support a friend during the SEAL or EOD screener, helping shipmates with complicated math or engineering homework, or encouraging company mates to meet their fitness goals, Alex does his best to make sure others are doing their best. Where Alex really shines is on the academic side. Engineering and naval architecture come to him like he was born to do it. Destined to design submarines as an Engineering Duty Officer, Alex carries a strength that will take him wherever he finds a need to go. Embracing opportunities, hurdling obstacles and finding his path, he displays the confidence and ambition to achieve any goal he sets for himself. Damn the torpedoes, full speed ahead!

Patrick Paap

Navy Pilot

This fine young man is an accomplished socialite who recently published his first work entitled "The fine art of acquiring female accompaniment whilst maintaining your tact". Within certain circles, this California native has been referred to as the man who will buy you dinner, take you home and tuck you in before asking for a goodnight kiss. Perhaps most famous for the marble statue of himself erected along the banks of the Black Sea, Pat's mastery of the Soviet language has placed him at the forefront of wooing in the late-night. While his incredible skill after dark can speak for itself, it must be said that Pat is everything one could want in a friend. Loyal, funny, and honest, Pat makes sure that those around him are never lacking in fun and companionship. Just make sure he's not a wingman, he can't help it if the party flocks to him.

Robert Platt

Navy Pilot

To begin, a poem entitled "Platt goes Splat." It's morning workouts and there's a pull-up race! Platt counts "1…2…3…" SMACK! and breaks his face. He's on the mound and there's one on first, the batter swings and nails Robert where it hurts. Sledding down the hill, Robert screams 'wheeeeeeeee!' until Platt goes splat, right into a tree. It's springtime and Robert's walking to class, 'til he trips on flower petal and lands on his ass. Though he may get dripped on wherever he goes, A better, more loyal friend not one of us knows. A lover of cheap vodka, hatchback vehicles, and Nicholas Castilla, Robert will always be remembered as "that guy who did that thing where he broke that bone." Whether he is mopping up the floor at Chick n' Ruths or letting everyone cut him at the bar, Robert is always putting others ahead of himself.

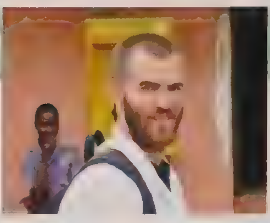
Daniel Shackleton



USMC Pilot

Daniel James Shakleton hails from the streets of West Chester, PA. He has a personality that brightens the room and spandex attire that will blind you, Dan gives true meaning to the term "Bad Meat." A polished tight end on the Sprint Football team, a member of a nightmarish capstone project and descendant of the great Sir Ernest Skackleton, Dan was destined for greatness. Along with a great beard he brought back multiple near death experiences from his trek across Alaskan glaciers. A guy with purpose, sent to the nations for the Kingdom above, Dan will leave a legacy that far outlasts his four years spent in the walls of Mother B. From that first retreat, to the Underwood, to four years of CRU it's been a good run man, the Corps got a good one 1 John 3:1.

Tyler Sposato

Naval Flight Officer

Tyler hails from small-town Ohio, where pet donkeys roam and old-fashion trains rule. However, his heart resides in the Steel City. Whether it's celebrating a Crosby goal, witnessing a winning season for the Pirates, or profanely screaming at yet another Steelers' loss, Tyler believes in his Pittsburgh teams. After spending time in Germany, he also learned how to say cool things like, "Nicht auf die Straße gehen mit Prostituierten auf sie." Beside run-ins with the Law at hockey tailgates, Tyler (aka real-special-bud) and 10th company hoodlums can often be found sasquatching or imitating Chief's salty, hands-folded, smug head-nod of sarcastic approval. Yeah, they're cool…and tough. On weekends, Tyler can be found on the battlefields ready to reenact and fight valiantly. It won't be long before his next fight will take flight as a real life Goose. In the words of Ron Burgundy, "Don't act like you're not impressed."

Kyle Steenberge

USMC Pilot

Mr. Steenberge aka The Asst. Dant hails from Rochester, NY, following in the footsteps of his highly esteemed brother, MIDN CAPT Steenberge, Brigade Commander of AY 2010. As a History Major, most of Kyle's time is spent preparing for the Marine Corps - either in the front leaning rest or doing reps for Chesty . When he's not on the yard, he's either asleep on a bar in DTA or making magnificent music with the merry Men's Club of Glee. A drinker, a lover, a historian, but not a fighter, this Marine Pilot has charmed many a women, to include his own Company Officer, and especially the women of the Varsity Volleyball team, leaving behind many broken hearts. If you see him, he'll be sure to greet you with a motivational "rah" and crusty ol' O-6 salute. Fairs Winds and Following Seas, Shipmate; You're a good kid.

Jamison Thornton

Naval Flight Officer

While at the Naval Academy, Jamison Thornton divided her time fairly evenly between the Young Democrats Society and the elite early-morning running team for which she earned the red badge of courage. Both an artist and activist, Jamison has fought hard for writing implements' rights to self-identify as "pencil colors" despite fierce pushback from her Yankee classmates. Due to a developmental disorder which affects 1 in 5 southern belles, Jamison's brain functions perpetually at a level somewhere between that of an 80 year old woman and a 12 year old boy. This unfortunate circumstance results in a constant battle between a life of crosswords, the Golden Girls, and crocheting versus that of comic books, Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles, and playing with goats. Always fond of riddles, let us close with one of Jamison's favorites: A priest, a Navy SEAL, and a rapper walk into a bar. What do they order?

Michael Tuimavave

USMC Ground

Coming from Daly, CA, Michael Tuimavave, joined the Academy by way of NAPS with the help of Frank Verducci and Vittorio Anastasio. A member of the Football team for five years including NAPS, Tuimavave became exposed to what was properly called The Brotherhood. He is grateful and blessed to have had the opportunity to live with some of the greatest people at the Academy especially the members of "the Clink" and Pam's Crew. He gives a special thanks to everyone who has supported him and helped him get to this point in his career. Mumua I Le Atua.

Ansley White

USMC Pilot

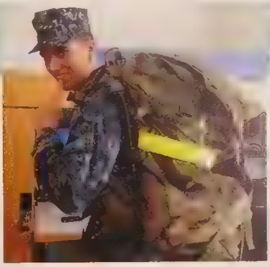
If Joe Biden and Sarah Palin had a love child: It would be Ansley White. The yut, yut screaming "Queen of the Fleet" can be found on any school night down by the seawall in her Dorito-dusted puffy vest solving world problems, smoking cigs, talking to Frank the bird, and babbling on and on about Christopher Walken. "He is so hot!" A native Mainer, but wannabe blue collar at heart, Ansley spends her time volunteering at local animal shelters (she LOVES animals) and target-shooting with Nemo in her Carhartt jacket, boots, and spurs. At first glance her Pocahontas braid, stank-eye stare, and big-ass dent in her leg throw you for a loop, but once you get to know her she's…a consistently awkward, loud, and jealous friend. She's the best, needy friend anyone could ask for. The Marine Corps sure is getting a good one. Ansley, Ansley, Ansley. Marine Corps Ansley!

Benjamin Wisniewski

Explosive Ordnance Disposal

From completing the Iron man to both the EOD and SEAL screener, Ben has always been able to accomplish physical goals that set him apart as "men amongst boys". Smart and humble at heart, Ben has always been a well-rounded midshipman that not only successfully accomplished every aspect of the academy missions but even managed to get a hot girlfriend while he was here. One of the few genuine people left in this world, he has always been a role model amongst his peers and the plebes. When you see Ben in the fleet please stop and buy this man a drink because his positive attitude will change the world one day. EOD is lucky to have this man in their community.

Sami Zahzouhi



Navy Pilot

Sam Zahzouhi, aka Sami, Sanzoui, Zansa, Zahzowhi, Zoobob, Zoobop, Zahzbob, Zahzbobface, Z, Big Z, and my personal favorite, Mr. Zaaahhzoooheeee. Though some often accuse you of being shady, you have a knack for getting what you wanted whether it was a semester abroad, vacations and cars funded by the government, or an apology from a friend turned temporary foe (the shunnings will continue until apologies are met). You hold strong to your convictions and always do what is right not what is easy. You never backed down from a challenge (physical challenges such as the EOD screener not included), and did your best to be a great leader, friend, and roommate. I know you will continue to excel in the aviation community, if you don't get drafted for subs at the last minute. Your shuns were legendary, you trained with the best of them, and you always kept it real.

CAPT Wayne Morris, USMC
11th Company Officer

CTTCS Jessee Hess
Senior Enlisted company 11

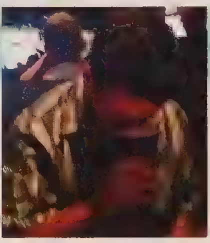
Daniel Anderson

USMC Ground

El Jefe has come a long way from being "The most uninteresting man in the world." At first, he was too afraid to talk to Swedish girls, and even hid from Susan B. for 12 hours straight. But now, this esteemed member of the 11th Company Drinking Team's accomplishments include drunkenly choking on salt shakers, pounding brews in the trunk, turning down strippers and making out with doorknobs. Not only that, he can dance and sing too, just ask Harris. Yea, sometimes he gets a little too rowdy, chugging hot sauce and what not, "Don't worry John, we'll be safe," besides, his roommate is always ready to save him with a Ka-bar. One day he'll settle down with his llamas, so long as he can find a woman that won't puke when she makes out with him. Praise to the Shell Gods, warm up the diesel!"



Clayton Aronica

Nuclear Surface Warfare

A part time member of team hardbody actual, Clayton is seen religiously pumping iron in halsey, slamming weights much to the chagrin of the snooki-troll strength coach. When he isn't putting on mass in Halsey or going to dap city, he is either dominating remedials or choking in FIFA by coughing up last minute goals to Lion-O. Too chill for the rigors of varsity sports, this legend has successfully balanced his time with both club soccer and club lacrosse. It is safe to say that the USS America will commission with two of our nations best in brightest hard bodies with Hatch and Clay coming aboard.

Marc Austria

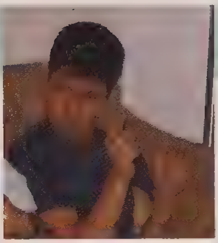
USMC Ground

Marc a.k.a "The Hangover" Austria is one of the wildest members of the 11th Company Drinking Team. It is always apparent the next morning when he's been out the night before, just ask the woman who rode next to him on the plane back from Indiana. He's always up to no good, whether it's egging plebes, or rolling around in his tight Green Man suit, he just loves being mischievous. This once promising Filipino Club Treasurer is also the Drum Major (and only Asian member) of the Scottish Pipes and Drums Corps, which is where he developed his affinity for chasing after white Catholic girls. This instigator will always pressure others to drink, but never drink himself, mainly because he's a super lightweight. This ability to order others to do things he won't do will make him a great Marine Ground officer.

Erin Bacon

Surface Warfare Officer

If you can't find my world class Irish dancer bouncing up and down with the pipes and drum group, it's probably because she's bright red behind someone off to the side. How, in my four years of knowing Erin have I only seen her impeccable dance skills once? Erin is the best sister, roommate, friend anyone could have been blessed with at the academy. Four years of living together has given me a lifelong friend. She is beautiful and caring. She compliments the qualities others lack and appreciates everyone for who they are. The greatest English major on the yard, Erin's works have been published in the LOG and she has headed open mic night. My talented roommate is off to a new adventure on a brand new platform, LCS, and I couldn't be more proud! See you in Diego my love! Fair Winds and Following Seas.



Yohan Bae

USMC Pilot

Probably one of the most complex intelligent people we have met, yet has no problem dipping into the waters of mental retardation when it is required of him. Whether it be causing chaos for no apparent reason or just plain doing your thing, John Bae you are public enemy number one. But that's not all! You wouldn't have guessed it, but he is a gallant philanthropist as he has donated over sixty dollars to the dairy queen free public consumption fund! During his free time when he is not busy putting down others for their major selections you'll find he is ubiquitous around Penn state constantly satisfying his carnal desires, or perhaps having a deep phone conversation late into the night while others are attempting to sleep. Despite being a public enemy John the room considers ourselves lucky to call you one of our best friends.

Alexander Barto

Navy Pilot

Alexander "Bartholomew" Barto is 11th Company's favorite resident Alaskan. Braving through a miraculous 1,114 bouts of heat rash during Plebe Summer (#yousuckFriedlander), Alex brought only his eskimo foot lotion and his tire chains when reporting for I-day. Though, he's learned a lot since plebe year – namely the anti-awkward hand wave to recover from his previous neck-tab addictions. When Alex isn't at home on break hunting bears, he's probably at a bar in Maine McGuyvering phone numbers from freshmen gurrrlzz. Tired of being called upon to "watch Disney movies" at CatholicU (but seriously, sigh), Alex is always searching for a great adventure. From the biergarten hauses of Munich, the sketchy alleyways of Philadelphia and Paris, to the shores of PB, Alex is definitely not your average bro'ed out Mid. He's a genuine, focused, and honest friend. (Keep Thursday night chats!) Alex, you'll be a GREAT asset to the Naval Aviation community!

Lawrence Borja

SEALs

Ray Borja's arrival at USNA marked the first time in history the school had to order XXL headgear for boxing class. Kid's got a dome. Ray has always tried to avert attention from his head by displaying the tattoos on his obliques written in Japanese. Little does he know they actually mean "I paid too much for this tattoo." All the best things happen to Larry after midnight…nobody is off-limits. When he's not crushing chipotle and diet coke with four Reese's to wash it all down, you can find Ray frantically cutting weight for wrestling matches on the treadmill in Ricketts. A fierce competitor, Ray has been a successful wrestler thank to his gorilla arms and abnormally large head. Somehow Raymond is on his way to graduation strictly thanks to Netflix. The SEAL community is lucky to get a man of Ray's caliber and personality. He loves cats.

Jordan Bowman

Naval Flight Officer

Nickname: "Boy Band" due to his music selection and excessive use of hair product. But when he's not listening to boy bands or teenagers who haven't hit puberty yet, you can find Jordan either watching twerking videos or ESPN at his desk. An avid Georgia foozeball fan (but he's from Missouri), little Jordy packs a big punch if his Bulldogs lose. However, what Jordan appears to lack in size, he makes up for with his heart (insert tears here) and his extremely loud voice that is so necessary for coxswains. One of the most fun people to be around, Jordan is constantly fooling around whether he's cracking jokes or trying to wrestle with his roommate who is almost a foot taller than him. Jordan will take his talents and booster seat to the sky this summer as he reports to Pensacola for flight school as an NFO.

Anthony Cardon

USMC Pilot

Anthony "Mr. Pig" Cardon is a late bloomer on the 11th CO Drinking team. He went under contract from Command Center Romeo ever since the swag fest of the Punta Cana days. In typical fashion, Diva Boy finally showcased his style and flair in the 2013-2014 season, except that one time in Notre Dame….. After a long night, he can be seen returning some goods to the bar via cups. Keep him away from casinos, drags, Canadians, dessert food, and possibly cars….. they tend to fall apart in the road when he touches them. Anthony, you may be a gentleman of liberal education (VGEP status), but we all know that "You Sir, are a Pig!"

Grace Dalton

Surface Warfare Officer

Graduating from an all girl's Catholic School in Malvern, Pa, Grace Lorraine Dalton adjusted well to the Naval Academy dynamic. A true Foxtrot patriot, Grace dabbled in 12 before finding her rightful spot among her 11th Company Armadillos. Serving as Room Commander, Grace also splits her time being the Women's Golf Captain, Company Safety, and … (her thousand other billets). Coming to the Academy, she had her heart set on Service Selecting "Whale Rider," but after the strenuous screener she settled for SWO-METOC. The devout Oceanographer is always enthusiastic about anything weather, water, marine mammal, or Uncrustables related. She spends her free time learning (and practicing) the sounds of whales and dolphins, as well as getting caught up on Free Willy. All joking aside, Grace is one of the most enthusiastic and approachable members of 11th company. Her upbeat attitude compliments her constant smile. Best of luck in San Diego!

Michael Delaisse

USMC Pilot

Mike aka "Mr. Clean" Delaisse has a very big brain and a very tiny chest. Being the "resident expert" on all matters, Mike is always right. And you are always wrong. A Youngster knocked him out at our first pep rally…and he has never been the same since. Every year during Spring Break he entered a new level of debauchery from which he never returns. "Mr. Steal Your Girl" constantly courts females already involved with his friends accompanied by his trusty ukulele. He gets heated in arguments very quickly. To cool him down, just ship him to New Orleans with some $1's. A physical specimen, the only things that can slow Mike down are jumping for joy and backflips. He is going to be the best damn Marine Pilot ever because he knows everything there is to know about planes. He's always right about that too. Semper Fi brother.

Joseph Doyle

USMC Pilot

Joseph A. Doyle, A.K.A. "Injun Joe", hails from the Crow Nation. Despite his Indian heritage, his skin won't tan to save his life. While this may one day result in Melanoma, the Injun remains fearless of the Sun. He has beat cancer before and he'll probably have to do it again. Little Bear is not one to let adversity, whether it be Navy Medical or full bottles of vodka and whiskey, stand in his way of a good time. If he owes you money, you can usually find him at Fed House, but don't expect to collect it. He is a tiger who lives with "No Regrets", not even that large female rugby player he once met in Ocean City. When he graduates Joe will soar high with his spirit animal, the Eagle, as a USMC Pilot. Loyal and dependable to the end, KCCO brother!

Isaac Eickmeier

Navy Pilot

From Illinois came a young man
3rd oldest of the Eickmeier clan
He set out on a quest
To put himself to the test
The Naval Academy was his plan

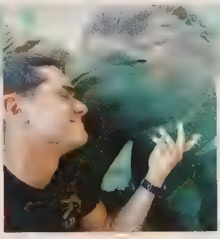
A singer since the young age of three
He joined the great Men's Club of Glee
They traveled along
Spreading joy and sweet song
From sea to shining sea
To challenge his knowledge and wit
He thought it might be a good fit
If he spent his time here
An Aerospace Engineer
The man didn't know how to quit

That's the tale of young Isaac Eickmeier
But his story is not yet retired
He's off doing great things
Earning his golden wings
To become a U.S. Navy Flier

Juliana Everist

Surface Warfare Officer

Juliana Joette "JJkowitz" Everist hails from the great state of South Dakota. She reported to I-Day with a trendy haircut and superb drilling (and pivoting) skills. Probably the most scared plebe in all of Foxtrot, JJ truly blossomed and thrived throughout her time at the Naval Academy. When not training and running the class of 2016 into the ground as Training Sergeant, she was selflessly taking someone's watch or offering up rocks from her family's quarry. In her spare time, JJ ran 11 (MOTIVATING!!!) marathons, to include one in a tutu and one scary race in the Boston Marathon #survivor. JJ's pretty much the coolest, most humble person in 11th Company –watch out for her aspiring Pinterest baking career. In all seriousness, JJ is undoubtedly one of the most dedicated and hard-working people you will ever meet. We will miss you JJ! The SWO community is lucky to have you!



James Garcia

USMC Ground

Since Plebe year, James "Zippity Bop" Garcia has built up quite the reputation in 11th Company. Don't let his size fool you. Knowing for saving lives, he once saved a detailer's life out on the parade field, only later that year to save his own life from a pervert attack at Ocean "Shitty." His bravery is only surpassed by his interactions with the homeless at Dupont "Swagfest" Circle, generously offering $10 for his own cellphone back after a typical "long island" night. But money has never been a problem for James, who justified every expense with, "Don't worry man, we'll get officer pay soon"... since Plebe year. But I'm not worried about his future. Whether he lives in his dream "penthouse" or a trailer park, and despite Gunny Jordan's advice, "Do me a favor, don't go Marine Corps," I know he'll be the finest Marine I know. ROOM 7018! 7018!

Gina Grabowski

Surface Warfare Officer

New Jersey roots give this lady her signature sass. But don't let her intimidate you—she's easily softened up with pictures of bulldog puppies and elephants. She can be found helping classmates with their Oceanography homework, so long as she makes a 2200 bedtime snuggled up with Elly and Hippo. Though she was recruited to swim at the Academy she's too multitalented to stay in one place, so she switched to the varsity golf team her second class year. In free time she cuddles with her puppy, Maya, and serves as the room's pharmacist. Be it for superb organizational skills or her honest opinion, friends know they can rely on Gina. The Surface Warfare community is lucky enough to get her, and she's excited to call the USS Princeton her first ship. She can't wait to settle in San Diego, and is ready to get out there and start surfing.

Billie Greenwood

Navy Pilot

Hugh is the Big Teddy bear who jabbed and stabbed his way into 11th company following youngster year. He hails from the average state of New Mexico even though he speaks like he's from Alabama. He spends his time downing Jameson at the bar and chasing the ladies. He has been know to respectfully let the CDO he will be UA for TAPS so he can continue making the girls feel awkward. All in all Hugh is a great guy and will make a great pilot. Assuming no one puts a broom in his face.

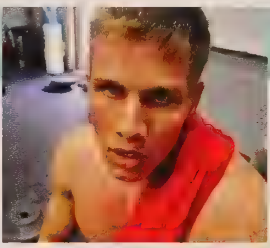
Lauren Hanover

Supply Corps

Hanover is the definition of a true teammate. Whether it's getting everyone together for Frat Thursday, or as simple as a kind hello in the locker room, Lauren's natural ability to bring a family together is unchallenged. Even though she cannot play because she can't stop hitting her head, she easily took the role of coach #5. From two youngsters that truly look up to her, we can honestly say she has without a doubt been a mother to us. We cannot thank her enough for taking us under her wing, and never ceasing to encourage us and help us get to where we are today. We have no doubt that she will become the best Supply Corps officer there is, as her desire to care for others and take extra time to involve herself in a community is greater than most. Good Luck!

Benjamin Herbold

USMC Ground



As President of Navy's Crossfit gym, nobody takes to heart Globo Gym's mantra of "We're better than you, and we know it," than Ben. Whether instructing you on the "functionally fit" way to walk or showing off how far he can hand-stand walk, condescending physical elitism is always in abundance. When not strengthening his lightbulb-esque body, he can be found double-fisting hard cider and belting out his self-proclaimed voice of an angel. With 3 years of dark-side experience under his belt, he's mastered the art of ditching his friends for "love." (Except that one time he single-handedly ruined Ring Dance) Whether sadistically harassing his roommates or uncontrollable sobbing while watching Marley & Me, he's never afraid to show his emotional side. Brown-nosing his way into 2nd place at Leatherneck and motivationally volunteering as tribute for Echo, no doubt you'll be as great a Marine as you are a friend.

Babak Khoshroo

Surface Warfare Officer

Babak "The Prince of Persia" Khoshroo is more myth than man in 11th Company. In fact, some of the underclass still don't believe he actually exists, but he certainly stood out during Plebe Summer. Who can forget his day-long staring contest with the 5-4 elevator or his censored thoughts of the day? It wasn't until Babak came of legal drinking age that he found his true passion, remodeling bar bathrooms, although the owners weren't always pleased with the results. When not cruising around in his black BMW he can be found in the upstairs bar of Mangia's or trolling whoever passes by the mate's desk. This is just his way of overcoming his extreme cynicism. Babak will make a great SWO, I just hope no one on the USS Death March gets on his bad side because the only person that holds a grudge longer is Hiram Tosco.

Matthew Kilby

Submarines

Matthew Kilby is an Alexandria native who was recruited to the Naval Academy to play baseball. Looking for a way to avoid attending a terrible school like Yale (which he got into by the way), he jumped on the opportunity to come to Annapolis. Even though he had some really crappy times, he made it through them no worse for the wear. At 6'3" I am sure that by the time you are reading this, Kil-dog has given himself no less than 5 concussions on his submarine. A certifiable genius, Kilby was the president of the Mechanical Engineering Honors Society while he was here, and epitomized what it means to be a student-athlete. A loving son, brother, and friend, Matthew is the biggest, softest man you will ever have to luck to meet, and he has promised to let us all work for him after our naval careers.

Polly Kisin

Surface Warfare Officer

Hi my name is Polly Kisin and I follow the rules. My Facebook shows that I went to the University of Maryland and Georgetown, but not USNA. Don't bother friending me, there is nothing else to see. I'll always be a mystery. It is common knowledge to stay off the roads when I'm driving and that I do the laundry for the Men's tennis team. However, I won't wear their, or any Navy Spirit gear. It's all about those tribal leggings. Classic hipster of me right? It took me three rounds of plebe summer to finally decide to leave the KGB and become a Navy spy. My first mission included screaming at a plebe in Russian.

Thomas Kraft

Surface Warfare Officer

Thomas never knew how hard the Naval Academy would be or the particulars that would turn out as hates. The southern Texas upbringing that bore him sent ambition and patience to the Naval Academy. He happily maintained the minimum standards at the Academy and if you asked someone from his past if they thought he would do this, they would say never. Wants never plagued Thomas's mind, but he kind of did what he wanted to. "Go make us proud", his loved ones said, but when you can, hurry back. He has his head in the clouds coupled with some high hopes. It surprises most people just how hot the fire in Thomas burns. To the clouds goes Thomas's head, but his feet stay firmly planted on the ground.

Trenton Layne

Surface Warfare Officer

ILING
E SEAS
VICTOR

Trenton "Lone Star" Layne was destined to become Navy's greatest football fan. He averages over 4 MOs per season and can be seen out in town wearing spirit gear. Although his passion for football is great, it is apparent that he has another passion… generally involving Tinder women, fake rose petals, and Jack Daniels, making him a valued member of the 11th CO Drinking Team. He has been quoted saying "Come for the game, live for the party". Although he is rumored to be racist, his love shows no boundaries, as he can be seen on various escapades with women of all races; particularly Latina women and high school Pacific Islander girls looking for a prom date. Finally, to whoever is rooming with him on a ship, don't leave any empty Gatorade bottles around.

Marcus Lewis

Navy Pilot

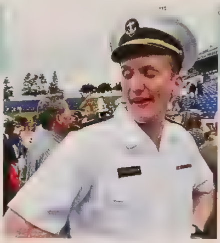
From the halls of the Academy, to the shores of Ft. Lauderdale, Lance Corporal Marcus Lewis, USMC, has moved to the dark side and will now be a pilot in the US Navy. With his lioness from South Africa, he is a member of the 2% club. We love her because she keeps him in the dog box when needed. Have you ever heard that you cannot teach an old dog new tricks? Well, as the grandpa of 11th CO, this fine, educated clown has learned a thing or two from playing countless hours on flight simulator, juggling balls, and watching YouTube videos of space flights, Family Guy, and Dragon Ball Z. However, keep him out of the 9th wing of Bancroft. No tricks can save him from the dance floor and the bouncer. Semper Fortis, Leeewwwiisss!

Eamonn McCarey

SEALs

Shred. Gnar. Kill. No one really knows what this means, yet this is the essence of Eamonn's life. When not shredding, you can typically find him tearing up the dance floor, knocking drinks out of people's hands, and falling prey to mid-hounds. Hide your kids (daughters), though he's made of steel, high school girls are his kryptonite. Although an avid pizza lover, he's forever banned from Mangia's due to a rather kinky bike ride during sports period. He's always been a gentleman, like the time he came to Ring Dance alone, left with another man's date, and ditched her the next morning to catch the surf in Cali. Eamonn, just because you're going to be "high-speed" and knee deep in water buffalo shit doesn't mean you can forget your non-team friends after your skinny bitch ass makes it through BUDS #NONEWFREINDS All our love, kick ass amigo.

John McGlynn



USMC Ground

John McGlynn is one of the most unique men to attend the U.S. Naval Academy. He is the first and only midshipmen to date who can count on his two hands the number of times he has burped…in his entire life. The only difficultly in being John's friend is that, no matter what, he will always out-dance you, he will always outsmart you, and he is not afraid to challenge you. John loves philosophy, he loves praying, and he loves spending quality time with people. However, one should never play Pictionary with John or even entertain the idea of beating him at a game of basketball; most other things are safe. Whether you go with him to mass or go out for a couple drinks, time with John is well spent. The Marine Corps is the perfect spot for this guy and it will be a better community for having him.

Matthew McKeen

USMC Pilot

Hide yo wife and hide yo kids. Matt is a prior nuke who isn't afraid to talk to "younger" women of all classes. At 26 years old, this repeat offender has no shame. A long drive to North Carolina, a flight to Texas, and a ride to Pennsylvania are all just foreplay for this Eagle Scout. He has yet to reach 7th Heaven despite the many opportunities he's had a mile high in the sky. On a side note, jumping out of a plane is cool only so many times… even when you have a GoPro with you. Between his love of women, alcohol, and adventure, Matt will make a fine Marine one day. Semper Fi brother.

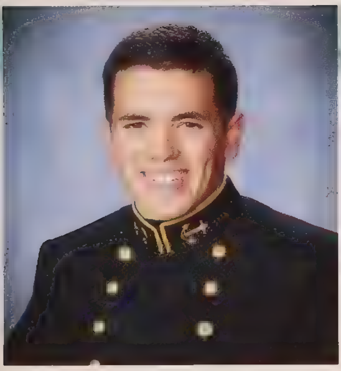
Robert Nefzger

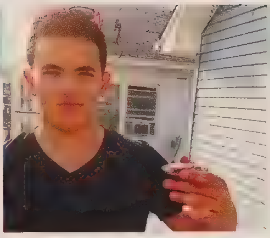
Naval Flight Officer

Bobby, AKA Deospark, is the son of Mike and Susan Nefzger and hails from Fayetteville, Arkansas. He was a member of the 11th Company and selected Naval Flight Officer. Bobby is a musical genius, has perfect pitch, and can destroy anyone in a rap battle. He has a 15 minute attention span and is a huge hypochondriac, but that doesn't stop him from being the most well liked guy in the room. He has never able to take no for an answer, and always has the next move up his sleeves. He is constantly pushing the envelope and thinking of new ideas with his friends, one such idea spread into organizing a conference in Annapolis! There is no doubt that he will one day be on Wall Street or the CEO of his own company (if he isn't already). Basically, he is the best damn wingman you could ask for and he is gonna do great things in Navy Air. We Did It!

Shawn Reed

Surface Warfare Officer





Brian Rud

Submarines

Brian a.k.a "The Demon" Rud is most likely the smartest member of the 11th Company Drinking Team. However, his genius does not stop him from doing stupid stuff. It all started when Brian took a man sized bite out of a styrofoam cooler. Everything went downhill from there. A master of persuasion, Brian perfected the spilling technique to encourage drinking. Whether it was dumping the shell, or making the keg leak, Brian soon got the party going. If spilling was not enough to bring life to the party, Brian turned to more drastic techniques, streaking or belting out Elton John songs. He always goes hard, until the early morning or is it early afternoon. Whatever time of day it is, there was one question always on his mind. So Brian we want to know, "What that smell like?!"

Samuel Sipe

Navy Pilot

Sam Sipe. "Beats." "Chef Gustav." "The Wealthy Investor." If he's not "cookin' some damn eggs" or rushing the Zeta alpha chapter, you can certainly find this man half-dead in the depths of Rickover trying to get a satellite into space…or multi-multi-multi-tasking in prison cell 7067. Sam is man of (not so) simple taste: J. Crew, suede, Johnny Walker, racecars, maybe a rugby player from Ohio or two. Fearless and relentless, Maverick saved the day more than once, from PCB hotel balconies, setting up 50k Watt audio systems in 20 minutes, and fending off French…women. Getting banned from Thurston Hall, Ann Arbor, and Bloomington, IN in four years? He proudly replies, "WEEEEE DID IT!" Four years flew by with lots of Beats and Big Chaw to ease Bancroft's burden. But hey, the fun's only just started – and this Goose ain't going nowhere. See you in P-cola, brother. We DID it.

Matthew Steffens

Surface Warfare Officer

Meet Matthew Steffens. He's 6'5, 225 pounds, has an 80 inch wingspan, plays navy lacrosse, and drives a truck. At least that's what he feeds chicks on Tinder and at the bar. If that wasn't enough man for you, he drinks his coffee black, flosses his teeth with barbed wire and hunts big game on the E-shore with his father Walt. Although he has been tagged as Queen of Instagram, Snapchat, and Facebook, he spends a lot of his time emersed in classic books and poems. In fact, if Matt didn't edit all of the papers he spent hours doing for his friends, the Brigade's QPR would probably drop an entire point. A loving teammate, son, and friend, Matt will be taking his talents to San Diego where he plans to keep playing FIFA, getting big, taking #pics, and maybe try that whole SWO thing.

Hiram Tosco

USMC Ground

Hiram "Oddjob" Tosco is a man shrouded in mystery. What he does during his late nights is a mystery to all. The only clues are three bottles of Aveeno lotion, one box of Kleenex tissues, and the sound of George St. Pierre screaming "I love you Hiram Tosco!" We know you aren't studying, because you're a quan econ major. But women are a zero sum game Hiram, and you're missing out. Here's a tip, don't be afraid of nudity and I won't meat spin you. Just don't put us in your "little black book" and we'll be cool. Famous for single handily hating only one man in 11th company for 4 years, Hiram sure can hold a grudge. But beneath the 5% body fat and chiseled abs, there's a kind, loving and caring little Marine. Thanks for the last 2 years as our roommate. ROOM 7018! 7018!

Britta Vivaldi

USMC Ground

Puppies and kitties and puppies and kitties....and bunnies. Sometimes we wonder if you love animals more than us, if you should join the Peace Corps rather than the Marines and if your calves are natural. Thanks for always setting the standard on fitness... you energizer bunny. We all know you loved those winter track workouts. You have the biggest heart and we love you for overcoming any negativity from the woman with the blond ponytail. Even though you're not on the God squad.. you'll always be on the top of our list. (F.E.W.S.)

Barkley Walter

Surface Warfare Officer

Barkley Walter grew up in the small town of McSherrystown, Pennsylvania. He has chosen to become a Surface Warfare Officer, which is just his first step of several to command the seven seas with an iron fist.

Alexander Wilson

Naval Flight Officer

Lex the hound Wilson, is pretty chill but it wasn't always that way. He used to play varsity soccer and after accomplishing the only feat he was concerned with-most yellow cards in a season-he quit. He was a loser when he was dating Kimmy so it's safe to say he's better off single. When he's not sucking farts, he can be seen bragging about his mediocre conquest from the night before, or operating the phone with 5 different girls at once. He will not be missed by all, but dearly dearly missed by the few people he would do anything for. The kids a legend.

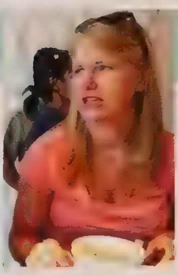
Jennifer Abbott



Surface Warfare Officer

Jenn has requested that before you continue reading, you respond to one of her many Candy Crush Saga requests that so regularly flood your Facebook notifications. Throughout her four years at the Naval Academy, Jenn has lived vicariously through the characters of the many TV series she has watched. Jenn can be found clocking in anywhere between four to six hours of television watching, while strictly adhering to her 9pm bedtime. When she does leave her room, she enjoys frequent trips to Bethesda. Jenn spends her weekends out in the downtown Annapolis area, where she is better known as Jenni. As a member of the Navy's women's swim team, Jennifer eagerly awaits the arrival sports period, to be around her closest of friends. Jenn is eager to begin her life as a surface warfare officer, however she will need to take a brief hiatus for next season of Modern Family.

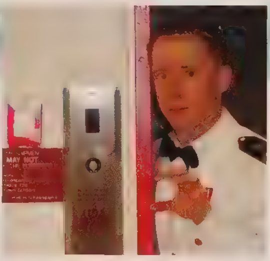
Nobuyuki Acevedo

Surface Warfare Officer

Mitchell Bell

Submarines

Known to his classmates and friends as a "bible thumping whiskey shootin' son of a gun", Mitchell Bell was the prototypical bible belt, All American. While some might say being the beefiest member of the Glee club was a dubious honor, the blond beauties lucky enough to catch the attention of this modern day Frank Sinatra appreciated his combination of power and falsetto vocals. Dr. Jekyll during the week, weekends saw Mitch turn into a proverbial Mr. Hyde, stealing the show at more than one bachelorette party. On a related note Mitch was known to promote strong relationships with the enlisted members of the military. When Mitch arrived at the Academy he initially had his heart set on succeeding Tom Cruise as "Maverick" in Top Gun Two, he soon learned his true calling was in the torpedo tubes of a fast attack submarine. Semper Deep and Fair Seas Mitch.



Colin Bogdan

USMC Ground

Colin, aka "The Dark Lord Dogban", is best known for his endless collection of reindeer games and uttering the phrase "My name is Colin Bogdan" – which, of course, he never actually said. This line rapidly evolved into Bancroft Hall's first platinum single which included the voice of Colin himself – despite the fact that he never recorded anything for the song. In typical ginger fashion, Colin sold his soul to Glee Club during plebe year for a free ride to Dublin where he became the only American that the locals found attractive. After fiercely shooting down potential wooers across the globe, Colin finally succumbed to the charms of a woman over 2/C Ring Dance while feeding goats. In the pursuit of excellence, he became a Trident Scholar so that he could ride the "Trident-vator." A great friend and roommate, Colin will grace the Marines with his small arms (water gun) proficiency.

Jared Bramble

USMC Pilot

Man's best friend, the ultimate wing man. Showing the rest of the 2 percenters how it's done, Jared knows how to work with what he's given. Whether it's working hard as a Battalion Honor Advisor or ensuring that his part of the room is the cleanest, JJ Brams always has your back...unless he's busy showering, which--fortunately for us--doesn't happen very often. The only thing he loves more than whisky and cigars is his boys. If the OOW comes between him and his friends he responds in kind... with his middle finger. Consequently, Jared is the only midshipmen to ever christen the OOW's desk and stumble away with no demerits. When all is said and done, Jared only needs a few things to keep himself happy: his first love Kendall, the Firm, and steerage pizza. Come May, USNA loses a great man and its first "Wolf of Bancroft."

Tyler Breslin

USMC Ground

Call it a bleeding heart or a port-side list; either way there is no denying that Tyler was a sensitive man, especially if you made any correction to any paper he ever wrote. Not even Tyler's engineer roommates could solve his girl problems, vast and numerous as they were. Tyler's incredible work ethic allowed him to earn a master's degree from Georgetown before heading off into the "green." Not even Tyler is sure what MOS he will have, as it changes daily, but we are sure his willingness to sacrifice will serve him well in the Corps and in life. Good things aside, don't let his clean record fool you, as Tyler had some 6K-worthy offenses under his belt while at the Academy (BZ, Shipmate). In all seriousness, success couldn't have happened to a better man. Keep working hard brother, we all love you. –The Roommates

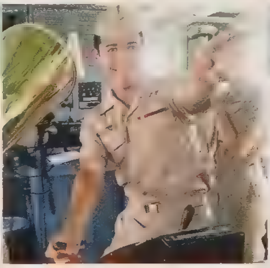
Maria Canelon

Navy Pilot

Francesca Canelon defines what it means to be a free spirit. With a passion for intricate exploration, Francesca and her significant other, Brendan Walsh, have left their mark across the country over these past four years. It is not just travel that Francesca has a love for though, she enjoys seizing the nightlife with her dominant presence at any downtown Annapolis bar. In her own unique way, Francesca controls any dance floor she can find, cutting-the-rug in what would appear to others as an epileptic fit. However, when the time comes to hit the books, Francesca is all business, tinkering away at her complex aeronautical engineering work late into the night. Francesca is a member of the women's hockey team, but her true passion rest on the racks in MacD, where she spends her sports period getting swole and toning her body in a manner that would rival Michelangelo's "David."

David Carrasco

Naval Flight Officer



"Madamoiselle! Parlez-vous français?" A man who is as meticulous as Ron Burgundy and speaks French like no other, he is known for planning awesome Spring Breaks that involve Victoria's Secret pool parties, fine dining on the waterfront of Miami, and tickets to Ultra Music Festival. This guy will get 3 hours of sleep because he spent the other 21 hours watching Jersey Shore or Pablo Escobar. After finishing the multitudes of seasons, he would spend his time surfing the Chive, InfinityList, or websites with exotic places outside of the country. It was only natural that, "FREAK! I didn't do poop!" (For lack of better words) became his trademark. David joined the Fencing team only to ignore it and go become an intramural Soccer god, and in doing so tore his ACL and Meniscus defending a soccer ball. It's all right David; we all know that you're faking it. KCCO

Melissa Chan

Nuclear Surface Warfare

Hailing from the beautiful state of Hawaii, this tiny, pom-pom twirling Asian bombshell is a fiery, feisty firecracker who's always on the go. From "flying" in the air, to navigating the chaotic streets of Beijing, to conquering the dance floor and someday the sea, her larger-than-life personality has kept those around her on their toes. Her no nonsense attitude has been deemed the "Wrath of Chan," yet her motherly qualities have made her a savior to us. Her beautiful smile makes her eyes sparkle, her loyalty makes her the best-est of friends, and her wise advice has certainly kept us all from being fried. Always open ears with a shoulder to cry on with an added order of Chinese take-out, and a great partner out in town or just chilling in the kitchen making curry. Keep charging forward and to the SWO community you've got a hard charger coming your way.

Justin Chock

Surface Warfare Officer

Justin "Spock" Chock began his military career commanding the finest high school troops in all of Kamehameha. He quickly rose through the ranks of the Hawaiian Army and swiftly attained command of a stalwart force within his short tenure. Using this experience, he sought plans to further calcify his plans for world domination. It was at the Academy where he began to sow seeds and solidify his standing in the world's most powerful military. Only he can fall out of his rack at the excitement of MIDN ENS Brown's morning "motivation" and manage to land teeth first onto the deck. Other than study abroad in Japan, meet countless U.S. Ambassadors, become the First Regiment commander, graduate with a 4.0 QPR, be president of multiple ECAs, make it into graduate school, and have lunch with First Lady Michelle Obama, Mr. Justin Kawai Chock has done absolutely nothing with his life.

Caulin Collier

Surface Warfare Officer

Caulin "daddy" collier may seem popular but he is not. Let me explain. He has successfully alienated himself from all human lifeforms except for one person-josh. Legend tells us that the two were born conjoined at the hip and lived 18 years that way until they were forced to separate upon their arrival to naps. He even implanted a tracker chip into josh, in order to know where he is at all times. Also He only dates girls who are friends with Josh's girlfriend to make double dating easier. Still not convinced?...He has a lower back tattoo of Josh's phone number. Despite this, Caulin has left a solid impression by those who are left in his wake. He will be dearly missed by those friends he has made at Usna, and undoubtedly soon forget these lessers to make more room in his limited brain for memories with josh.

Jose Cordova

Ecuadorian Navy

The Prince of Ecuador, as he is known throughout most of the Northeast, arrived at the academy fluent in English, a fact he successful hid throughout plebe summer. Legend has it that Jose was forced to attend the Naval Academy because he has already dated all the eligible women in Ecuador… at the same time. He has spent the last four years 'going with the flow,' which usually led him to bars with loud techno music and nachos, the only two things he claims America does well. Wise beyond his years, incredibly secretive about his weekend plans, stoic and one of the most caring people this side of the equator; Jose has taught everyone that Ecuador is not Mexico, there is more to life then grades and staying in your room after TAPS is more of a suggestion than a requirement. These bromistas couldn't have asked for a better roommate.

Ryan Daniel

Surface Warfare Officer

Ryan "Ryno" Daniel is a no-nonsense, body building, mover and shaker. Hated by few, liked by many, and feared by all, he has never undertaken something that he didn't finish. This all American master hunter, pro fisher, expert mechanic, jack of all trades, Swo-daddy is more man than Paul Bunyan. However, he does have a soft side and has been seen complementing girls on their big brown eyes. Not to be trifled with, Ryan is called sir by youngsters. Chuck Norris has a poster of Ryan Daniel on his wall. Ryan gave superman an inferiority complex. Ryan is saluted by his company officer. Adriana Lima once invited Ryan to a sleep-over and he replied, "I don't sleep." Ryan needed a diamond for his class ring so he chewed on coal for a half hour. Seriously, half of those are true. Ryan is the man in the arena.

Aaron Demers

Surface Warfare Officer

A-A-Ron aka duck boy, born and raised in the worst city known to mankind. It's been a tough road for you, from sliming through the p-ways, to listening to Project Pat while grilling burgers, to doing math on the "Cac-u-later", you have been through it all. A person who would sacrifice their hands in order to provide a safe cushion to save someone's "life" is a warrior if we have ever seen one. Your life motto "Just because you already played the team, doesn't mean you have to play them again" is truly an inspiration. Even though you're a definitely a nerd, we are proud of you and know that you will be a great EDO. Your philosophy of the cold is still questionable but Seattle will be fun. As always, Lenue has the TV and Khalif has the speakers and ensure your hatchback has a better name than Tonto.

John Vincent Deniega

Navy Pilot

John Vincent Deniega started out his military career as Supreme Allied Commander of all JROTC forces in the US, acquiring more ribbons in his short tenure than his chest could possibly bear. So, upon arrival at the Academy, he was quite confused as to why they had not made adequate accommodations for his arrival. After the initial shock had worn off, JV adopted a stoic nature second only to Admiral Stockdale himself. A man of pithy words, JV quietly rose from obscurity, to M.I.R, to 12th Company Commander, roundhouse-kicking his way to the top. Somewhere between his first "legal" night (where he claimed he was merely dizzy) and getting thrown out of Acme for destroying a man twice his size who tried to fight him, everyone truly started to see JV for the man he was: fiercely loyal to his classmates, absurdly smart and truly a "higher order being."

Samantha Dennis

Civil Engineering Corps

Once she tried to catch them all, until she caught the one. Sammer Bammer, Samalama, Sammie Sweetheart and the soon-to-be… or maybe not that soon-to-be (if you talk to her faja)… Mrs. Jordan Krulick is Queen of Bay Ridge. On hot sunny Annapolis summer days you can see her whipping up some milkshakes, doing flips behind her boat on her wakeboard, or running around the BR stuck in a life ring, but never without donning American flag paraphernalia! This July 4th lover has the exact opposite personality of the typical military officer, ENFnP4lyfe, and the concussions to really set her apart from the rest. Gulfport, Mississippi doesn't know the dessert chef that's coming their way! (remember: always add marshmallows)

Aaron Dupere

Submarines

Joshua Emison

USMC Ground

This future world leader is nothing less than a true soldier. His love for the Barbados, Natasha Bedingfield, single blade razors, and skinny jeans far surpasses a Mid's love for ice cream. There is no doubt in anybody's mind that he will summit Mt. Everest, visit every country, win every girl's heart, and beat Takeru Kobayashi's eating records. When this fierce ginger isn't training to save the world, you can catch him riding dirty in his Buick Century along the Florida coast searching for the next big wave. With his quick wits and extensive use of puns, he is an avid master debater. The Marine Corps will be proud to have this one, for he will never leave a stone unturned or a path not taken. Josh, may your shots be straight and your decisions swift, for you are the Marine the Corps deserves.

Lenue Gilchrist

Naval Flight Officer

Nue nue or should I say Llama Boy? Regardless of the name, I can't believe the time has come for us to do our thing and be big boys. Even though you are younger than me by date, I always looked at you as an old wise man who knew the true value of sleeping. From those long summer drives, to 7TEN6 killing the rap game, even to golfing on the same green, we have literally been through it all. I know for a fact that when I look up in the skies that I will be safe on the ground knowing that you got my back. I hope to be there to see little William but I know you will give him a big "yeeee haaaaa" from me. Good luck down in "Pepsi-Cola" homie and remember you always got a brother to hold you down no matter what. Peeea!

Andrew Hayes

USMC Pilot

A talented track athlete and scholar out of the all male, Chaminade Catholic High School Andy was destined for greatness here at USNA. He continued the track of academic excellence by choosing one of the most challenging majors at the Academy, History. Andy can usually be found in his rack solidifying gains or mentoring various members of the current years Youngster class. A lover, a fighter, but mostly just homicidally angry, Andy was always up for a good time and could be counted on in times of need. Service selecting Marine Aviation, we have no doubt that Andy will carry on in the proudest traditions of the Corps, by drinking excessively and making poor decisions after midnight.

Jordan Heller

Navy Pilot

Sired by the great Randall Heller, Gordo hails from Glen Arm, Maryland, only 45 minutes from the Yard…or 20 if you’re riding with him. While many find this to be a miserable little state, you won’t find a more proud uhh… Marylander?...everyone knows a states’ worth is judged by its’ shape. He’s more loveable and loyal than your old hound, and no one makes a better lifting buddy. You can rest assured that as long as you’re doing chest or arms, he’s in. However, any other muscle group and you will hear the Gordo go-to, “it’s bulking season bro”, and you’re going solo. This hot blooded hero of Baltimore County is soon to take his swagger to the skies as he assumes the title of Navy Pilot. It’s said that there are two kinds of pilots: fighters and targets. Well brother, you can be my wingman anytime.

Tyler Jacobsma

USMC Pilot

Affectionately known to his friends as “Habibi,” Tyler proved his teachers wrong when he successfully hibernated through the entirety of the Dark Ages. If he’s not busy predicting the weather, Tyler is frequently seen transversing Bancroft Hall with a compass or standing at Hospital Point ensuring that everyone wears a glow belt. Whether it’s D&B, mountain climbing, or good ol’ country style loving (with redheads), Tyler approaches everything with an open heart and a filled flask. A future Marine Aviator, Tyler looks forward to serving his country and then returning to his farm--miles away from civilization. When he finally earns his wings, Tyler will be just the 2nd Iowa resident who believes flying isn’t a form of witchcraft. A first responder by trade, Tyler was always the first one to pick his fellow midshipmen off DTA’s unforgiving pavement. On January 9, God made a farmer and a patriot.

Matthew Lanoue

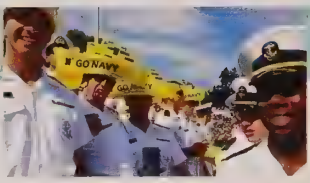
Submarines

Matt Lanoue, more commonly known as Charmer, is known by all as a kind, smart, caring young man who is deeply in love with his 2% girlfriend Mary...and his mother. As the youngest member in the company, he's everyone's little brother, except the kind of little brother that is smarter than everyone else. His accomplishments include Trident Scholar, Bowman Scholar, playing of the Army Alma Mater three times, giving no sleep-ins as Company Commander, and being the only individual to get kicked out of Pussers. While most mids dreamed of sunny beaches filled with beautiful women, you could find Matt sticking forks into electrical outlets and playing with his arduino board (yes, that's what they call it these days). He will make a great Submariner because of his ability to start nuclear reactions simply through slapping uranium hard enough. We wish him the best of luck going forward. Semper Deep!

Robert Lombardo

Surface Warfare Officer

Isaac Losee



Surface Warfare Officer

Sir Isaac "Dutchess" Losee's interest in the military began when he was just a child. With each viewing of Top Gun, he exalted at the top of his lungs, "I WANT TO DRIVE THAT CARRIER!" So, he left behind the luxuries and ladies of Mormon-Town and set off on a life of frugality and humility at Annapolis. Making use of the unsurpassed athleticism (questionable) he developed at Judge Memorial Catholic High School, he quickly made a name for himself during Plebe Summer for his world speed-walking record from 5-4 to T-Court. As stripes layered on his shoulders, his devilish good looks matured (once again, questionable), and the luxuries and ladies returned in full force. But there is one thing that has remained constant: Whether it's his passion for cinema or his unmatched discipline on the track, there is no friend more loyal (or eager) than Sir Isaac Justin Losee.

David Macfarlane

SEALs

Yes, behold David Macfarlane, the rock, the hard place, like a wind from Deutchland he sweeps by, blown far from his SoCal homeland in search of glory and honor. We walk in the garden of his turbulence! A bro who can trace his lineage back beyond Charlemagne, we first met him atop a mountain near Jerusalem, praying to God, asking his forgiveness for the Al-Qaeda blood spilt by his sword. Next, he amazed us still further in Italy when he saved a fatherless beauty from the would-be ravishing of her dreadful Turkish uncle. In Greece he spent a year in silence just to better understand the sound of a whisper. And so without further gilding the lily and with no more ado, I give to you, the seeker of serenity, the protector of Italian virginity, the enforcer of our Murican' freedom, the one, the only, David Rombach Macfarlane!

Stephen Patricco

Navy Pilot

The Italian stud of a man from exit 139B lives the life of a true gentlemen. His cooking skills, dashing looks, and noggin of knowledge make him a prime candidate for any woman looking for a great catch. Unfortunately, his personal taste prefers women who play for the opposite team. Though easy on the eyes, Stephen is often a bit of a surprise to the nose. Regularly compared to the Peanut character Pig Pen, Stephen's wonderful company comes with an unfortunate hint of methane. None the less, this iron man running, bike riding, triathlete comes to play with a huge heart. Always serving others, he lends a helping hand on everything from Aero homework to PRT prep. Soon he'll head to Pensacola, as the pride and joy of a loving family, to pursue his supersonic dreams. Stephen, we wish you the best; fair winds and following skies.

Drew has been entered into the 2009 Guinness Book of World Records for wearing the same shoes with the most number of outfits, hence the name "All Purpose Drew." You can seen those shoes worn to weddings, golf tournaments, clubs…..you get the point. As the school's top golfer, Drew was always seen on the driving range and putting green. His Johnny Bravo hair, lamb chop sideburns, and quick one-liners will always be remembered. He hopes to continue his golf career down in Pensacola as a Navy Pilot.

Kelsey Shevock

Surface Warfare Officer

Fresh out of high school and ready for anything, this sheltered mama's girl made the treacherous, hour long journey from Virginia to a new adventure in Annapolis. The first struggle came to light when her inability to identify her detailer's gender brought her some unwanted attention. Further struggles, including an unparalleled mishap in the "safety" of the foam pit, never deterred Kelso. As for her exquisite musical taste, she's generous in sharing the same song on repeat with her roommates. Occasionally, she's a bit indecisive as she prepares to go out—if she hasn't changed at least 5 times, she's not ready yet. Kelsey has however decided to become an engineer after graduation. Honey, you do realize you majored in chemistry, right? Regardless, Kelsey is headed to sea where her hardworking attitude is sure to pay off. Fair winds and following seas Kelsey… And the jelly is in the toaster.

Katherine Smith

USMC Ground

From the city of Boston to the town of Annapolis, Katie arrived with her cellphone firmly in hand. Her screeching yell would make any member of 5-4 cringe at the high-pitch frequency. She survived the terrors of plebe summer and decided to play the gentle sport of rugby. She would return from this abusive relationship covered in bruises with a plethora of great stories… and nicknames. Despite her slight disorganization problem, evidenced by the jungle that is her desk, there has only been one spontaneous combustion to date. Even as a chemistry major, Katie managed to retain enough energy to collect the gossip of the wolf pack and mature into one fine [wo]man. She has been a pleasure to live with (usually) and is one loyal and caring friend. This extremely stubborn, competitive, and driven girl from the heart of Boston will no doubt become a great leader. Semper Fi!

Thomas Stone

Supply Corps

Thomas graduated high school from Melbourne Central Catholic High School, in Melbourne, Florida. He wanted to attend the Naval Academy since he was a young boy, and serve his country like so many of his family member before him. While at the Academy, he played football and majored in Economics. Thomas was also part of the two percent club and was married on June 7, 2014. Thomas selected Supply Corps as his service selection.

John Watkins

Civil Engineer Corps

John "LT's favorite mid" Watkins or Chief Watkins as he has been affectionately dubbed due to his salty character, constant 5 O'clock shadow and ability to fix most mechanical problems spent the majority of his midshipmen career fighting the man at every turn. In reward for his counterculture approach to military training the Navy threw him into the Civil Engineering Corps which is, in no uncertain terms John's dream job, further proving that sometimes good things do happen to good people. The master offshore sailor remained baffled by the concept of morning formations, alcohol chits, big government, taxes and arguments with women; all of which fall into his category of 'some bs.' John was never afraid to speak his mind, risk restriction or help a friend, making him one of the most universally loved members of 12th Co. "I should tell you, when I'm drunk, I'm dangerous."

Cassidy West-Santos

Medical Corps

A distant relative of the possum, the exquisite Cassidy was a studious member of the Brigade. A chemistry major, it was suspected that Cassidy spent much of his time in the basement of Michelson living out his Breaking Bad fantasies by cooking homebrew methamphetamine. One of the few to escape the Academy's tight grasp, Cassidy spent a semester at the Air Force Academy. We may never know what happened that semester, all we know is he came back with a glint in his eye and a skip in his step. While not unlocking the secrets of the universe with his highfalutin ways of science Cassidy spent many hours investigating his second passion, the female psyche. As the Twelfth Company's resident psychologist, we could always count on Cassidy to lend a sympathetic ear to anyone in need. Cassidy looks to continue his helping ways as a Navy doctor, where he hopes to specialize in gynecology.

Our California barbie doll... Charles is so proud of the young devil pup you have become because you remind him of himself. You went from napping uncontrollably in the locker room and sleeping through your Chemistry 6 week exam to conquering all third battalion plebes. You were always there to give the best advice to anyone who needed it, being so wise beyond your years. You didn't let a serious knee injury come between you and the soccer field or from being the future marine we knew you could be. You're OBVI TOTES ADORBZ, the biggest fashionista of the brigade, and one of the most loyal friends and teammate NWS could ask for. (F.E.W.S.)

Leafy Leaf, aka Big Baller, aka I don't look at price tags. My main man since day one! I can remember the first time we met, standing on a bulkhead during plebe summer, looking at each other and trying not to laugh as you stood sideways because of your messed up nametag. King AE, you can't even walk through King hall without seeing "one"; we still have to get those company patches. Anyways, whether it was plebe year chopping across Bancroft for Valentine's Day, acting a fool in DTA/Loyola, or just a long day golfing the greens, you've always had my back no matter what. We keep each other in line and I couldn't ask for a better best friend. You're going to be a great Marine. You're my brother and I love you to death. Touche, Touche, Touche! P.S. You cannot wake up dead (Bangs gavel).

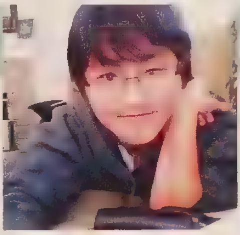
Christopher Zeleznik

Nuclear Surface Warfare

"Dude, I hate it when..." is how 'Chris Problems' usually begin. 'Chris problems,' as they have been dubbed by his roommates, are essentially first world problems that occur exclusively to ridiculously good looking and athletic people. No amount of mousse in the world could solve the puzzle that is Chris' hair, but that does not stop him from making a valiant attempt each morning. When he is not in the gym, watching Top Gear or taking six dozen twenty minute naps, he can be found perusing the streets of Annapolis in his '68 Chevelle, probably wearing sandals regardless of the season. His alter-ego 'Leif,' the Viking conqueror, will surely take Pearl Harbor by storm. Fiercely loyal, tough, perpetually upbeat and strangely proud of Portland, a man could not ask for a better friend than Chris "Z" Zeleznik.

Elaine Zhong

Navy Pilot



In the dredging summer of 2010, this monkey-like creature from the Far Westlands literally stomped its way to Mother-B with its unbrushed, boy-like hair and sloppy tongue. Unable to annunciate one word, she commonly lurked behind "Spock", detracting all negative energy from the yellow shirts. Easily distracted and incapable of eating dairy, this Katie Perry mess slowly bloomed into a woman. Within months, she became a running goddess, 12th Company's Asian Chef, and a fashion enthusiast/pioneer of the question "Do you Vogue?" Nevertheless, Elaine is one tough "Shabi" to take a beating from her roommate(s) and overcome her challenges with her green, mystery juice and unrelenting spirit. We love you Elaine! We hope for you to find your desired husband, but more importantly, infinite happiness!

Jesse Allen Del Angel, a man of no language, a man of no land… in other words you really need to know this kid in order to understand him or you will just be lost in oblivion even much more than his friends already are. After surviving the 5 year program, NAPS & USNA, along his side, I still sometimes don't comprehend him. I do know this; he is one of the most loyal (like a dog) friend and most caring human beings you'll ever meet. Any friendship that has been made with him is full of inside jokes mostly induced by him. From not knowing the time of day, getting lost in his hometown, to traveling and almost getting arrested in a foreign country. His dedication, except to school, to his job and leading those under him to success will make him a great officer in the USN.

Brandon Cespedes

STAR SPANGLED SWAGGER

Navy Pilot

Don't be fooled--behind his dashingly handsome Latin American/English exterior lies a charmingly sensitive guy. Whether he's introducing himself to married women, chasing French girls, or going on dates with engaged women you can be sure that Brandon will be displaying his hopeless romanticism. While many of your friends, and your father, will remember nights of you chasing drinks with women, we're happy that you will not... As a naval aviator, he is following his father into the sky, despite the fact that his father went to school at a mile high. Brandon, despite how much hardship we give you, you always set your sights high and you will be one hell of an aviator.

Zachary Cornelius

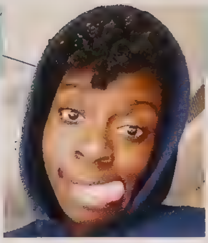
Navy Pilot

DaZachary Cornelius finally came to this great institution after cutting the umbilical cord from his loving mother. From then on he has been known as a tornado chaser, Sasquatch enthusiast, whale hunter, and lover. If ever in need of a rack, Zachery will be sure to share his whether he is conscious or not. His vast stores of useless sports knowledge is only outmatched by his unceasing ability to never pitch a full game. What he lacks in closing strength he makes up for with tireless dedication to the art and "science" of oceanography. His love of oceanography has brought him in close contact with several whales of all shapes and sizes. Even after the battering his body has taken during his years of whale hunting, he is still able to ingest diabetic levels of sweet tea. He truly lives up to the standard of a true southern gentleman. 7218.

Tyler Cox

Navy Pilot

Commonly referred to as the Emperor or Communist Brother, Tyler is well known as the Protector of Mexico. He is probably one of the smartest people you will ever meet, but don't let that fool you into thinking he is a nerd... he watches the X files! When he's not slaving away in piles of Aero books, he's usually drowning himself in life's great nectar so that he can forget the 80 page performance lab he just wrote and made his roommate print out. There is no doubt those extra hours in Rickover paid off, since he's the number one Naval Aviator select, unless all those overtime hours were used to help him climb the ranks in a different way. Either way, there is something about the cockpit that steadies those shaky hands of his. He excelled at USNA and we know he will make a 10 times better Pilot.



Rebecca Dolce

Surface Warfare Officer

Rebecca "Big Red" Dolce is a woman of few words, only when she's sleeping. She is a strong person who has had to endure a lot in her time here. With all the she has gone through she still finds time to be happy, help others and sing. She is a woman after God's own heart and strives to touch every person she encounters. As goofy as she is, she is a wonderful person who genuinely cares for others. "He was WOUNDED for our transgressions, He was BRUISED for our iniquities. The chastisement of our peace was upon Him and by His stripes we areHEALED. He was OPPRESSED and AFFLICTED yet he opened not his mouth. He was led as a lamb to the SLAUGHTER and as a sheep before her shearers is SILENT so he opened not his mouth."Isaiah 53:5, 7

I am from Bath, Ohio. I am a Mechanical Engineering major and I enjoy math and science based problems. My sister, Kelly, is in the Class of 2017, hoping to fly helicopters when she graduates. I enjoy playing with my two dogs, Rockie and Colby, and I take them on hikes so that they can experience the outdoors with me. I listen to country music and play acoustic guitar when I have time. I am participating in VGEP at Johns Hopkins' Carey Business School to get my Master's degree in Finance. I service selected SWO and will be stationed out of Everett, WA after I finish graduate school. "Life is not a journey to the grave with the intention of arriving safely in a pretty and preserved body, but rather to skid in broadside, thoroughly used up, totally worn out, and loudly proclaiming, 'Wow...what a ride.'" – Fearless

Brianna French

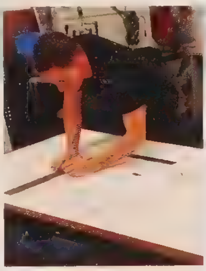
USMC Pilot

I first saw you the day before I-day, flipping through t-shirts in the Midstore. By the end of plebe year, I already knew I had met a remarkable person and a lifelong friend. You joined Drum and Bugle Corps, Glee Club, and Semper Fi while completing an English major and Spanish minor, but always kept your Woodbridge, VA family close to your heart. Our time here has been so blessed. Late night Friends marathons in NYC, mojitos and salsa in Salamanca, Dr. Seuss in Hawaii, Sunday Mass, Nimitz coffee talks, Lemongrass dates, your outrageously contagious smile, and all those hugs…I will cherish these memories in my heart forever. You fill those around you with joy. You are going to make an incredible Marine Corps aviator, Brianna. Your Catholic faith will keep you strong…just keep talking to the Big Man Upstairs! Honey Bunches, you are so beautiful. The most beautiful. Mwahaha.

Ethan Greco

Naval Flight Officer

"I love deadlines. I like the whooshing sound they make as they fly by."



Ian Hagen

Navy Pilot

Ian Hagen, oh how many stories we have because of this charismatically rambunctious blonde boy. He is easy to find in any situation, with his distinct voice, infinite confidence, concerning inability to follow societal or social norms, and wonderful ability to bring smiles to one person's face while putting anger into ten others. Some nights he would disappear behind a door only to emerge when the house clean-up was done, and other nights he would just disappear, but rest assured most nights he was looking for love….and often finding it for a week or two. Perhaps Ian's charisma comes from his ability to take anything in stride, be it from a bad date (which may end with a broken hand) or dealing with the inadequate confidence displayed by everyone else. Always wielding a new catch phrase and loud voice his presence was always known, and often felt when he argued his way into hugging you. Your buds love you Ian, despite your innate inability to accept defeat. You certainly belong in Pensacola, drinking and chasing your way through the streets; your name surely will not be forgotten.

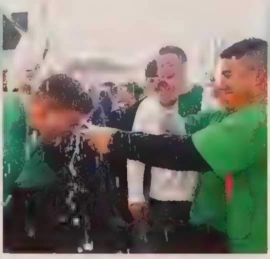
Wyatt Hill

Naval Flight Officer

Wyatt Hill is a man of many colors, from his matching pink shooting glasses and ascot to his purple boots, he always arrives in style. When he's not wearing his boots like the true cowboy he is, you can find him decked out in his Pocahontas shoes. A true American like Wyatt has his priorities straight, from big guns to dodge trucks, Copenhagen tobacco to Pendleton whiskey, he's about as Merica as it gets. When he's not out breaking clay you can always find Wyatt Hard at work in his room watching TV or preparing for his next hunting trip. Wyatt is a true friend and a patriot. He's always there when you need him and tries to help others as best he can. As he enters the fleet he'll go from being the hunter to being Goose. May the odds be ever in his favor.



Michael Huf

Surface Warfare Officer

If you asked Mike Huf what it was like to be a Mid at the Naval Academy… he wouldn't be able to tell you. His experience at the Academy has been most typical for a member of our prestigious football team. Big Mike can rage face as good as the rest and has spent more time at his sponsor's house.. than he has in Mother B. Good thing Mike had his beautiful fiancé, Jacyln Pascetta, to keep him in check or he quite possibly would have spent eleven grand on Steerage Pizza's instead of her engagement ring. Mike, we love you wholeheartedly and wish you and Jaclyn the very best. Just know I called it when you end up not "five and diving" and become a career Commander teaching Navigation in Luce Hall you salty SWO.

Eric Jacobs

USMC Pilot

Not knowing life-path to take, Jacobs wanted something to show for the work he had done to earn the straight A's at Tahlequah High School. While playing SOCOM II U.S. NAVY SEALs, he figured that joining the military to lead and aid in the fight would be both a more exciting lifestyle and a tremendous honor. Because of his lack of advanced math and science classes, Jacobs was given the option to attend the Naval Academy Preparatory School, and so the journey began...

Emily Kreyenhagen

Navy Pilot

Fräulein Kreyenhagen, or more affectionately referred to as Em Dog or Coach K, is one of a kind. From Backwoods, Montana, She might look harmless but having been raised with a rifle in one hand and a beer in another, she can out drink the surliest of her peers. As a future pilot, she is looking forward to boozing it up in Pensacola; she might even study. She might be blond but she can eavesdrop on the Hispanic passengers of the Annapolis bus. Don't let the hair fool ya though, she's sharp as a knife and will cut you with it if you get in the way of her naps. All jokes aside, Emily is an amazing woman who is going to continue to do great things in the future. She laughs loudly, loves deeply and is a true inspiration to anyone who meets her. Good luck! We love you.

Marissa Lihan

Surface Warfare Officer

Me speak English real good. Her would murder I if her readed this grammar like real bad. She probably will spell check this and edit it to her standards. She spend a lot of time walking outside spilling boiling hot tea on herself. And although she doesn't have a future in volleyball, she has a strong future as a SWO, as long as she has a lid on her coffee cup. Go NADS!

Yujen Lu

Taiwan Navy

Lu Daddy. Our favorite man from the Orient. You are a silent genius with many fantastic stories that nobody, besides your American comrades, will ever know. You personify the stereotypical Asian student with your good grades and endless nights of clicking away on videogames. We hope that you will be able to stay awake during graduation and the successive ships you will command, something that you've never managed to do during class or briefs. It would also be terribly tragic if you were to dislocate your shoulders while receiving your diploma. We will all miss you as you return home to Taiwan, but you will have many open homes throughout the States.

Andrew Mighty

USMC Ground

Andrew "Sasquatch/Chief Keef" Mighty: This quiet gentle giant is known for his personification of all the Characters from Winnie the Pooh. He is 'Eeyore' whenever on the grounds of the Academy, a black Christopher Robin among the ladies, and Tigger when at Acme …and god only knows what he is at Pussers. Among the track team, this fun loving mountain of a man is your typical reverse Benjamin Button; aging considerably over his 4 year sprinting career, graduating only a tad bit younger than Greg Hill. Best quotes, "Hey can you come to GNC with me so I don't make a fool of myself?" "Hey I'm gonna go to Acme for 20 minutes" "YES NO BREATHALYZER…you know how I know? I'm ADEO!" To have his hamstrings you are cursed, to share his company you are lucky, to have his friendship you are blessed. #Gilman2010 #Navy2014 #MarineGround

Nicholas Moser

Surface Warfare Officer

Whether he's planted on a stool at Acme, at the helm of the Shipmate van, or wallowing in his filthy den, just follow your nose to catch a whiff of La Dirte. Telltale signs of sighting a wild Mose in his natural habitat include but are not limited to: discarded Grizzly tins, lingering blends of pungent odors, a flowing mane slicked back firmly with natural greases, and various other forms of chaotic destruction and debauchery. Every e-dog's fantasy and Miss Anna Hart's worst nightmare wrapped into one garbage can of testosterone, lacrosse brought Dirt out of Washington and the opportunity to drink coffee at his leisure on the high seas will take his talents to Mayport after they somehow let him graduate.

Akheel Patel

Navy Pilot

Akheel Patel or affectionately Poonjob is not who I pictured would become my best friend at the Academy. The cranberry juice purges after breaks, the near golfcart deaths, the gin buckets on the Severn, are only one facet of this balding beauty. Constantly in love with an exotic virgin across the country, Akheel has taken to attending conferences in the hopes of meeting the one. The ultimate wingman, the best smooth talker I know, and after a few drinks you can see him shaking his indian ass on the dance floor. Lately, he can be found with the firm, smoking a cigar with Stormin' Norman, or lifting in order to fit in with his meathead roommates. There is no one I trust more with my life, and I know Akheel will be there when I need to dispose of the lifeless hooker next to me.

Ben Radford

USMC Pilot

Hailing from the down home, backwoods mountains of Roanoke, Virginia, Ben is fond of reminding his slightly less refined friends of his Southern gentlemanly qualities and virtues. When not prancing around the field playing un-American sports like soccer he can be found hard at work in the books, in the gym, or running down to Clemson chasing his long lost love. Bradford is always up for a good time but remember, nothing good happens after midnight. The Marine Corps is lucky to have Ben and he'll always be a true friend. Anyone who counts this guy as a friend is truly blessed.

Kareem Radwan

Navy Pilot

More affectionately known as Jose, or perhaps Don Cheeto, Kareem Radwan was never far from a good time nor far from a vessel of J.C. While his classmates will not remember him for his physical grace, they will remember his brash advice and unceasing candor. While we're still skeptical that the Navy will find a plane that will fit his inconceivably broad shoulders and unnaturally small waist, we're confident that the dozen nights he spent writing hundred page wind tunnel reports will set him up for success at P-cola. Riding the wings of his success, MIDN Radwan will undoubtedly find that beautiful, black, boo-thang he has been searching for his entire life and start that family of little league all-stars. #blueskies #60sForDays #WGW #didmytimeinhell #breadonmyhead #ILBBTMFP #blessed

Gerald Rimmer

Nuclear Surface Warfare

Gerald came to the Naval academy under the pseudonym of dad. He has lived up to his nickname with his weekly old fashions down at Castlebay. The epitome of a true southern gentleman, Rimrim is always ready to carry a downed mid with one hand, whilst holding a Jack and Coke in the other, so long as he isn't in Jacksonville. The Joseph Gordon-Levitt look alike, armed with his Ronald Reagan cuff-links, wants nothing more than to get real classy and real trashy on the weekends. Now this SWO Poppa is ready to take on Pearl Harbor. Going to Waffle House at two in the morning will never be the same without you. To quote the great Froggy Fresh, "If you don't got each other's backs, ain't no one gonna have your back. RIP Tupac Shakir. We all miss you." We will always have your back. War. Damn. Eagle. KR

Thomas Rowland

Submarines

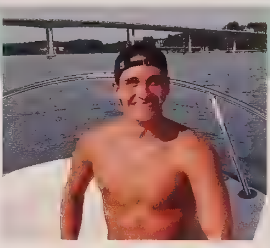
Though he may deny it vehemently, Tom 's ginger hair is something that has weighed on all his friends' minds. We have been able to move past this glaring flaw because of his bright smile and weirdly high pitched way of saying hello. He's the type of guy that would do anything for you, just don't offer him pizza from New York, its kinda like making the Hulk angry. He really took the idea of getting fat on a Sub seriously when he stopped working out completely and began gorging himself on weakness bears. Despite this, he has managed to remain extremely athletic, and we think he may even find that special someone before those beers and bears catch up with him. Tom's strong principles will carry him far in life and he will make a true warrior in the silent service. #onlyrealcoreisareactorcore

Kalli Schulz

Surface Warfare Officer

Dedicated, determined and a voice of reason, Kalli was a late but vital member of the Navy Women's soccer team. We joke that she is the "token joe" of the team, but her love for this school and her teammates make those around her seek to rise to her standard. She was a key union member and caffeine enthusiast. Her hard work and positive attitude were unwavering no matter how hard a practice was her positivism was infectious. Kalli we know you are always rushing (Battalion Commander extraordinaire) but we love you and appreciate everything you have contributed over the years. Go Badgers! (F.E.W.S.)

Taylor Setness



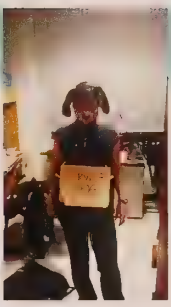
Surface Warfare Officer

Taylor is the lovable dog that just won't leave your side. Easily taken advantage of, he still has the decency to pay for the cab…Showers with velociraptors and then drives them home in his 6 speed automatic Camaro #daddysmoney. Doesn't let things like drunk, homeless friends get in his way. Not afraid to start a fight with you in your own frat house…Always finds a great deal at the midstore… Burner of the bridges…Ts for Zs…leaves with a "10" (#shesreallya2), wakes up with a guy (#passmemyboxers)…the dance floor therapist…No matter what Taylor does, non sibi sed patriae. The number of alphas Taylor is familiar with is truly astonishing. We love you Taylor and your kankles. #NWXC4L #SaintMarysSoChill #LordsofDogTown

Rachel Slater

Navy Pilot

Rachel, she dresses like an elegant, high-class business exec, she works-out like it's her job, and will have a thank you card to you before you have even given the gift. We wouldn't be surprised if she returned to the Academy as the next Anna Hart. But don't let her classy style fool you; this skinny betch can get down. The Cookie Shack can forever attest to this. Her current days are filled with remorse for choosing to be a narc (the boat kind), clocking an abnormal amount of time on the stationary bike (watch out Lance), and organizing her already immaculate desk. However, her pilot life will soon take her to Pensacola where she will have to pick up new hobbies. We hope that she can transform her Oregon ski legs into a pair of surfing machines (she has a name to live up to after all). Later Slater.



Rizalina Suriben

Surface Warfare Officer

Riza didn't start in 13th company, but you'd never know that unless she told you. This SWO mama hit the ground running and putting knowledge into the brains of the class of 2017 and holding them to a standard that exceeds the brigade's. Approachable and hard working, Riza has truly become a member of the 13th company family and is ready to help when you need her. Don't let her training background fool you, she has a fun side too that makes her the life of the party. Good luck out there and do great things! Fair winds and following seas.

James Theodos

Navy Pilot

Christopher Thompson

Navy Pilot

Hailing all the way from East Puerto Rico, this refined Annapolitan has taken just about every opportunity to roam about the globe during his time as a Midshipman. Whether making his way down Bourbon Street, Temple Bar, or the Gaslamp District, a good time and a good story are sure to follow. Despite sacrificing many inches of flow and a cell phone or two to Mother B, Chris earned his lifelong dream of flying for the Navy. The Navy is lucky to have Chris in the cockpit and he fits right in to a long line of honorable service to the nation wherever his career may take him.

Rheanna Vaughn

USMC Ground

The infamous Ice Queen, think of Frozen's Queen Elsa, but way "cooler". I don't think you could find a more honest and articulate woman if you tried. Rhe has no fear when it comes to telling others that they did or said something stupid. From scaring the crap out of pledges during plebe summer to kicking butt in the swimming pool, Rhe sets a high and tough standard. BUT, don't be deceived, she does have a warmer side once you carve through her icy exterior. She loves cats and she loves to run (wait … the running part isn't completely true). If you are lucky enough to be graced with her friendship, you can always count on her fierce loyalty, her quick laughter, and her unfailing candor. NWSD and 13th company alike will miss this fiery fish of a woman but the USMC is surely gaining a competent and tenacious officer.

Gabriella Villarreal-Ross

Surface Warfare Officer

Gabbi has always been the petite one who could be seen running EVERYWHERE, literally. There is probably no path in Annapolis that she has not conquered, and she looks great doing it. Gabbi makes PT look too easy, and she has this impressive self-discipline in her eating habits that most female midshipmen would love to have. A prior Navy cheerleader, we also know her talents as a dancer and flier. She is very proud in her accomplishments and is super excited for what the SWO life has to offer! The USS Cole is going to have a great addition to their crew, but the PT studs better watch out!

Tory West

Navy Pilot

Ladies be warned, this Jamaican backwoods wonder has the stuff to knock your socks off and make you swoon. It's rumored that if you stare into his eyes you can taste the rainbow. He maintains a well-balanced diet of creatine, protein, and pre-workout. The "kids got no game" but lets his looks and quiet Alabama twang do the work, redefining the game for the rest of us. Tor's daily midshipman life usually consists of staring at himself in the mirror, chasing the pump, or video-chatting foreign females, which reminds me of his highly moisturized hands. As hard as it was to live with Tory and his organized mess, we love him and wouldn't change a thing. As time marches on, and the tattoos fade more and more, we will always look back on these days. We wish you best Tory, and prepare yourself for good times to come.

Collin Wood

Naval Flight Officer

Collin Wood, graduating the Naval Academy at the age of 27 is no easy achievement but he did it. Collin enlisted in the Navy in 2005, attended NAPS, and served a two year mission after his Youngster Year. From the town of Salt Lake City, Utah he took pleasure in going to church and spending time with his now wife.

Thomas Arias

Naval Flight Officer

Arias, Tony, DH, STD, Smoofies, BF. So many nicknames for such an interesting(?), diverse character. You are still on your trial run as a roommate and you may earn your keep one day but you have supplied some stories that will never be matched. From the movie theater story, your former lawyer uncle who was forced to move or to the story of your grandfather, your Dominican-Bronx heritage never disappoints. Though we may never completely understand your invented language and you may never quite master the 'th' sound in words, we kind of enjoy having you around, sometimes. Enjoy Pensacola and your smoofie machine, you will be indoctrinated to the South (may she rise again). ZC

Cody Anderson

USMC Pilot

Biceps--the core value of any promising Marine Corps Officer. Cody Anderson is destined to accomplish great things. Honor, Courage, and Commitment to lifting heavy things and putting them back down, he has excelled in every mission of the Academy…aside from running. Midshipmen Anderson double fists his Economics and Political Science majors like Yuenglings on a Friday night at Fed House—actually anywhere they serve Yuengling. Despite being raised in the surf town of Redondo Beach CA, Cody Anderson works every day to be a born again redneck. An expert debater, Cody does not require "facts" or "reality" to win an argument—give him a tin and a spitter and he'll talk at you long enough until you eventually surrender from exhaustion, leaving him the victor. Cody's expedition to Paris is one of the most rousing stories told, surely one of many more to come in P-cola and beyond.

Brandon Beans

USMC Ground

Brandon Beans spent his youth playing football and baseball in Woodstock, Georgia, and later in Hartsville, South Carolina. Brandon has always been competitive and took sports serious. If you weren't on his team, then he didn't have much to do with you. If you were on his team, then he was your best friend and supporter. It was baseball that brought Brandon to the Naval Academy. He wanted to play somewhere 'tough,' and tough he got. Brandon started his four years at the Academy playing outfield (protecting his area at any cost as he is one to sacrifice his body). With his days on a baseball field over, and being modeled into a strong officer at the Academy, Brandon will emerge as one of the finest, toughest, and most dedicated Marines… Service Over Self… No Regrets… Semper Fi!

Scott Bolstad

Submarines

A hometown hero hailing from Highland (the middle of nowhere), Scott aka Scotty B or Scawt Scawt majored in League of Legends with a minor in Mechanical Engineering. However, don't let the incessant mouse-clicking fool you; his interests are much broader than simply playing video games all day in his underwear. He is also a connoisseur of the finest $8 bottles of wine, and as a champion wine-chugger, his favorite way to head off a hangover is to heave in your parents' bathroom... and on their wallpaper... or in his own closet. A fierce competitor, his (facial) battle scars demonstrate his willingness to sacrifice even his dashing good looks for the team. To be sure, he's dark and handsome... but not so tall as his lady friend. He's loyal to a fault, and if you're not careful, he'll become your best friend before you know it.

Blake Busse

Navy Pilot

Varsity Soccer, the beginning and end every day of Busse's life. Freezing morning practice in the snow. Sprints till you drop for lunch. Evenings with comments "Wow the track team is looking great" "that's not track" "Oh wow the cross country team is really moving" "Yeah, that's actually soccer". Practice makes perfect and Busse certainly worked for it... until the weekend. Weekends: Dude I have practice tomorrow... Lets get another round... More, totally fine... and done. Never doing that again(till next week).

Kristina Byrne

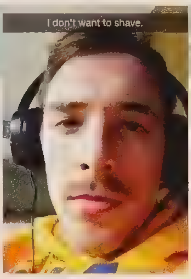
Navy Pilot

The only people who love the Naval Academy more than Kristina "Two Drink Tina" Byrne are the Commandant ("he's my dad") or the Joe she goes steady with. She never missed a night of praying the Rosary, partly due to her unwavering faith and partly due to the aforementioned Joe. When she wasn't busy correcting midshipmen for minor uniform infractions, or facetiming her nieces, Teeny frequented the basement of Alumni with all the other Glosers. It is rumored that she was also on the women's ice hockey team, but she couldn't skate when she was busy training for her mara… or sleeping. Plus, she can't even see her own teammates when they wear those elusive white camo jerseys. Who is she supposed to pass to? We know she will make a great pilot, because she is never wrong. Ever.

Michael Byrne

USMC Ground

Michael "Dale" Byrne went through the Naval Academy on hard mode. His religion forbade him from starting papers until 11pm the night before they were due. He was very selective of the homework he chose to do and unfortunately most did not meet his high standards. Instead, his time at the Naval Academy was mostly spent attempting to discover at least 20% of "the internets." He embarked on this journey while at the same time training for a Half-Ironman! His roommates distinctly remember Mike engaging in vigorous 1-2 hour internet search session before each triathlon workout. When he wasn't trying to learn every random fact in the world, he was the go-to guy for advice. His level-headed demeanor, logic, and wise-beyond-his-years persona helped others make the soundest decisions. His Marines should trust that they have a superb leader and NASCAR driver in Mike.



I don't want to shave.

Daniel Chauvin

Explosive Ordnance Disposal

Thank you, Tinder, for allowing Dan to circumvent the normal rules of courtship. His sleep face would have scared off absolutely everyone. Some people are morning people, some people prefer to sleep in. And Dan prefers to go into hibernation every night. Look out, EOD, you've got an engineering nerd coming your way and you better not make him work when the Skins play. To recap some of our priceless times together: slipping in the stairwell chopping, "x is equals too...", ruining the curve with a 100, cougars and spring break, uniform modifications, JMU and hanging over the balcony, spilling beer on your shirt (which you did as I'm typing this), pass the lasagna to Dan. Immediately. Cheers, brother. Have fun killin it out there. You will be fantastic.

David Cooper

USMC Pilot

Midshipmen Cooper, not the midshipmen you deserve but the one you need. Started out as the plebe who thought he could write Beat Army on his razor and not shave, he was wrong. Spent most of his time thinking about what he needed to do to weigh 200 lbs, never broke 160. He claims he should have been a cowboy or a racecar driver although he has never been on a horse, and can't even drive a 2002 Pontiac sunfire without spinning it out of control. If you ever wanted to be entertained he was the one to talk to, his stories were mostly hard to believe, but some of them were actually true. If you ever get the chance ask him why they now tell mids they cannot terminate their own summer training.

Ariel Coreth

Nuclear Surface Warfare

This is it, everybody: the one you've all been waiting for. Her name is Ariel Coreth, this is her world, and we all just better get used to it. Ariel 'A Guy' Coreth comes from Chappaquaaaaaaaa, NY, where she learned how to drive like a lunatic; but she just may be the lunatic you're looking for. When she and 37 of her best friends come into town, watch out... you'll probably get run over or go deaf from the screeching. A diva, a big shot, the center of the universe, she has been known to cut you in line, disregard your personal space, and cry hysterically over minor traffic infractions. Ariel 'likes warm hugs', which means that you're going to give her one whether you like it or not. In a word, she's nuts, but she's got a way about her that makes you love her all the more.

Hugh Davison

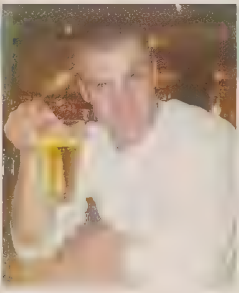
Submarines

Hughsurdaddy, YEAH HUGH and, hugh daviDson likes to call himself a varsity athlete. Even though he was commonly seen amongst varsity athletes, everyone always knew he was a huge NARP since he was always wearing regulation gear….to sleep, to "practice" and even on liberty. Whether it was company volleyball or hot yoga, this NARP God was always doing his intramural duty. But his NARP gear didn't steer the women away. Drawn to women with bigger shoulders than himself, Hugh's tiny little chicken legs could barely support their weight while exploring the secrets of lejuene. Jenn for Captain! You think a NARP like Hugh would at least be good at video games, however the only person he can beat is a diver. While home by himself, since he doesn't invite people to his house, he often finds himself running out of toilet paper...wonder where it all goes? NMSD proud.

Ellen Deckinga

Surface Warfare Officer

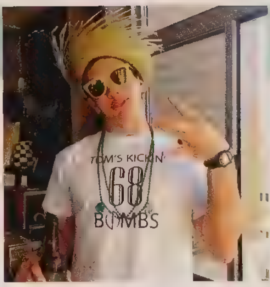
Taking the Naval Academy METOC world by storm (literally), this Michigander brought Dr. House to life for Plebe Summer, but quickly showed her true colors thanks to her unhealthy obsession with everything nature-related. A Puddle Pirate convert, the Cloud Lady can be found outside watching the grass grow or anywhere there's a computer, as she prefers to communicate in code or through music rather than English. Known to stare at oceans, skies, and stars for hours at a time, her stubborn streak is as wide as the Milky Way, requiring refereeing in classes such 2/C Leadership, Law, or whenever social interactions are involved. Even though Ellen's quirks make her easy to pick on, her loyalty endears her to all her friends. We wish you the best of luck wherever the wind takes you!



Kyle Fortney

USMC Ground

Kyle Fortney, otherwise known as quadzilla, might catch you by surprise. Even though his 0-faded, hardened exterior may seem intimidating, Kyle is actually a fun loving guy who likes to have a good time. A really good time. Just ask the folks down at Penn State. When Kyle isn't beasting the competition on the throwing field he is usually pumping iron with his buddies. Just check out his legs. This guy squats. All joking aside, Kyle Fortney is a true classmate, teammate and friend. Kyle will undoubtedly be an invaluable asset to any unit he serves in the fleet.



Kurt Geiger

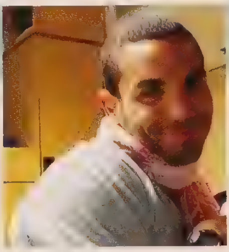
Explosive Ordnance Disposal

Kurt a.k.a. Drew a.k.a. "The Hurricane" Geiger can be defined by one word, simple. His phone was built in the Stone Age and his most prized possessions include his custom built '68 Mustang and of course, his Tims. Drew's simplicity is surpassed only by his love of a night out on the town. He is back-to-back-to-back spring break champ and of course, unmatched in Edward 40 hands. Drew, we love you like a brother and can't wait to see the amazing things you do in the fleet. Try not to throw all their plates against the wall.

Adam Geuss

Surface Warfare Officer

To quote the amazing Montgomery Gentry, "there's one in every crowd." This is that man. Seldom seen in company area, which to some may seem strange, but those who know him knew if he wasn't around he was probably in the gym doing calf raises. Seriously, the dude stores grapefruits in his lower legs. One of the most loyal friends anyone could ask for. Googlie eyed and all, everyone wants this guy around. Queen City's finest. Go Cougs. That is all.



Johnattan Gonzalez

Navy Pilot

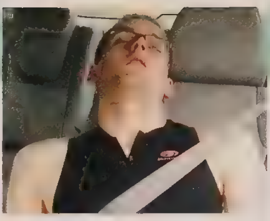
Johnattan, known to many as "Gonzo," started his journey with the US Navy at NAPS in 2009. While at USNA John ran for the marathon team, participated in a summer cruise with the Chilean Navy, and spent a semester at West Point. Having successfully completed the Seal and EOD screeners, and also Leatherneck, John then service selected Navy Pilot. Even throughout all these amazing achievements, John has never failed to provide constant support in the lives of his friends and family. His strength, perseverance, and dedication are not all he is known for. John is also the truest friend, brother, and son.

McMillan Hastings

Navy Pilot

McMillan 'Mac' Hastings was an English, History, Mechanical Engineering, and Aeronautical Engineering Major. Or so he would have you believe. While he was actually a lowly Chemistry Major, his knowledge of half-baked facts from Wikipedia was extensive. A habitual sloth, Mac was adept at being so deep in his rack that his roommates had to confirm his presence by means of the legendary "Tell Tale Toe". A born submariner, no one understands why he always wore a flight suit on Warrior Fridays, or why he would watch Top Gun on a weekly basis. He did eventually become a Naval Aviator, narrowly avoiding his true calling. While he will be fondly missed by his company mates, he will be not so fondly missed by the family of mice that lived in his legendary 'boot' from BMU. Have fun in P-Cola, Mac, don't forget to wear sunscreen…even at night. CAK&PKW

William Herrin



Submarines

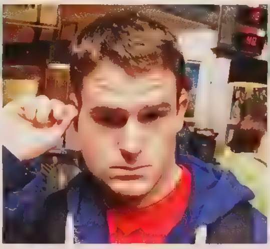
William Pat Patrick Patrice Patterson Herrin… Hot dog guy. Pat came down from the Tennessee hills with something people wished they had, chess cake. That chess cake was his saving grace after his awful rendition of the Marine's hymn at the plebe fireworks. People don't forget. He is a master of physical feats. Not only did he complete a half ironman, but when tracking his progress, we thought he had vanished from the earth. Turns out he was taking his time. For all four years he struggled in deciding what major to pursue, physics or quantitative economics? Physics prevailed. Or did it? He faced another tough decision, submarines or Marines? The submarine force used its best recruitment tool on Pat, Leathernam. Pat will be a great Submariner, but hopefully someone will help make his rack on the sub.

Stanley Hollins

Surface Warfare Officer

I've been five years a roommate, punched in the face by the world's smallest hands. I've been down under, on the ground, and up in the arctic of NAPS. My Pontiac still spins, wins, and has run-ins. I just wish it had fins because I'm a Surface Warfare Officer born and bred. Put me in any department. There's no ship of any size I can't take through whatever waves may rise. Three short blasts, my first tour, point me toward the enemy fleet or shore. Anything not worth doing is worth getting out of. If you don't go SWO then you went to the wrong school and took the wrong classes. I've got clear eyes, a full heart, and I can't lose. Texas Forever!

Howard Kellett



SEALs

West Kellett is known for one thing, his brutal hangovers. Forget the fact that he has been selected for NSW and is a Boston qualified marathon runner, he absolutely hates the "morning after." Interestingly West Kellett is also part raccoon as proven by his abnormally small hands. It is also important to note that West is the worst person in the world at being sick and will be completely incapacitated at the slightest stomach ache, ESPECIALLY WHEN YOU'RE IN IRELAND. With that said, this man is perhaps the best person to have at your side in a time of need and you could not ask for a better friend. Best of luck in the future buddy, and be sure to keep that impressive sack safe.

Mitchell Kempisty

Surface Warfare Officer

When one catches their first look at 1/C Mitchell A. Kempisty, one could think him a simpleton midshipman, but a little digging would reveal that he has been packing lips and macking chicks since his earliest days in Laurel, Maryland. During his time at the Academy, Mitchell has been the consummate midshipman. He joined four varsity sports, spending only a single season with each. Outside of the Academy, Mitchell can be described as his generation's party animal. He harbors a ceaseless ambition to live every day to its fullest. Mitchell grabs life by the horns in any way he can imagine, whether it be physically riding a bull, or deciding on a whim to conquer one of the hardest triathlons in this known universe: The Savage Man. Upon graduation Mitch plans to continue his outrageous lifestyle as a SWO. We, your fellow party animals, salute you Mitch Kempisty. Please let me know if there is a problem with the photo. Thank you.

Curtis Khol

Submarines

Curtis Khol will probably be remembered as one of the nicest Midshipman to walk the squirrel and tourist infested Yard. As a Systems Engineer, Curtis excelled in making those best laid plans that often go awry, but he was an excellent student. When he wasn't terrifying his roommates on mountain biking trail or taking care of his army of dogs, Curtis worked hard to earn a Bowman Scholarship. Though if you asked anyone, they would tell you they've never seen him do any work unless he was helping a fellow Systems major. Most of his 'studying' was composed of watching The Big Bang Theory, The Colbert Report, or playing old computer games. Curtis also made a sport of hiding his roommates' stuff, which he called 'cleaning'. Curtis will be joining the Submarine force in the great blue deep, and his roommates will miss him dearly. Semper deep. Hooyah. MJH&PKW

Elissa Kim

Surface Warfare Officer

Who would have thought that this small town Virginia girl would turn out to be a Korean diva and a cougar in-the-making. 'My sista from a different mista.' She's a "go getta" and the most adventurous woman that I know. She probably thinks that I'm going to say something crazy, but she's the crazy one. Never a dull moment in life, this curvy Asian bombshell is the definition of fire and ice. Hot and sexy, the room temperature just rises when she walks in. Her cool and calm demeanor gives her a sharp edge and quick tongue. Never one to settle for less, always toeing the line, her life is a constant upbeat adventure, especially with "Brazzzilllll" only a kiss away. A great friend, loyal, and a gym rat, no one could ask for a better partner in crime than Elissa.

Joyce Kim

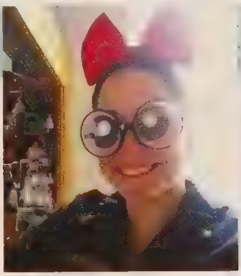
Surface Warfare Officer

Joyce "Sad" Kim started her USNA experience on the wrong foot. Literally. She ripped her thigh "approximately 17 days" into Plebe Summer. Due partly to luck, and her Asian "gummy" diet, it healed up quicker than she could spell "Doritos!" Being in Joyce's squad over Plebe Summer was a pleasure because the whole squad always got to drink extra Gatorades and eat lunch in interesting poses. Although Joyce has a long list of accomplishments (such as running 1 mile, brushing her teeth, and taking 1 picture - each of which she can do in under 18:13), her squadlings will tell you that her creativity and thoughtfulness are her most cherished characteristics; after all, she is the ring leader of the Korean mafia, that she so calls KAMA. She will make the history books when she is the first En-sign to get promoted to Lance Corporal. Joyce was the only 14er to capture moments that 2014 will cherish forever. And that's why she turned down Penn State.

Cassandra Kovac

Supply Corps

Cassandra or as she more commonly goes by Cassi, never expected that her life would lead her to USNA. She had no former experience with the military or the military lifestyle, except for the knowledge that her grandfather, who raised her along with her grandmother and younger sister, served in the Army during Vietnam. She was recruited to play tennis here at the academy and did so until the end of her fall semester youngster year. Cassi has been pushed and tested beyond what she thought her limits were and has always ended up on top. She is devoted and dedicated to her work, friends, family and future career in the Navy. She has spread her joy, smiles, laughter and goofiness throughout those she has met. Cassi embraces everyone with loving arms and is the best friend, sister, and daughter.



Jordan Krulik

Navy Pilot

Jordan Krulik, a fan of many things that others are not fans of, has yet to learn the concept of rules and common sense. With an appearance resembling that of a llama, Jordan spends more time trying to get around the rules than he otherwise would have spent simply obeying them. Jordan's attraction to deviance, danger, and irresponsibility have led him to foster a reputation that few find fitting. After taking over his girlfriend's house Plebe year, Jordan continues to overstay his welcome with every opportunity he gets, and even those he doesn't. Despite putting Sam's life in jeopardy countless times, she has chosen to remain at his side for reasons inconceivable to others. Through the many things Sam's father has taught him, wakeboarding is definitely at the top of his list. He will recruit almost anyone to go with him on his "borrowed" boat to showcase his mediocre skills.

Ethan Madison

Submarines

Ethan "Maddog" Madison was raised on the tough streets of Detroit (so he claims). Standing at 6`4'', he was the beacon of "I don't know what I am doing" for plebe summer. He joined the Naval Academy country club plebe year and continued to sail all four years. Maddog even tried to form the first Naval Academy boarding party by ramming a boat using nothing but wind and determination. He is by far one of the smartest kids I know. Ask him what your sign says for any day and this astrology major will gladly tell you what the stars have in store for you. Maddog selected subs after surviving a movie screener set by the Admiral and will be a great naval officer. Just don't try to warm your milk with the reactor, that's for water.

Richard Padron

Submarines

Richie, Ricardo, Dickey Drones, Dick Pad, Jackhammer, whatever name you know him by, Richie is also known as a friend. This NARPnapper and Xbox Assassin extraordinaire has a superhuman ability to sleep every afternoon, game every night, crush every PRT, and graduate with degrees in both Operations Research and Quantitative Economics, all while subsisting on a diet of 80% Hotfries and Sprite (for years he has claimed he could survive a week eating only Doritos). The quick-witted Texan will be commissioned into the Submarine force, where his encyclopedic knowledge of Star Wars and Dr. Who will undoubtedly serve him well. A trusted friend and ever-willing complaint partner, Richie can and will do anything in his power to help those around him, as long as it doesn't put too much strain on his less than masculine wrists.

Amanda Parsons

Surface Warfare Officer

I am an SQE major from West Virginia. I have been on the cheerleading team for four years and am going to Everett, Washington as a Surface Warfare Officer after graduation

John Perez

USMC Pilot

Few days went by without a good ole DJ story that everyone could enjoy. Yet what his roommates missed the most when he left to France was not being able to play games like "Screw your roommate" and "Whodunit." And who could forget the 2am peer leadership talks? Certainly not the people at St. Johns. What a Hit and a miss that was! John Perez went on to have many hits and even more misses throughout his time at USNA. "Jade Wright", and "are we dancing?" were just two of the more memorable ones. Being the resilient fellow that he is, he braved on and even took every joke that his roommates threw his way and gifted his roommates with 3 years of his presence. His subordinates will be lucky to have a leader that spends more time reflecting on his leadership than getting fresh as f&^k. Stay small, dehaogte.

Lyndsey Peters

Navy Pilot

Lyndsey knew she wanted to become a Navy Pilot in middle school…..one exciting ride on a dare devil roller coaster and she was convinced! Shortly thereafter, a large framed picture of the Blue Angels hung over her bed! From that moment on, attending the US Naval Academy was her dream! Another aspect of USNA that appealed to Lyndsey was the discipline and attention to detail required. This probably stemmed from the fact she began violin lessons at the age of 3. She progressed quickly through Suzuki repertoire and was performing violin concertos by 5th grade. Lyndsey enjoys playing all types of music and has enjoyed being a part of the CRU worship band at USNA. Lyndsey loves sports as much as music. She played volleyball and basketball at the varsity level. Her volleyball team played in 2 state championships during high school. Lyndsey's dream has come true—her service selection is Navy Pilot and is excited about moving to Pensacola!

Tyler Pregel

USMC Ground

Hello there, table-head. Do you hate Hawaii yet? I'm sure you do. How much money did you get for selling your truck? Clear teeth, open ears, can't lose! Also, are you applying your knowledge from biology class in your job? How often do you complain about your stomach hurting from over eating, you stupid pug? Guess what you are not: a cat, a zombie, a 10,000 year old vampire, the leader of a biker gang. Bring em on Longhorns! Get Netlifx to pay you for monitoring all of their content. So long, hamster car, T-pain can't be a Marine in that poor thing. Best of luck, brother. You are going to be outstanding. MONDAY NIGHT RAW!

Philip Solt

Submarines

Despite being one of the "older" people in his class, Phil has made the most of his time at USNA. Refusing to stop after his first marathon during plebe year, he went on to run a 100-miler on a snow-covered trail in New York two years later. Aside from his insane love for running, Phil also loves giving back to the community and serving others. This prior HM even managed to go to Zambia one summer and volunteer at the local mission hospital down there. With the right amount of determination and hard work, nothing can seem to stop this guy. Always remember Hebrews 12:1-2 and "Run if you can, walk if you must, crawl if you have to – just NEVER quit."

Shane Thames

Navy Pilot

The days of downloading 12 movies a night, not doing homework and getting straight A's are over. You can no longer just say "uhhhh I don't know" with a slight shoulder shrug but you can double fist long islands and disappear for as many hours as you would like. See ya at Floro-bama.
#TheChosenOne

Roberto Torrealba

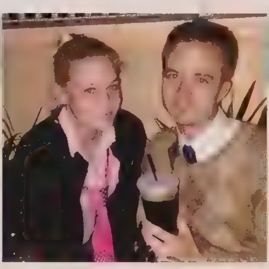
Submarines

The only midshipman known to regularly dust the shelves under his desk, Robert "Toby" Torrealba quickly distinguished himself as a person of unshakeable work ethic. In addition to his dusting habits, Toby could often be found sweeping the floor and violently typing emails at three a.m. A physicist by major, mathematician by trade, and submariner by all other accounts, Toby worked harder than most for four years and was rewarded with a Bowman scholarship and a plethora of lifelong friends. Despite the workload that came with being a physics major and the OCD that came with being a perfectionist, Toby was always willing to help out a friend in need or even leave the comfort of the yard every once in a semester. All said, Robertico will do well in all his future endeavors, and those he will have the honor of leading will have the honor of being led.

Victorino Untalan

USMC Ground

There are many reasons why I would like to become Company Commander. Many of these reasons is to be able to help the company out. As a Company Commander, I would like to instill upon the company that the company cannot run properly without the company working together. Especially, as firsties, whether you are in a position or not, I would like to emphasize the point that we are the ones who really make the company run as smoothly as we want it too. At this point in our careers, it is our turn and our privilege to make the company run as efficiently and as best as possible. It is our turn to understand the leadership styles which we think would best work. As company Commander, I would like top be able to make each of us, including the 3/C and 2/C, be able to find that leadership style



Paul Westland

USMC Pilot

As President of the League of Insignificance, Paul Westland was one of few midshipmen who was part of the 3 mile club and not on remedials. His diet consisted of 90% cheese-itz, Diet Coke, and Asian noodles. This was good because none of these needed to be digested so he was able to spend less time on the toilet and more (much needed) time "doing honor sh%t." Never homework, though. The only way to get Paul Westland to do homework was to trick him into thinking that everyone was going to Ram's Head for pitchers and "crabby tots" and then pulling out the brick sized physics books. If his leadership skills are in any way proportional to the percentage of the internet that he has seen or the total amount of bandwidth he used during his tenure at USNA, his Marines should rejoice.

Matthew Wolford

Nuclear Surface Warfare

Matt Wolford, commonly known to his classmates as Wolfpup, is a Nebraskan who loves shooting guns, drinking Scotch, and being a SWO. No visit to his room is complete without him showing you the latest gun he is eyeing to purchase. On the weekend, you are likely to find him at one of the local shooting ranges reenacting his favorite Pulp Fiction scenes. In the event of a zombie apocalypse, you can be assured Wolfpup will save us all. It is rumored that this motivated sea warrior commanded one of the YPs and singlehandedly won the YP Color Company contest. Out in town you're almost but guaranteed to see him sipping on a Scotch. He is always willing to share a box of love with his company-mates. The illusive cheese in his printer still has not been found, although the search continues. Once it is found, he may become Wolfman.

Scott Aquino

USMC Pilot

Scott Aquino (A-Queen-NO) was born a small child in California to two wonderful parents who raised him right and proper. Sadly, like any child born in Cali, the hot sun and hella good time got into his head. He got into the usual things Cali children get into, such as water polo, tanning, and thinking becoming a Marine is a great thing. During his time at the Naval Academy, many good friends tried to steer this Marine loving Cali child away from the Corps, but his Fidelis was never more Semper. The Marine Corps is lucky to have a Cali boy like Scotty, and while he might fly through the sky instead of trudging through the dirt, he will serve honorably. Here's to you Scotty!

Brett Bogaard

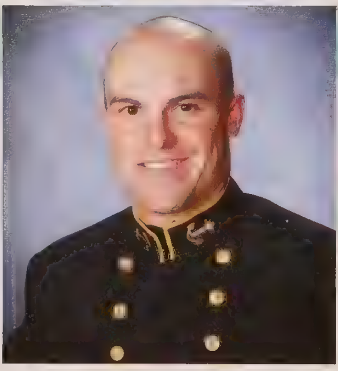
Navy Pilot

A brief history lesson: In 2010, Brett Bogaard got accepted into the United States Naval Academy from the state of Iowa. For those of you that don't know, Iowa is as far from the ocean as something can physically be without being communist. Brett thought that USNA seemed like a good idea, so he went. He spent approximately four years there. During that time, he was involved with things. In fact, Brett never missed a home football game. This was partly because he was a fanatical Navy football supporter and mostly because he was forced to go against his will. Once Brett accumulated enough credits, they let him leave the Academy through a process commonly known as "graduation." His current whereabouts are unknown, but if you see him, please let him know that he is in trouble.

Kevin Borough

Navy Pilot

Kevin Borough is a great guy and is going to become a fantastic pilot. That's about all I have to say about him, his mother on the other hand… Mama Borough all of 15th company would like to thank you for all the wonderful cookies you have baked us over the years. Seriously without your cookies our 4 years here at the Academy would have been dreadful, dreary, and downright terrible. Your cookies were the sunshine in our day, the little pep in our step. Granted we would all probably be 20 lbs. lighter but hey there was nothing truly like having a hard day at classes, getting back up on 7-4 and settling in with a nice Mama Borough cookie and some King Hall milk. So in conclusion this lucky bag blurb is truly dedicated to you Mama Borough who kept all of us in 15 fat and happy.



David Campbell

USMC Pilot

David John Campbell the slowest man anyone has ever met. One time it took three hours to brush his teeth. David hails from Sanibell Island. Florida where there are laws except everyone most play bingo every Wednesday night at 7 pm. Dave loves to dress sophisticated. He loves it so much it took him an hour to decide on what undershirt to wear. Dave is one of the best friends a kid could ask for and maybe he will teach patience to someone one day. Wise beyond his years.

Hayes Cozza

USMC Pilot

Chronicles of the Fellowship: Hayes Martin "Aragorn" Cozza came out of the womb pumping his fists and shouting "oorah" in small town New Jersey. A track star since the age of seven and a flag football star since high school, Hayes is not one to shy away from an athletic challenge; however, whenever when it comes to Hayes it really is brains before brawn. He excelled academically at his high school, and though he should have graduated with 2013, he finds himself well above the standard at the Academy. In his free time Hayes enjoys running the table at black jack, displaying his "hot hands" on the football field, and venturing to the dark side on occasion. This well rounded, finely tuned Devil Dog has chosen his calling of becoming a Marine Aviator and for that we wish you good luck in your endeavors. Love Dampf and Terry.

Britana Cremean

Navy Pilot

Hailing from the hood of Sandusky, Ohio, Britana "Tana" Cremean is the self-proclaimed queen of Navy Football. Tana was involved in nearly everything the academy had to offer, from her time falling into the Severn on the Sailing team, to her time stuffing faces on the Rugby team. Tana constantly proved she was better than the typical NARP. That is, until her junior year, when she discovered her new found love—not going to varsity practice. Tana's first-class year, she was selected to the prestigious job of "Brigade Assistant Operations and Academics Officer." What she did, no one knows. Tana was quite the party animal on weekends, spending most of her time doing homework and sleeping. Tana's closest friends knew her as the best Shipmate one could ask for, and know she will do well in her career as a Naval Aviator, and will likely be the first female CNO.

John-Michael Gustav Dampf

Surface Warfare Officer

Chronicles of the Fellowship: John-Michael Gustav "Gimli" Dampf came to 15th company as valedictorian of his high school. Plebe summer was a real wake up call for Dampf because it was clear he had never been around so many people. Once we all found out that he was in fact home schooled, it all made sense. Dampf was always known throughout the company as ladies' man, continually complaining about this girl from Nebraska who would not leave him alone. Apparently her persistent efforts paid off because they are now engaged and spend 27 hours a day talking on ooVoo, gchat, and texting. His other 3 loves in life are lifting, investing his money, and trying to teach other people how to become as good as him. Dampf will always live in our hearts as our roommate and dearest friend. Love Hayes and Keaton.

Tracy Daniels

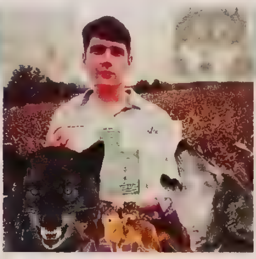
Submarines

Tracy was born and raised in Atlanta GA. He is the second of three children and enjoys being near his siblings. When you first see him, it is not uncommon to mistake him for an angry soul. However, when he smiles at you, there is no denying the warmth it brings. An outstanding athlete and member of the Navy Sprint Football team, Tracy wishes to go back and coach in either baseball or football after his military career. He enjoys giving back to his community and has participated in many community service projects that benefit the youth while he has been at the Academy. Tracy is currently the Vice President for the National Society of Black Engineers and has chosen to join the Submarine community. There is no doubt in my mind that whatever he puts his mind to, he will achieve it and much more. "Reach One, Teach One."

Gregory Dinkel

Navy Pilot

With a beard that he never shaves until after morning formation, Greg "The Proverbial Leg" Dinkel is no doubt one of the highest quality midshipmen that anyone could ask for. With his rugged handsomeness, non-existent New York accent and mastery of the dance floor, he is truly a force to be reckoned with. 50% Brooklynite, 50% Italian, 50% leg but 100% Dinkel, Greg occasionally likes to take to the streets and don the guise of Homeless Greg, one of our most beloved members of society. Being one of the youngest of our group, it's a shame the bars of Annapolis had to wait so long for such a specimen to grace them with his presence, but we won't hold that against you, Greg. He will undoubtedly be one of the finest pilots the Navy has ever seen especially since he looks so darn good in that flight suit. So here's to you Greg!

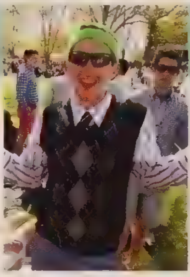


Brendan Egan

Navy Pilot

Smart. Talented. Funny. Devilishly handsome. While all men aspire to these characteristics, few manage to fall quite as short of the mark as Brendan Egan. Like all great stories, Brendan's exists. It all started when he decided to come to the Naval Academy, which he eventually did. Brendan never put much stock in frivolous things like his social life, instead focusing on his two glorious passions: the esteemed Drum and Bugle Corps and his chemistry major. Brendan's favorite elements are helium, hydrogen, arsenic, hydrogen, erbium, phosphorous, and einsteinium. After some time had passed, Brendan accumulated enough credits to graduate. It feels like just four years ago that young Brendan got inducted. The USNA Public Affairs Office requires that I specify, of course, that these views belong to the individual, and are in no way representative of the United States Naval Academy, the Navy, or the Military as a whole.

Samuel Flood



Navy Pilot

Sam is a simple man. Give him a bag of pretzels, hand him a controller with a game of FIFA to play, set up dual screen monitors with multiple sporting events playing simultaneously in his periphery, and he is a happy camper. He is the most polite person you'll ever meet, unless you talk badly about one of his sports teams (there are dozens). He is also a sports god in his own right. No one can cross him on the basketball court; he's as smooth as white chocolate- and he knows how to whack the golf balls and get it in the hole. Sam maintains high levels of academic performance and morale through daily periods of hibernation "'cause when you're sleeping there's no lonely times, just dreams." Despite numerous major flaws, Sam is fundamentally a good guy, whose level head and initiative will surely serve him well as a pilot.

Travis Franklin

Navy Pilot

Raised in the farmlands of Huntsville, Alabama, Travis Hunter Franklin was bred to be a military man. At first the military life would bring little challenges to plebe Franklin. He outshined all of his peers during plebe summer and had the honor of reciting the pledge of allegiance 14 times in front of his 1,200 classmates. He was a man among boys. Once the academic grind began, the hurdles grew taller, and Travis began running through them rather than over them. Perhaps his commitment to the show Swamp-Loggers, consumption of "Travy half & halfs", and weekend "hunting" at Delaware University is what hindered his academic prowess, but nonetheless, he stumbled through until the end. Travis is most famous for being the fighter on the Navy Hockey team (no, hockey is not a typo). Instead of being the stereotypical Bama football player, Travis utilized his deep-rooted southern, hard-nosed, "Imma kill you," attitude to demolish nearly any player he went up against on the ice. He will continue using this boldness as a future pilot.

Rebecca Freihofer

USMC Pilot

BECAWWW FROHO, Our pink, sparkly, biting, hair pulling, ground fighting, pussey eyed, broken hipped yut pup. After a scarring aloe vera incident you saw it fit to try TRI. Realizing too late your sin against the Gods of the Severn, "We smite thee" rang through your ears for months on crutches. Until you repented by promptly phoenixing back to your former Amazon crew team status. From having men love you too much or having too many friends or being too pretty or having more Ring Dance dates than all the rest of us combined, there's no princess problem that Sun-in, wine nights, or terrifying bathroom confrontations can't solve. To our Southern Belle from the hollerin Kentucky, continue being the hardworking, light hearted, and consistently perfect Bex we love. The Marine Corps is lucky to have you. NWC 2014: ROLLOUT.

Michael Grove

Naval Flight Officer

Hailing from "fabulous" San Francisco, Michael Grove has evolved from a boy to a stallion. Michael lives life in the danger zone. With only his godly flow and courageous ability to ignore homework until the last minute, Michael Grove has somehow sailed his way through the academy. Despite the daily threats of physical violence against his roommates, Michael was universally loved by all. The underclass on the sailing team especially loved him for his fun and carefree attitude while on MOs. Taking the role as a 3/C Mentor for the plebes extremely seriously, Michael Grove has been "mentoring" the same female midshipman for the past three years, a true testament to his dedication to the mission. Like Michael always says but not actually, "When one door is closed, don't you know, another is open." Aviation is lucky to have him.

Tyler Hall

Surface Warfare Officer

Hail to Pitt? I don't know any person who buys an unlimited amount of Pittsburgh sporting apparel. My roommate, Tyler Hall, is the most passionate and emotional person when it comes to playing Battlefield. On numerous occasions, you could hear screaming and yelling through the cracks of our door. One could even say that a fight may be breaking out. Those were the days that I remember and will surely miss the most. Tyler, aka Sir Scrub, is a very competitive person, and that's one reason why he chose the USNA. Tyler will be the first of his family serving as a Surface Warfare officer in Yokosuka, Japan where he will use his Japanese minor to sway the ladies and hopefully break his dry spell if you know what I mean. I'm grateful to have known such a unique person who I can call a brother.

Adam Jatho

USMC Ground

If Adam Jatho were to be described in one word, nothing would be more fitting than to call him a lover. Adam puts 100% into everything he does. And why? It's all because of his intense passion, his love, for the world around him. Aside from every girl that has ever talked to him, Adam also loves a mysterious combination of literature, designer clothes, and guns. Adam's love transcends genres and instead seeks the best of the best despite society's harsh labels. On any given day of the week you can find him crying alone in his room to The Curious Case of Benjamin Button or performing his nude interpretive dance of John Mayer's "Slow Dancing in a Burning Room." It's Adam's love that sets him aside from the rest, and it's his love that will carry him on to a bright future as an erotic dancer for Chippendales.

Susannah Johnson

Surface Warfare Officer

First two years at the academy, we were all convinced that Sue was going to end up a crazy cat lady. As a devout atheist that couldn't believe in a god that would create people as low as midshipmen, Sue surprised us all when she started dating one among our ranks. Since then, she's been through thick and thin with the fourteenth company and has never left their side. When she occasionally did return to our own company spaces, Sue was both loved and feared among the 15th Company as she dutifully fulfilled her roles as a caring platoon commander but a train-hard squad leader. Her leadership will surely carry over into the surface community for the longest five years of her life. Here's hoping the beaches of Mayport are as warm and comforting as the baby elephant she is one day destined to own.

Shane Kerber

Navy Pilot

Shane Kerber, a guy you can always count on to have something smart to say just to make you feel stupid. Hailing all the way from North Daaakooota, Kerbs is probably one of ten midshipmen to ever come from such a frigid place. The guy can't get enough of the cold and bears it with the best brace the world has ever known. What he loves more than the cold is not doing his homework and ensuring that his classmates finish it before him so that he can come to them for "EI". On the weekends he parties like a Naval Aviator and pukes like a sea sick SWO, but it's not the critic who counts; not the man who points out where the drunken man stumbles. At the root of it all Kerbs is a great friend who will always lend you cash and "forget" you owe him.

Keaton Lockhart

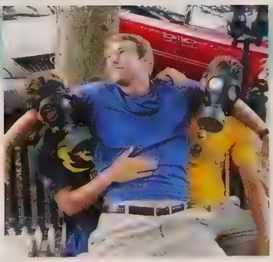
Submarines

"Chronicles of the Fellowship: Keaton TERRY WAYNE 'Legolas' Lockhart, this salutatorian/ baseball star/quarterback was always striving to be the best. Raised to be the perfect candidate for the Academy since birth he was able to prove that truly it does take a village to raise a child, especially since his first legal drink was not until firstie year. Most famously know as, "the Dog," Keaton always was mindful of intruders in the FELLOWSHIP, defending our territory by releasing the residuals of all the protein he consumed. With a record of 57-6 as 15th Company's starting quarterback, he dazzled opponents with his precision and the perfection of the "Dine and Dash." Ultimately, Keaton is one of the most loveable and down to earth people you'll ever meet. We wish you the best of luck in the submarine force and we will love you always. Hayes and Dampf."

Nathan Lorei

Medical Corps

When it comes to being smooth, Nathan is SMOOTH. This devilishly handsome doctor-to-be will sweep you off your feet with his entrancing looks and sexy sweet Magic Mike moves. He loves a good work ethic and his rock solid washboard abs that comes with it. Nathan pulsates techno music when he walks down the hall and the lights begin to dance and jump across the walls. Despite all this hawtness and his majestic blue eyes, he's got a side to him that people just flock to. Whether it is advice, comfort, or just a good laugh that you are in need of, Doctor Lorei is there to patch you up.



Andrew Macpherson

Submarines

Able to barely see over the mates' desk, Andy "Mac" Macpherson is a gentle giant. He enjoys the occasional Whale watch and he has even committed to professional Whaling one day in search of the "great big one." Luckily for his love life, the stars aligned one fateful day during Plebe I-ball, and his German goddess was found. Despite only being able to communicate through eye contact and Morse code, he schmoozed his way into a long term relationship that has lasted the test of time. Besides Whaling, Mac enjoys basketball, looking ridiculously unattractive while sleeping, and rooting for everything that is in the impoverished and underdeveloped land that we call North Carolina. His greatest achievement at the Academy was breaking the record for the fastest female rower of all time, which is not even applicable to his gender. Fair Winds Submariner, you will be remembered.

Alexander Merrall

USMC Pilot

Alexander Merrall is a man's man, a ladies' man, a true southern gentleman, and a supreme goofball. A man with a big heart but a small liver, Alex can get so full of "love," that sometimes that "love" overflows-sometimes in a cab, sometime on your shoes, sometimes in Mitscher. Many will recall one instance on a beach where Alex's "love" helped prevent a potentially poor decision from being made. All parties involved should be thankful for his state of mind at the time. An astronautical engineer and the grandson of a U.S. Marine, Alex has had his eyes set on becoming a Marine Corps Pilot for a long time. It is great to see so fine an individual as Alex finally begin to realize his dream. Excellence is no stranger to Alex and he will no doubt make a fine addition to the Corps.

EXPEDITIONS DAILY

Joshua Meyer

USMC Pilot

Josh Meyer: the most interesting man in the world. Just look at anything he puts up on Facebook. Pure gold. He has so many good qualities; I will just point out a few. He is the most stoic person you will ever meet. If you see him the night before a Narc project is due or when he's trying to balance the wardroom funds, you will see a cool cat. Next is his impeccable bearing. You will never see a more locked on Marine. The Marines are also about to receive the scrappiest warrior to come from 7-4. His signature moves, the "butt-slam" and "sexy hip shake", will make the terrorists quake and the girls swoon. All jokes aside, Josh Meyer is the nicest, most genuine person you will ever met, and he will brighten any command he is a part of.

Joshua Mossman

Naval Flight Officer

As if cut from marble by one of Zeus' lightning bolts, Josh is…kind of a hunk. Also known as "Brotha Mossman" or "Caveman" or "Hodor," Josh has a way with words (or lack thereof) that would make any woman swoon. You can always find him dancing the night away to EDM or some random pop song. He is the most photogenic person you will ever see; he even poses in his sleep. He is a gentle giant, but if you mention the cookie monster, "stand by hard charger," because you will see his inner animal. Although not the best at land-nav, he never has a problem finding his way back after a night of debauchery, even if it means having a 50 year old woman drop him off at gate one with a boxed lunch. The Navy is lucky to have an NFO as chill as "Flynt Mossy."

Marc Nucum

USMC Pilot

In a previous life, Marc "Duke" Nucum was probably a princess of some far away land who loved Buffalo wings and frolicking in the flowers. Marc has, as most well know, a rare disorder that mimics the female menstrual cycle on a bi-weekly basis. His friends have learned to cope with his screaming tantrums and embrace him for who he is on the inside. Despite this barrier, Marc has developed his own language called "the meeps" that serves him well in his communication. If it wasn't for the development of his very own clothing line called "shirtless at all hours of the day," we would never get to see that rock hard body modeled after his idol Manny Paqiao. No one will forget the true fighting spirit in this devil dog, and in true Nucum Fashion, I say to his future marines, “Woof.”

Michael Peribonio

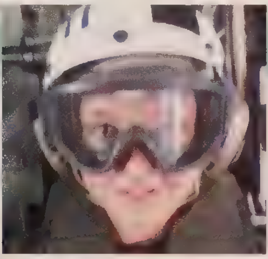
Explosive Ordnance Disposal

Hailing from the great city of Atlanta, this Mexican-Columbian-Latino-Ecuadorian can get on the nerves of even the calmest of people. As an uneducated plebe he foolishly joined the Navy Row Boat Team only to right his wrong later that year by joining the aesthetically pleasing athletes of the Navy Men’s Swim Team. It was on this team where Mikey would show his enthusiasm and in the motto of the Durty Burds “Rise Up”, especially in the shower. Mikey enjoys camping in the freezing cold and getting lost in forests and other bushes, mainly the ones near Loyola. He goes especially hard at parties, although is a true softie with the ladies, sometimes enough to where they question his manhood. All joking aside, Mikey is as loyal and hardworking as they come and will be a welcome addition to the EOD community. NMSD Proud.

Pierre Ramos

Navy Pilot

Pierre Ramos, Son, yo son, mad crazy yo! Pierre was born in the tobacco fields of the Dominican Republic rolling cigars for fun. At the ripe young age of nine this young Dominican dreamed of a life amongst the stars so he saddled up his trusty horse and was on his way to boring old Queens. From the moment Pierre stepped on American soil every single choice he has made was to get him into space. From smart choices like going to space camp and working hard at his school work to even the bad decisions like strapping himself to a homemade rocket or attending the Academy; Pierre did everything for one end goal, space. And now that he has graduated from the school he chose for the most number of astronauts, we all wish you the best, to boldly go where so few have gone before, the Final Frontier.



Marisa Roberts

USMC Pilot

Marisa "Roberto Tres" Roberts is a true Jersey girl. Straight off the shore, MIDN Roberts rose quickly through the ranks of 4/C to serve the longest ever tenure as PCC (she may still hold the billet in MIDS). She pursued a major in sleep deprivation and joking around in the back of class, with some MECH-E thrown in. When she's not rolling her eyes at your dumb question or refusing to give the teacher the answer ("solve your own problems"), she's in the Design Lab with the Quatros Robertos, designing some "non-lethal" death machine. Headed to the Corps, it won't be long before they put this fiesty goat in the cockpit with some "lethal" weapons. But we always know, rain or shine, her new bird can never be more stylish than that PT Cruiser parked out on Farragut. Best of luck on the flight line. "Once a Hellfish..."

Andrew Robinson

Navy Pilot

A long time ago in a galaxy far, far away….MIDN Jedi Robinson, hailing from the mysterious land mass referred to as "Mississippi," reported to the Naval Academy to begin his training. With the initials A.I.R., Andrew Isaac Robinson has been destined for Naval Aviation from the beginning. Along with the Lego sets that Andy has built, he has made countless friendships during his time at the Academy. Basically, if you don't know Andy Robinson, you need to come out of the Wampa Ice Cave that you're trapped in, get on your Ton Ton, and meet him. Despite his nerdy fascination with Star Wars, he managed to meet the woman of his dreams, and be the first person in 15 to get engaged. We're excited to see how far Andy travels in the Universe, his Naval Career, and life in general. May the force be with you, Andy!

Chelsea Smith

Surface Warfare Officer

She speaks in several different languages. And carries a big punch for such a small package. She will need a stool to see out of the bridge, and a phone book in her captain's chair (since we all know she'll be there very soon). It'll be a close battle for first woman CNO with Layne Morrison. Hopefully she can stay aboard a Destroyer better than she can stay in an FJ, just keep your eye on her for man overboard drills. Go NADS!

Erin Snook

Navy Pilot

What's that angelic voice shaking the walls of the Pent house? Is it the Frozen soundtrack, the pitch perfect cast, or who could it be?...Open the door and yes, it is Snookalook you'll see. The Florida sun goddess and Navy Women's Tennis star has set herself up to go very far. Flying for the Navy is where she will be. Thank you for being such a good roommate to me.

Andrew Snyder

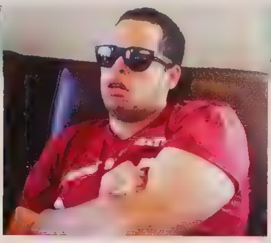
USMC Ground

What's up scrub? Drewski to some, DJ Floundrew to his closest friends. Heheh, heheh, you were saying? Drew will go down in the annals of USNA as a class ring crusher, economics major, NAPS bro, intramural soccer god, intense video gamer, whiskey enthusiast, mass quantities of junk food consumer, Dunkin' Donuts lover, fantasy football inferior, loyal Duke/LSU/Tampa Bay fan, enabler to those in need of dip, and most certainly not your average midshipman. Drew was bread for the corps. Where some would break from tradition, Drew chose to follow the boot prints of his father and older brother all the way to TBS. Ooh-rah? No doubt his younger brothers will be nipping at his heels in due time. In all seriousness, the Marine Corps is for the better with the passionate, driven, and hard-working individual that is DJ Floundrew. God speed, brother. We made it.

Brian Sweeney

SEALs

Brian'S weeney, Good Guy Brian, Navy SEAL/Doctor/Astronaut, an all around American hero. Smart and handsome as they come, beautiful women are all over this well-dressed, good lookin' fashionista. However, Brian's alter ego, Blackout Brian (BOB), goes for women of a different sort... not that his sober record is much better. BOB loooooves mid girls, and is not known to be articulate; he mostly communicates with screaming. Lover of wild Bill and NWSD, he can't wait to TAD and keep swimming. When he wasn't defending the manatees, Brian spent most of his time trying not to kill his roommate. Accomplished tutor and brilliant scientist, the only chemistry problem he couldn't solve involved his love affair with NWC... but there's nothing margaritas can't fix in the Dominican Republic. WHO WANTS TO BE A NAVY SEAL? NMSD proud.

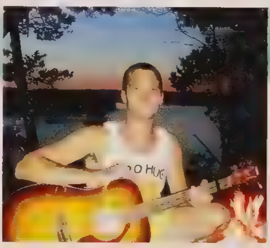


David Talon

Naval Flight Officer

David Arthur Talon. Since coming to this prestigious academy, Dave only dreamed of one thing: being a SWO daddy. He prepared rigorously for the challenge ahead, joining the elite team (he was ranked #2 in tryouts) of USNA paintballers. Deciding to spend an extra year in school, because well, he's Dave and wants to be better than you, he was picked up for NFO instead of Surface Warfare. When Dave isn't paintballing, fighting on the dark side of the force (multiple times, mind you), or mixing tunes, he enjoys leisurely walks out to City Dock to enjoy a nice cup of coffee. An overall great guy, Dave will excel in the NFO community with his laid back attitude. Good luck out there, and keep girls that knit you hats.

Tyler Trainor



Navy Pilot

Tyler Trainor is the definition of the ideal "Bro." This man can do anything. Marathons? Check. Snowboard? Check. Skateboard, ski, lacrosse, ultimate frisbee, pool, guitar? Check check AND check. And not to mention he can pick up a girl faster than the speed of sound with his sentimental pastry cooking classes and cappuccino-frappe-latte-mocha-espresso barista skills. Nope, you're not seeing double of this dreamy man. This son-of-a-gun makes up a dynamic duo with his twin Phil flying as co-pilot. He's always got time to check in on you and ensure things are going well. When it comes to any situation, Tyler's got your back. There's not a better wingman to have by your side and make sure you live your life to the fullest.

Collin Watkins

USMC Ground

Collin Watkins was born a baby. The first time he saw himself in the mirror, he became old, and he acts that way. He has accomplished what few in life have been able to do, transforming from offensive lineman size to shreddie mercury in a matter of months. He enjoys scented candles, all percents of milk, the musical sensation Justin Timberlake, and the massively underrated film Fired Up. This guy has a massive heart, is an incredible roommate, and one of the best friends you could have. Hugs and kisses big guy.

Heather Willis

Submarines

When I first came to the Naval Academy, I knew very little about college and professional sports. I never knew that a little blonde girl down the hall would change that, whether I liked it or not. I hardly remember a day that I couldn't hear her at the other end of Bancroft yelling about her Seahawks or Ducks or really anything football. Nothing is more exciting than a conversation that starts, "Did you see how well we did last weekend?" Whether it applies to football or plebe rates, Heather has always been great at regurgitating useless information at 100 mph. Lucky for her, that skill will serve her well in the Submarine community when she needs to rattle off information about quarks and protons and other important stuff. Heather's past accomplishments include: top Joe of proquizes, worst PCC ever, and first loser at the plebe rates competition. Semper Deep.

Kevin Wilson

Submarines

Kevin "Mama" Wilson is the finest example of a Midshipman. The only Midshipman to ever pull off a semester abroad (or a semester off) in Sweden, anarchy ensued upon our strict mama's departure. His return brought much needed discipline as the motivated Training Officer. Besides training and cleaning, his hobbies include turning anything into a drum, filming RTTRJ's with various midshipmen and taking floaters from anywhere on the court. He leaves the room for hours at a time to work on "physics" yet he always returns with a glint in his eye. He thinks he's the funniest kid and you know what he may be. Well with his height at 5'8" on tip toes at least he has that going for him. Plus it'll make walking around in a tin can under the ocean that much easier. Sub-Marines are in for a good surprise when Kevin comes aboard.

Jonathan Yuen

Nuclear Surface Warfare

If there was ever an anime question you needed answered, Drew is your guy. He's a pro when it comes to catching Pokémon, being a Bro-ny for any episode of My Little Pony, and all sorts of Comi-Con conventions. He's the man with a plan and always comes prepared with fistfuls of candy in his pockets to make your day better. Aside from converting the entire room from craz'd coffee addicts to tea-sippin' zen monkeys, Drew has got that Asian zing that could make any girl's heart sing. He's off to his native homeland of Japan and we wish you fair winds and following seas!

Sarah O'Shea

Navy Pilot

Sarah O'Shea is a lovely individual who loves to sleep. She sleeps at the most inconvenient hours, when others are making an effort to produce quality in their lives. She instead relies on her beauty and charm to make it through life. Instead of spending time with her company she went to Africa to discover herself. She came back with a new outlook and even better hair. She loves to study, swim, and take long runs.

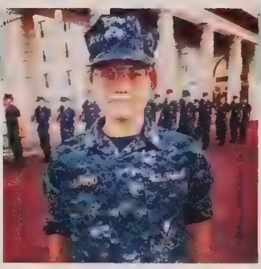
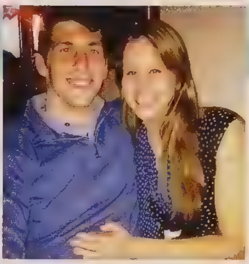
Bonnie Alford

Nuclear Surface Warfare



Hailing from a state that doesn't actually exist, Bonnie Alford is a true outdoor enthusiast. She can prove it with her NOLS graduate diploma. Ever wonder how much she can snatch? Don't worry if you give her enough drinks, she'll tell you… she CrossFits. She may seem innocent, don't let her fool you. She reigns Johnny Tsunami's resident "wild child" for that time she notoriously ruined his brand new couch and driving a Subaru that has a permanent "roof rack" attached. Did you know she's from Washington state? Yeah, they do that there. Here's to years of adventure, may the log of 4145 continue forever. Hawaii is truly lucky to have you, though we all know you chose it to be closer to China. You know what they say, only a true best friend would hold your bleeding head together and finish all your drinks at the bar.



Gregory Bryant

Navy Pilot

Gregory Bryant has a magnetic personality that invites fierce alligators to nap in his presence and welcomes shy turtles out of their shells. He believes in life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness. He is driven in all aspects of his life to excel and thus makes the most of life. He has chosen a profession that is the epitome of freedom as it not only protects the freedom of our country but also demonstrates the concept of liberty through independence from the ground with each gravity-defying take-off. Most importantly, he makes time for happiness, and he is devoted to his family more than anything else. Gregory Bryant will succeed in whatever the future brings. It is very rare to find people that truly care. And simply put, Gregory cares. With these timeless qualities, he could become anything from a Mickey Mouse artist to the President of the United States.

Alexa Ciarolla

Submarines

Alexa left her home and horses in Palos Verdes, CA to join the Class of 2014 so she could "do something different," as if being someone from Southern California that other people actually want to interact with wasn't different enough. Her studies as a history major led her as far away as France, Vietnam and Cambodia. We wish she would have stayed. A four year member of the Varsity Offshore Sailing Team, Alexa made a name for herself as the team's premier spin trimmer and boat mom. Alexa joined Honor Staff to quench her insatiable thirst to stay on top of Bancroft Hall's latest gossip, but stayed with the group for the free fun-sized candy and dashing young BIOs. Here, she put her passion for publicly shaming stupid people to good use. Is this California Girl as unforgettable as Katy Perry would like us to believe? Unfortunately for us, yes.

Katherine Dawley

Submarines

This fact loving ROTC Nazi from Dover, NH has a flaming personality fit for no other place than USNA. In addition to a flawless academic record in Aerospace Engineering, she's a pt fanatic after years of waking up before dawn to face the perilous 2-inch silver lining around Ingram. When she's not battling that beast, taking a Frisbee to the throat or a racquetball to the eye she can be found rolling on mats with men twice her size. These tedious activities result in frequent napping and mindless meandering. Mastering the art of hyperbole she is quick to tell a story (more than once) and with growing detail each time. With these traits she was chosen for submarines instead of planes...that and due to sequestration the Navy can't afford to supply her with the necessary dosage of UV protection and thought the best place for her was under the sea.

Timothy Dixon

Navy Pilot

Timothy Dixon was the pretty boy of the group. As a member of the Lightweight Crew team, Tim was a true lightweight in more ways than one. Even though he spent most of his time at the Boathouse in his four years here, he still managed to succeed as an Aerospace engineer. In his free time, Tim could be found in his Jetta cruising through Baltimore in some fresh threads with the JHU cross country team. Tim found love in Baltimore, but his true loyalty to the Academy can be summed up by his repeat Sea Trials performance. Through all this, Tim has always been a loyal friend and the guy you can count on to help you out, regardless of the situation. His organization and work ethic will serve him well as he takes to the skies in Pensacola as a Navy Pilot

Robert Dunlap

Navy Pilot

Born in the slums of Saipan and raised in the arguably lower quality city of Shreveport, LA, Taylor decided to come to the Naval Academy with one goal in mind – to fly planes. This led him to pursue a degree in aeronautical engineering; however, this became a very questionable decision. When he wasn't up all night cursing at MATLAB, you could find him either surfing Reddit or in his rack, curled up with that man sweater we all know to be excessive chest hair. While at the Academy, he received his private pilot's license on the way to being selected as a Naval Aviator. But, he wasn't all work, and he could play hard, finding the worm only but once. He was never one to let a girl tie him down, and he hopes gravity won't do the same as he takes on his career as a Naval Aviator.

Petruzzo
www.petruzzo.com

Benjamin Freedman

USMC Ground

Benjamin Freedman is unmatched in his discipline, dedication and persistence. He also displays the highest order of selflessness. He will doubtless enjoy a successful career as a marine officer.

Nicholas Galanos

Surface Warfare Officer

Nicholas Galanos has distinguished himself as a towering intellect, an unapologetic free-thinker, and a enthusiastic polemic. Walk into his room at any time of day, and you're likely to find him reading philosophy- Camus, Shestov, Nietsche, Augustine or any classic work of Russian literature with a notebook full of scribbles on his lap. Hint to his future friends: never tell him you agree with him, because that'll just make him change his mind. We can't wait to read what he does in and out of the Navy.

Grant Genzman

Submarines

Grant Norman Genzman: He came from Ohio to become an officer, and oh what a naval officer he'll be. He might have the occasional shortcomings… like taking too long to get dressed (women take, on average, 14 minutes less time to prep for a night in DTA), or typing away on his keyboard until 4 a.m. for "homework" and "scholarships." But despite all that, Grant is headed for big things. Grad school is next, then the bridge of a submarine (even though he knows he should have joined the real Marines… Oorah Grant), and then flag rank. Room 2027 has a bet on how long it's gonna take. His love for all things ocean and equal love of beer make him well rounded for command. It's only a matter of time before Grant's hard work by the Severn gets him recognized as one of the Navy's best junior officers. DTTFSA"

Ashley Gilliard

Supply Corps

As a Navy brat, hailing from everywhere Ashley fit right in to USNA's culture with her high functioning type A personality. She completed every homework and reading assignment for all four years, a feat most mids didn't even know was possible. With her distinct coloration (and by that we mean her love of pink) and her own personal life size Ken doll to dress and match with, Ashley stood out in DTA every weekend. Don't anger this independent chemistry major or she'll transform into her alter ego, Nichelle. You'll know if this happens, you can hear her throughout the entire yard. Despite battling BMU, major allergies to everything and the effects of being collateral damage of a peanut butter bomb, Ashley has managed to excel and be accepted to the Supply Corps. With her peppy personality, constant optimism and beautiful smile, Ashley will be an excellent addition to the fleet.

Summer Gonzalez

Navy Pilot

It is not the critic who counts…Just kidding, I did not forget to write this. Sweet Summer, constant reminder of the best season, she's been a saint these past three years as my roommate. I have learned much from her: tolerance, patience, and compassion. That being said, she is as tough to crack as the German Enigma. English was always an adventure, especially as a spectator: She had her eye of Sauron reserved for those who made ridiculous claims and delivered her judgment mercilessly. Nevertheless, her personality is admirable and inspiring; she is a leader who will not stop until there is no road left…and then she will make her own. Softball, VT-NA, and countless company positions highlighted her innate ability to lead and now she's off to test her mettle with some metal in the sky. Fair winds and following seas…but especially fair winds.

Michael Hickey

Navy Pilot

Considering Mike can't even stay awake while driving, it is a miracle he was accepted into the academy. But since arriving he's triumphed again and again. He's overcome slippery fingers during drill and probably the strangest voice you've ever heard. Forever head restrictee in our hearts, this man is leaving behind a monumental legacy. Don't fall asleep in the jet.

Michael Jones Jr.

Navy Pilot

Michael Joseph Jones Jr. is a man among boys. His military aptitude and professionalism are rivaled by none. Michael has come a long way since being raised by a pack of wolves in Pacific Northwest. His knowledge and physical attributes have matured to a level beyond comprehension. His diction and rhetoric has been known to make listeners experience emotion in such an elegant way that their cries would flood the ancient rivers of Babylon ten times over. Michael's eyes glisten like the morning dew on a fresh cut blade of grass. When he is not busy fending off young coeds around the Annapolis area he is diligently spending time honing his body into an impenetrable fortress. Only time will tell if it withstands the whirlwind of what life has in store for him.

Robert Keating

Supply Corps

Bobby Keating likes giraffes. If you ever had the pleasure of meeting him, he is one of the coolest guys in the company. A self-taught musician, you can always find him jamming away to some Dave Mathews or Dispatch. Having a long day? Just stop by his room and join in on a guitar jam sesh. Bobby Keating wears the coolest pants. His sense of fashion on the golf course will put your best outfit to shame any day. Want pants like that? Too bad, they're not for sale. Bobby Keating is from Long Island and he hangs out with Dom Mazzetti. Really? Yup, all the time…on Youtube. But seriously, Bobby is one of the kindest and most genuine people you'll meet. He is a good friend who never hesitates to go out of his way to help someone. He works extremely hard, but remains humble. Not many people know that he was a three season dual-sport athlete majoring in Honors Economics and minoring in Spanish. Bobby is sure to succeed in his career as a Supply Corps Officer with his easy going personality and dedicated work ethics. Best of luck Bobs!

Alex Liu

Civil Engineer Corps

Prior Navy Yeoman, Alex Liu a.k.a. Petty Officer Liu, has been an integral member of the 16th company family. He may be old, but he loves to party. Whether it's DTA or slumming it in SPI with his battle buddy, Thomas Brown, he is always the life of the party. He lives for the moment and does not waste time with ratchet BBYs or unworthy peasants. But there is more to Alex. He has always displayed wise judgment, lives a practical lifestyle, and loves all things auto. He is a man of ambition who lives for both the refined and simple pleasures of life. But above all this, he is a spectacular leader, a fierce friend and a great man.

Jordan Lynch

SEALs

Jordan could not have represented his home state, Mississippi, better. After excelling in the classroom his biggest question was which movie he was gonna watch. When he couldn't decide he would often watch both at the same time. Talking before he thought, Jordan was a natural born servant leader, inspiring others around him to also become pricks. With jobs such as Battalion Sports Boss, Company XO, and Regimental XO, Jordan was always able to find high profile positions with the least amount of work. Despite being a lost and troubled soul his first couple of years at the academy, he soon started ironing his khakis and found a girl worth his time, Sam. As the Special Warfare community welcomes him, we've gotta warn them, he doesn't like lifting legs more than once a week.

Peyton McDonald

Submarines

Barely over 1200 miles from his native Dallas, Texas, Lyle sure left his mark on USNA as both a leader in the Brigade and a great friend. Undoubtedly, he is the ONLY midshipman in recent years to wear the Service Dress Khaki uniform as a tribute to his hero Chester. Really, who else can say that they commissioned a private boat wearing full dress white, accompanied by a 21 BB gun salute? Knowing his personality, it's not hard to tell why his dress is immaculate, to include creases in his jeans (and the sailor-cowboy hat). Undoubtedly, Lyle wishes he served about fifty years ago, but he'll have to be traditional in his marriage with Angel instead. Remember the great memories we made at USNA: Fahr, the boat, Protestant Choir, swordfighting, Corky the Cut, and tongue-checking a 9V battery, to name a few. Platy, Grampz, Big Fish, and Thor

Connor McKiernan

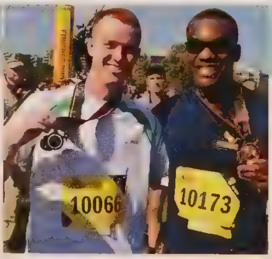
Navy Pilot

BORN IN UPSTATE NY, CONNOR CHOSE USNA OVER USMA BECAUSE HE DIDN'T WANT IT SO CLOSE TO HOME. HE'S ILLITERATE IN SPORTS BUT HE CAN PLAY SPORTS ESPECIALLY WITH A BUD. WISER THAN MOST, ESPECIALLY FREEDMAN, HE BECAME THE GO-TO LAB PARTNER. HE ALSO GOES TWO ON LAB BUILDINGS. AS A FUTURE PILOT WE'RE PROUD OF YOU, SHOOT FOR THE STAR, MAN… DUH.

Elizabeth Miller

Surface Warfare Officer

Elizabeth Miller, aka Liz, aka Lizzy, aka Half-Pint, aka "Don't tell her anything you don't want everyone else to know," aka "I sound like I'm from Minnesota, doncha knoo." Hailing from the North Woods, she once had a roommate who was convinced the Midwest wasn't a real place. Lizzy loves to spend her days trying to convince people that she's not actually Chinese. Though not completely Communist, she's been to both sides of the Strait and plans to someday go back. As a SWOtivator headed to Japan, she can go to all of the Cat Cafés and send some videos back to her awesome friends back here in the hall. Tyler and Perla will need to find someone else for midnight meetings at the Mate's desk and just wait until she can once again grace them with her crazy ChicAAgo presence. We love you, Lizzy. Thanks for the memories. ECMTSKPVR.



Benjamin Murphy

USMC Pilot

Ben Murphy is a Marine, a baby, a boyfriend at all times, and a fighter. If the Minnesota school system has taught Ben anything it certainly isn't how to pronounce words right. This Golden Gopher has found the perfect leadership balance of strength, humor, and dairy. But what makes him tick? Butt ticks. Speaking of Leatherneck, he was so impressive that literally no one could touch him. We know this excellence will carry through into your career as a Marine Corps pilot. Show 'em you've got the sturph.

OF YOURSELF

Kevin Nakayama

USMC Ground

When this unique blend of Irish and Japanese left the rugged streets of Chicago to begin his journey at USNA, not only would he become an officer and a gentleman but he'd also attain the well renowned title: KEVIN NAK-AY-AMA, CROSSFIT CHAMPION OF THE WORLD! In addition to this beefy position, he has taken the role of mobster (you've never seen a display of punctuality until you've owed him money). Not graced with having all of the eggs in his basket, bad luck follows Naks everywhere; his backpack stolen from Notre Dame, his wallet taken by Philadelphia gypsies and his brand new car demolished in an accident won't be forgotten. With balanced supply of brawn and brains, Kevin was rightfully chosen to join the prestigious ranks of the Marine Corps. There's no doubt that with his unwavering drive, sound judgment and moral ideals that he will make an inspiring officer.

Broderick Neel-Feller

Submarines

Broderick Ashley Neel-Feller is a mysterious man with a lady's middle name. Rickey, aka Slick Rick, aka Magic Man, hails from the mean streets of Anacostia. Rickey tried to play football in high school but luckily he sucked so badly that he played rugby instead and led the navy rugby team with honor and valor for the past four years. Rickey also tried out for the swim team but sank straight to the bottom, so he decided to join the submarine corps so he will know what it's like to go underwater for the first time in his life. Rickey is a man of many backgrounds- he is half lazy and half hard working, and never afraid to venture through wildlife and spend time with the scariest of creatures. He is cultured and kind and excited to serve his country for years to come.

Scott Oberst

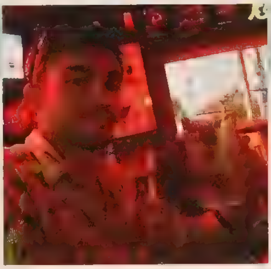
Surface Warfare Officer

A native of Maryland and a proud member of 16th Company, Scott always felt right at home in the halls of Mother B. His peers will remember him as a model Midshipman, whose knowledge of Midregs was beyond compare. To the plebes, he will always be the upper class that rated them during rolling tray. Scott excelled in the classroom, and was consistently ranked among the top of his class. As a member of the marathon team, he showed that his legs were just as quick as his wits. When he wasn't busy setting the standard, Scott made for great company to, and you would be hard pressed to find a truer friend in the Brigade. With his shiny shoes and rigid discipline, Scott will fit right in with his fellow officers in the Surface Fleet.

Robert Patterson

USMC Ground

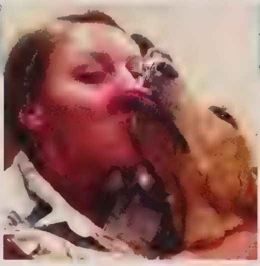
Cross Country team captain, 16th company training officer, and renowned economist. The epitome of a "Chill Sergeant". A gentleman and a scholar. Fell to the darkside from the get go. Known by a few names including "Sketchball", "Bob's Potts", "Grapevine Rob", and half of "SR". He is the proverbial hummingbird i.e. fuselage too big, wings too small, goes from flower to flower. The Corps looks forward to his arrival and 16th company plebes look forward to his departure. Has a knack for getting inebriated friends out of danger. He has made his family proud (shout out to the Patterson and Stuart clans!) and will be sorely missed by his teammates and classmates alike. So let's clink our mugs and toast to Grapvine Rob.



Nathalie Pauwels

Intelligence

Whether she's playing WOW, writing a paper, speaking one of the 20 languages she knows, or just beasting it out in the hockey rink, Nathalie has proven that she can excel at anything she puts her mind to. Although she was split between majoring in Arabic or English, she came to her senses and decided to be an American. 'Merica. One thing I've come to learn is to never underestimate the weird things that can come out of her mouth (this castle is in unacceptableeeeeee con-dish-onnnnnns), the secret pleasures she indulges in, or what a truly great friend and roommate she can be. Fair Winds and Following Seas my friend, and never forget, "The only Corps is the Information Dominance Corps". -SLG



Erika Pedersen

Navy Pilot

She's a quiet soul with countless qualities that make her memorable. She's passionate about the things that matter most to her and her excitement for adventure is contagious. She's the greatest best friend, sister, and daughter anyone could hope to have. You may not have seen her around the Yard lately, but that's because she's been crushing girls on rugby pitches in California, Russia, and France. That may intimidate you, but don't worry, she's much more likely to geek out over Sleeping Beauty, Aerospace Engineering, or the force acting on a nail in the horizontal direction as its accelerated at…zzzzzzzzzz. She has dreamed of being a Naval Aviator since she was a small lass and there's no doubt she will be awesome. She loves the legacy of NWR and we are proud to claim her as a rugger.

Alvaro Rentas

Surface Warfare Officer

What can I say about this guy…He dresses better than the entire Italian mafia. Anytime you need a snarky comment and fresh bite of reality, come see Andy. He's an international man of mystery, womanizer…The most interesting man in the world. The only man who can grow a beard in two days is affectionately known by many as the token Colombian of our company. His love of travel is taking him to Sasebo where he will undoubtedly continue trying to sculpt his calves and thighs while he is trapped on one of those grey things that float on the water. His incredible resilience is inspiring and will be the trait that makes him an admiral for sure, or maybe Crossfit's biggest proponent all the way in the land of the Rising Sun.

Jason Roman

USMC Ground

Escaping from what would have been a life on the streets, this "New York Boy" made his way to the Naval Academy. During the Plebe year, most of the time Jason was spending on exploring vulnerabilities of the MIDS system. As a result, very quickly he broke it and gained a total information control about the Brigade. Furthermore, during the youngster year Jason met Ipad, who quickly became his best friend and frequently they were dining out together in the King Hall. On a brighter note, Jason always had magical ability to convince people, which he may have abused several times. Therefore he easily became the Plebe Summer company commander and his people just loved him. All qualities this principled gentlemen possess and his really big dreams will make him an excellent Devil Dog and a successful politician after his retirement.

Erica Romer

Naval Flight Officer

Quiet, shy, and timid may be words often used to describe this kitten loving future Naval Flight Officer. She grew up on a farm in very rural Fairfield, New York. She obviously didn't mind the long days and short nights because she chose to be a mechanical engineer. Our favorite turd, who was bullied at best, escaped the torture by listening to a unique blend of cover songs made by artists that even hipsters knew nothing about. Her love of cats and horses was matched only by her love of a good work out. (Never Crossfit though… (well maybe most of the time… (but we won't call it Crossfit))) She would often hear "Sound off Romer" but what this intelligent, funny, and slightly witty farm girl lacked in the vocal cord department she more than made up for by being a hardworking and genuinely kind-hearted Midshipman.

John Ryan

Navy Pilot

John, Patrick, or Ryan…a man of three names but equally as many talents, accents, and ID's. A dancer, a comedian, a man who tends to sleep in cubicles in foreign office buildings. No matter what career he chooses, his future is bright. He keeps the tractors on schedule and knows a real business relationship when he sees one. This Strong Island boy comes from a proud House and will make a great Navy pilot in the future.

Matthew Schaidle

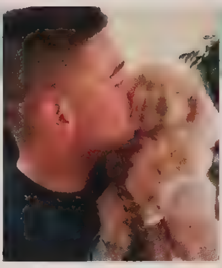
USMC Pilot

Matthew Nicholas "Smelly Feet" Schiddle/Schaydel/Schaidle was so excited to start his career in the Navy that he arrived for Plebe Summer a day early. Since then, that extra training day has paid off generously. Or maybe it was his excellent choice of cork-board role models: first Deluca, then Chesty, and by now he's likely upgraded to a picture of his roommate. Matt is going to be an amazing Marine. He is eternally loyal to his friends (unless a Staff Sergeant walks around the corner), and he maintains an incomparable sense of duty. In the history of the Academy, he was the first ever Training Sergeant to protect the grey tiles from Plebes and keep a watchful eye on the P-way… while sleeping. In his four years by the Severn, Matt was an outstanding worker, leader, company-mate, and friend. We expect nothing less of his future in green.

James Sciscoe

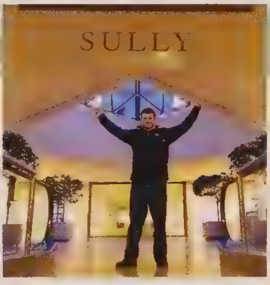
USMC Pilot

Stephen Smith



Navy Pilot

Hailing from southern California, Steve Smith will always wonder why the weather on the east coast can't ever make up its mind. After enduring four long years at the Naval Academy, Steve Smith is ready to move on with his life and to sunny weather out in Florida. But let's not forget about his qualities. He is well known for always having a smile on his face and his phrase of "just chillin." "Smith! Why are you always smiling? You're a plebe! Plebes shouldn't be smiling." Steve Smith has been humbled to have had wonderful parents, friends, and faculty/staff to help support him through his time at the academy.



Timothy Sullivan

Surface Warfare Officer

Timothy Sullivan possesses a piercing wit and analytical mind that will aid him not merely in his naval pursuits but in any pursuit he undertakes. Most admirable though is Sullivan's loyalty to his closest friends and families.

Morgan Tilley

Naval Flight Officer

Morgan Tilley, the CrossFit legend. One look at Morgan will propel you into a series of questions about her Olympic lifting PR's and if you see her in the bar, please don't hesitate to ask how much she deadlifts. Morgan is devoted to strongly believing that none of the States in the Pacific Northwest exist, and that North Carolina is the mecca of the US. Oh, and have you ever heard of Wilmington? OHMYGODWILMINGTON. Drop that name around her and you're sure to be told that it's WAY better than where you're from. One of the only people known to decide service selection through the "heads or tails" flipping of a coaster, here's to a future of flight suits and fashionable brown boots. We all know you're in it for the outfit anyway. The most defining fact about Morgan, however is that she has done NOLS. She loves the outdoors and if you think you like the mountains more than her, you're wrong.

Gregory Wynn

Navy Pilot

I have enjoyed these past four years a great deal, and I definitely wouldn't have made it this far without a few key people. You guys know who you are. To my company mates: the Navy is not as big as I once thought it was and I look forward to the day when we all meet again in the fleet. Getting to know you over my time here at the Severn has been a highlight of my life. I'd like to wish you all fair winds and following seas.

Jeffrey Baez

Surface Warfare Officer

Born in Pennsylvania as an only child, Jeffrey Andrew Baez-Wayne had the fortune to be born to the owners of a multinational conglomerate. Tragically, his parents were mercilessly gunned down in front of him during a mugging gone wrong. The shock and trauma of his parents' murder led him to the Naval Academy, where Baez-Wayne was determined to use his life in the preservation of justice. He began his training here in earnest, learning and training hard every day. Training his body through the art of fencing, and his mind through rigorous mathematics, he has peak human fitness combined with keen mental acuity. He leaps across the rooftops of the Yard, hunting down villains who would see us lose our liberty. He is the hero that Bancroft needs, and the one it deserves. May he continue his Caped Crusade into the fleet and beyond.

Killian Corbishley

Naval Flight Officer

This proud Rochester native claims to never be cold and is always under dressed for the weather but we would be too if we grew up in the cold tundra of Upstate New York, aka Canada. Since the 13th year at NWP, Killian has grown to love some Maryland traditions, like Natty Boh, crab and Old Bay. Some things never change, Killian hates people, but not really, she is just really good at hiding how much she loves us. If there are not any Shamrock Shakes, Gatorade, or regular peanut butter around, you are going to have a bad weekend with Killer. Period. This NFO will take down your plane from the back seat. She will follow Layne anywhere, literally. Fly Navy! Go NADS!

Carey Fries

Surface Warfare Officer

Fabulous doesn't even begin to cover Carey Fries. Always looking perfectly put together, this JCrew honey is known for her impeccable taste, easy style, and subtle passion for schedules. When she isn't watching Top Chef or scaring herself with Ghost Stories, you'll find her enjoying the finer things in life: friends, family, and French manicures. Fierce, loyal, kind, and playful - you'll be lucky if you ever get to meet her! At heart she's a surface warrior ready for the Fleet… LCS Freedom you're in for a treat!

Chase Hubert

Navy Pilot

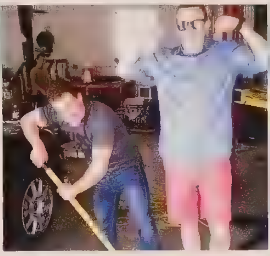
Last out of his rack and first out on liberty, good ol' Chase "Hubie" Hubert is the cornerstone of any good night out in DTA. Although his small-town Midwestern background is about as far removed from Annapolis as possible, that never stopped him from strapping on his boots and cowboy hat, firing up the King Ranch and painting the town red; the red of a Coors Light logo that is. Whether he's in the streets of Madrid, San Juan, or trying to find his way into a Jason Aldean concert, Chase will always find his way home, eventually… If you're ever having a hard time locating the wily Minnesotan, first check anywhere that had advertised free beer that week. If you're still outta luck, take the quick journey up to Middle River and you'll surely find him nestled down with a little blonde nurse dreaming about those golden wings

Matthew Huffman

Navy Pilot

Following in his father's footsteps, Matt Huffman decided to come to the Naval Academy, major in history, and fly Navy. "Huff Daddy" keeps his flow long and his relationships longer. Through his time at the academy he has surrounded himself with beautiful women. But don't take this mild mannered bro for granted. This quiet rager can hang with anyone at the bars and still make the Sunday morning service. However, there are some secrets that would be best kept in his past at UVA or CUA. His skills do not end there. He is the model scholar athlete, excelling on the lightweight crew team and in the classroom at Georgetown. His frat boy style has brought him a long way so far and there's no doubt he will excel even further when he hits the fleet. Good luck Huff, we know you will make us, USNA, and your father proud.

Christopher Junghans



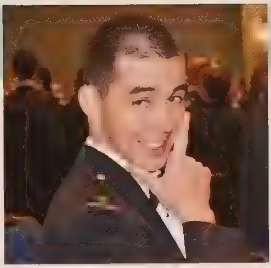
Navy Pilot

Coming to the Academy from the not so far down the road Dunkirk, MD, Chris "super young" Junghans was one of the quieter members of 17th Company, although that surely didn't stop him from stirring up some trouble from time to time. A 4-year veteran and eventual Captain of the Navy Men's Gymnastics Team, Chris loved gymnastics more than just about anything at the Academy, that is, except for when his when his car was parked on the yard. Chris was never one to stay in on the weekends, and could always be found outside surfing or longboarding, or tipping one back with the boys. Although the idea of being a motivator seemed exhilarating at first, the drudge of leatherneck showed Chris that his laid-back, surfer demeanor, was much more akin to that of the aviation community, which he will certainly fit right into.

Camron Kiekintveld

Navy Pilot

Gary Koda



Surface Warfare Officer

Gary has undergone a transformation. How, you ask? Four years at USNA has turned him from a lumbering brute of a Marine into the articulate and refined gentleman that is an officer in the Navy. He no longer suffers from spontaneous Oo-rah's and other incomprehensible gibberish (wait, no, he still does…), or the need to PT incessantly (crud, he still does that…). He uses refined language (wait, no, even as an English major he still speaks like a middle schooler) and drinks only the finest of wines (hold on, he downed HOW many Long Islands?!). Yes, he goes into the fleet a polished sailor, the toast of admirals and generals alike…HAH, NOPE.

Gary hasn't changed the core of how he is…and that's the way we like it. The world needs more of his motivation, and he has plenty to give.

Ryan Kommer

Submarines

Ryan "K-Dog" Kommer emerged from Newark, New York with one very green goal in mind...money, that and the incredible necessity to always be right. For Ryan, the more money the better so no surprise when the semper-deep club procured his commitment early. Even though he had an insatiable need to win every argument, Ryan's immense self-confidence and logical reasoning could be looked up to by his peers. While escaping from Mother-B, Ryan would venture to Philly where a certain cute brunette resided or could be caught with his buddies putting back a trusty solo cup or two. Being committed to a good time, Ryan organized all major extravaganzas, to include back scratching. From Ring Dance to Spain to France to Puerto Rico, Ryan has had the wheels turning and ensured these four years by the Severn didn't go by without the "fun and games."

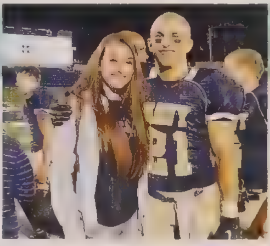
Madelyn MacFarlane

Surface Warfare Officer

Maddie is the epitome of class. She has that constant itch for all things unknown and new. You're more likely to find her manicured hand wrapped around a long-island or a glass of wine than a bottle of brew. The multi-colored post-it notes that dot her desk display daily reminders, but more importantly inspirational quotes that she's consulted since plebe year.She is the voice of sane reason (our 17th company momma) to anyone who needs it. After braving NWSD for 3 years she decided to join the honorable ranks of the NARPs, and jumped in head first! Not only is she an inspiring person to herself and others but especially little sis Zoe (she had to drag you along too!). She has been a rock to her best friends and one of those friends who will be in your corner for a lifetime. Here's to you Maddie, we all know the SWO-tivator in you will shine through!

Alec McGlaughlin

Submarines



Alec Scott McGlaughlin is a prized member of the vaunted 17th Company. It was known as a failure, the best at everything except morally, mentally, or physically. However, Alec was one of the key members who turned the company around and created a top tier company. Alec also decided to take on the challenge of becoming Fourth Battalion Commander. Despite the tribulations that were required, namely sleeping in through formation, he flourished in the high pressure environment. After realizing his mistake of being non-British, Alec was selected as a finalist in the Rhodes and Marshall scholarships. They then rejected him for being too American. He is planning on attending Graduate School despite this setback. He has also excelled as the starting corner in Sprint Football as well as their moral compass for four years. The Submarines will eventually get him, though they'll have to wait until he's out of school.

Jasmine Melvin

Naval Flight Officer

Jasmine "Get your life" Melvin set and maintains to this very day many records from her time at USNA. Since her graduation, no other Mid has shown such a profound Beyoncé devotion, one that caused spontaneous outbursts of enviable dancing in the P-ways. Known as a motivator in the extreme, she woke up every day to work out, pushing the bounds of physical fitness and sleep deprivation (always making sure to replenish with plenty of salt). What other Mid can claim that!? But most of all, she remains the best friend, roommate, and shipmate the Academy has yet to see. The NFO community better get ready (I recommend they stand by with Season 1 of Scandal, some vines, and a bag of Twizzlers). Love ya – FBGM

Mary Morrison

Navy Pilot

Mary Louise, "M.L." Morrison, is a hardworking member of Navy Women's Basketball (NWB). Basketball has been one of M.L.'s favorite sports since 6th grade (she's pretty good at volleyball, too). While challenging her teammates on and off the court to better themselves, M.L. is also helpful to her classmates in 17th company. One of M.L.'s favorite past times is flying a Cessna 172S. She currently is working to achieve her civilian private pilot's license through Northwest Airport in Justin, Texas. As Naval Aviation select (along with two of her teammates), she will hopefully end up in Corpus Christi, Texas, where she will not only be close to home, but also be able to spend many days on the beach! She drives a Dodge Ram (named Rammie), and y'all better watch out!

Nikolas Mullen

Surface Warfare Officer

"Mullcat can best be described as a connoisseur of premium rays and a lifelong resident of the bungalow. He'll soon be joining our global force for good fighting the only war he knows: the fight to get light."

Sean C. Murphy

Submarines

Sean, the Peoples Champion, Sheany Boi, Rufio was one of the greatest athletes the academy has ever seen. He was voted most likely to not be a virgin by the varsity bowling team. Unfortunately, he had to share his athletic abilities with the Navy Dart team, sponsored by Castle Bay. Speaking of Castle Bay, we have to thank NWSD for 'saving' him from shore patrol… Thanks guys, we owe you our undying gratitude. When he wasn't busy doing his more active sports, he liked to do short stints with the Navy swim team, casually breaking some records here and there and occasionally losing it on a member or two. His gaming skills earned him two world titles in League of Legends, a team championship in World of Warcraft, zero girlfriends… and a lot of alone time in his room. Here's a box of tissues. NMSD Proud.

Krystyna Nowakowski

Surface Warfare Officer

Krystyna "Kow" Nowakowski, is a proud member of the Navy Lightweight Crew Team. Endearing herself to her teammates and infuriating her opponents with a simple philosophy: "If you're not first, you're last", she has consistently set the standard as one of the only female members of a men's sport. Don't let her small size or role as a coxswain fool you though —Krystyna has never earned below an A on the PRT. A Surface Warfare select, she will hopefully end up in Hawaii where she will spend her days on the beach smoking cigars and sipping bourbon.

Michael Nugent

Chemiluminans

Surface Warfare Officer

Originating from South Africa, Michael eventually found his way to Alpherretta, Georgia. Academically savvy, Michael declared physics as his major, however, as smart as he was; he never seemed to have time for homework. His time was taken by such award winning games as Cookie Clicker and Teddy Bear Zombies. Mike is one of the most loyal friends one could ask for....unfortunately, his insatiable thirst for a Japanese Rattlesnake venom helped land Mike some restriction time. When not on restriction, Michael could be found with some of his best friends: Transmission, Oil leak, and No Heater. These friends have been with his gas efficient 1977 Dodge Hybrid since the summer. This Hybrid could take him anywhere, and it did, straight to the Naval Station Friday-Saturday every weekend. Why not Sundays? Because these were the days dedicated to his two true loves... the Atlanta Falcons and Honey BBQ Wings at BWW.

Caitlin Olsen

Submarines

Caitlin Olsen AKA "The Queen of Countdowns" has been my ride-or-die roommate since plebe summer and will be my Beyoncé dance partner till the end! Reigning from the mountains of Los Gatos, California, Cait has left big shoes for those behind her to fill. A role model to the underclass and a tremendous friend to her peers. From tennis to Battalion SMAJ, Bowman scholar to Battalion Commander, and the best of them all a soon-to-be Submariner. I'm blessed to be able to call Cait my friend. She's been a shoulder to cry on, an ear to talk to, and a hand to grab when I've fallen. I couldn't ask for a better roommate. Not only has she been my best friend, but she has become a sister I know I'll have for a lifetime. The fleet doesn't know what's coming to them. A true Angel in the flesh. Love Ya!

Nathanial Perisho

Submarines

Nathan Rex Perisho hails from the micro-town of Conway, Missouri and is the self-proclaimed king of the NARPs, balancing his time between lifting heavy objects in the NARP nest and taking NARP naps. His night terror spasms have led to the destruction of multiple ceiling tiles, most likely induced from his late night shenanigans with a couple of friendlier upperclass and an unnamed girl named Lisa. Nate is a true gentleman with refined ways, which has often landed him in certain clubs that cater to such individuals. Nate had his mind dead set on Marines, but quickly learned that the only marine is a submarine and now follows the age old mantra "hot rock drive ship". Semper deep!

Benjamin Porter

Naval Flight Officer

Bendy. Ben Doyle. Roadhog. Portdawg. Whatever you know him as, you know the Navy's core of NFOs will be proud to house this Mississippian 'Goose' under their wings. If you don't know him…to quote the father of another midshipman after meeting him, "he could talk a nun out of covenant." Essentially, despite his deep Southern accent, Ben always has a way with words, especially when shouting loathe-filled profanities of the four letter variety into goat court to express his utter revulsion of plebe chemistry. In addition to being a connoisseur of language, Ben plays his hummingbird guitar with such a heavenly Pocahontas-like style that actual hummingbirds stop by to hum along. Thanks to Ben and his good-humored attitude, there is never a dull moment…of course, with the exception of that occasional moment when you didn't understand what he said… reference the old guy in the movie Joe Dirt.

Mack Qin

Medical Corps

Born on the planet Vulcan, Qin- Spock spent his early days learning the ways of pure logic to suppress his strong emotions. He later enrolled in the US Naval Academy to defy his father's wishes. Qin- Spock is the first of his kind to enroll in such a distinguish place. In this unfamiliar culture of humans, Qin- Spock has been known for speaking his mind and saying things like "this is illogical." Because of his logical input Qin- Spock has proven to be a great asset in the US Academy and will continue to be one in the fleet. One more well- known saying is his token of respect, "Live Long and Prosper." This saying has been universally accepted by the students of the US Naval Academy. Qin- Spock has had a lasting impression wherever he goes and will do so in the Medical Corps.

Christopher Radka

Navy Pilot

Christopher Radka is a true, red blooded, freedom lovin' American. He is half Thai (his middle name isn't a word, Nipat?) and he lived most of his life in Thailand or Paris. He might not have brought aggression or unbridled courage to Plebe Summer, but he did bring some good fashion tips and pointy elf shoes, which actually came in handy for Plebe shenanigans. His metrosexual behavior garnered the attention of a Mexican admirer at none than the International Ball, go figure, and they are quite the couple. Chris is a great person to be around as long as you didn't wake him from a nap as his behavior is freakishly feline in nature. His carefree attitude will fit right in at Pensacola; let's just hope cats don't behave the same in the air as they do in cars.

Christian Rizal Lopez Regan

Navy Pilot

During his time at the Naval Academy, Christian Rizal Lopez Regan has flourished as a four-year letterman for the Varsity YP Squadron. Indeed, it is written, that under his command a YP was successfully navigated outside the Severn River without running aground, a feat which earned him the titles "master of the seas" and "wizard of shoal water highlighting." Furthermore, his commitment to all things SWO allowed him to carry 17th Company to its only YP Color Company Competition title, and led him to make the seemingly obvious career choice of Navy Pilot. Christian's devotion to SEANAV has been trumped only by his commitment to Midshipman Regulations. Christian exhibits a relentless pursuit of excellence in all he does, drawing his energy from his ritualistic return to the rack each morning after formation. The Naval Aviation community has found itself a fine young officer, fair winds and following seas Christian.

Matthew Salo

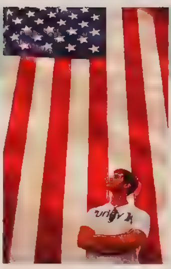
Navy Pilot

Hailing from the loving arms of his mother, Matthew Salo came to the Academy to major in Computer Science – no wait Aero – no wait Oceanography, and lead Marines into battle. After an emotionally unstable night on a public transportation system and seeing the glories of aviation in Virginia Beach, he decided to pursue the skies. Matt certainly was the most joyful and optimistic which helped him earn the hearts of countless ladies, with a little help from text, or Tinder. While he may have devoted more time to having fun and Sam Adams than his studies, luckily, Matt has set himself up for success by making prudent financial decisions, Volvos and diamonds are only on the rise. All things aside, 4-2 will surely miss his beaming smile and his happy go lucky nature. Matt's charm and loyalty will ensure his success in the Fleet and all future endeavors.

Andrew Sawyer

Navy Pilot

Andrew was born to be a pilot, but looking at his time at the academy, you would think he would have selected anything else. He worked his butt off academically to be the prime candidate for the Submarine corps, and if that didn't work, he has lifted weights enough to put the entire Corps (Marine Corps) on his back. In fact, it is quite strange that he spent so many hours squinting at engineering textbooks and lifting weights, because now, if he can even fit in the cockpit, he has another decade of squinting at tiny numbers, and an entire career of lifting enough to earn him an awesome call sign cough Hercules cough. The most important thing to remember about Andrew is his dedication to his family and friends. Where ever he goes in the world he will never forget the love and support he has waiting at home.



Anthony Seda

Surface Warfare Officer

Anthony Seda hails from the small southern town of Smith Station, AL. He joined the Color Guard the first week of Plebe Summer and has since risen to President of the club. This should not hurt his street cred though, because he has been known to drink snake poison and shred some gnarly mountains. This snowboarding fetish has become quite an obsession, as he has two boards and has gone at least 3 times. Luckily his loyalty to his friends is much higher than that of his snowboarding. He has kept many people out of conduct system and has a knack for being a vom-magnet when the rowdy women get too big for their britches. Few people have that level of patience and compassion for friends. As a world traveler he will be moving to Yokosuka, Japan next year to begin his career as a SWO.

Dylan Spencer

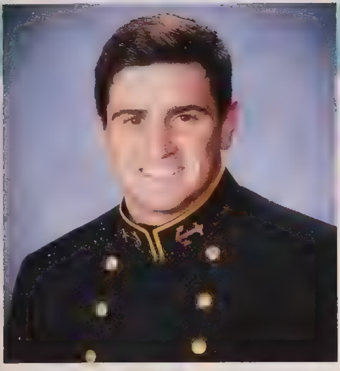
Navy Pilot

Dylan Spencer, a Bible-thumpin', sleepy-eyed Kansan, hailed from a town smaller than most high schools. Most well-known for his ability to fall asleep at any given time, his heart was set on a Rack PT major when he first arrived at the academy. However, by the end of plebe year, he realized mid-western chicks dig rocket scientists, so he pursued the astrospace engineering field. It clearly worked out for him because he managed to woo just about every Miss Kansas candidate to date. Critics speculate that his superior athletic prowess encompassed nearly every sport he touched; his basketball skills will remain legendary to NARPs for years to come. Loving to his family and loyal to his friends, this Godly man sets the bar for what it means to fly under the radar. Godspeed and good luck down in P-cola, you'll be setting records in the naval aviation community, Dyl!

Blake Stout

Submarines

The Southern Charmer from South Carolina, Blake Stout, has always had a way with the ladies even if they were a little younger. There was never a dull moment with this guy, unless he was doing homework, which happened to be all the time because he was a high achieving Mech-E. His academic success opened up many doors for Blake here, including but not limited to a semester abroad in lovely France, the coveted position of CC, and his future beneath the waves as a submariner. In his social life, Blake was always on the move, whether this would be a run-away mission on his birthday night or the numerous dames who attempted to capture his heart. Blake's dedication and drive will certainly serve him well in Charleston, the Fleet, and beyond. It's been a great four years, Blake, smooth sailing beneath the waves!



Matthew Verducci

Surface Warfare Officer

Mathew Anthony Verducci, or simply Ducci, followed in his father's footsteps straight to the Naval Academy. While here he grew fame for his national championship performance with the club lacrosse team sophomore year. After having his junior season squirreled away, he came back strong senior year and answered the call to duty as the operations officer. Possibly his biggest success at the academy is his overarching victory in the controversial Thermodynamics Scandal of 2014. One pick short from joining Hatch and Clay on the USS America, Matt will be boarding the USS Essex out of San Diego. Whether it's playing chel in Thompson's room, giving Rio fresh cuts, or starting brawls against opponents in lacrosse Matt will definitely be missed by all of his friends as he embarks on his journey to San Diego.

Ryan Wheeler

Explosive Ordnance Disposal

Ryan Wheeler didn't get accepted to the Academy the first go around. To make up for the fact, he never left the Yard for two years straight to make up for lost time, even though he lives in Baltimore. He made waves as brigade supply officer, due to his job experience as kitchen manager of a beloved Chik-fila venue. He left VMI to attend the Academy so that he could commission as a Marine instead of in the Navy… He is commissioning in the Navy. Even when he becomes the best EOD officer in the Fleet, he will always be 17th Company's favorite rat.

Shelby-Wayne Williams

USMC Ground

Shelby-Wayne "Oaf" Williams hails from the bustling state of South Dakota, and is a Mormon. His family served as the inspiration for the movie Cheaper by the Dozen and almost made a cameo appearance. His busy family life, including starting one of his own, attributes to his receding hairline and old man demeanor. When not crushing weights in MacD, Shelby enjoys yutting at the moon with the wolfpack and running in sub artic temperatures in reg pt gear. Along with signing his commission, Shelby will also be signing his life away to the devil…. Devil Dog that is! Best of luck Shelby! In the Corps and beyond!

Cheyenne Wingate

Nuclear Surface Warfare

Cheyenne Wingate hails from the overzealous community of outer Los Angeles. She made a name for herself over Plebe Summer by being the Queen of Questions. No seriously, a thousand million a day. Though she still asks a ton of questions she has come to be known as a trusting and compassionate friend. She spends a majority of her time singing with the Gospel choir and hanging with friends. When she's not singing you can find her napping from after 6th period until TAPS. How'd she become a Nuke SWO? By studying under a blanket from the odd hours of 2 am to 6 am, actually that's how she passed all her classes. Not so bad for an Oceanography Major.

Amanda Zablocky

Navy Pilot

Amanda Zablocky, known by some as Z-Block, Jersey Girl, or A-Azabs, but I like to call her… best friend. Born on the sunny Jersey Shoreline staring at naked beach goers at her first job as a lifeguard, Amanda can now be found studying with the warm Floridian sun in her Navy Flight Suit, or as I like to call them… jammies! And like most people, she has a kryptonite, cooking! Amanda's skills are second compared to everyone, with a prize in every dish! Born to be independent, Amanda can be found looking up to amazing female role models like Candice Swanepoel and Blake Lively. When she isn't busy looking up to these girls, she's feeding her other addiction… online shopping. Never have I seen a better online shopper or deal finder like her, saving everyone tons of money and always thinking of ways to bring everyone together. You're the best!

Sarah Alexandre

Navy Pilot

This wicked Mainer arrived at the Academy and was always destined for greatness. She showed her intelligence, hard work, and high levels of sassiness in the chem labs, across the country at USAFA, and around the world when she spent the summer riding camels in Oman. Several have learned to be weary of her flirtatious attitude, as she is not actually interested in dating you. This miniature powerhouse always wanted to be a naval aviator but it took a lot of squats and King Hall ice cream to get her to fit into the cockpit. Sarah served as one of the toughest Company Commanders 18th Company had ever seen. Standing up to Chief and LT is never easy but Sarah handled it with grace, sarcasm, and wit. The Navy Air community is gaining one of the most dependable, hard-working, and selfless individuals that anyone would be honored to call a friend.

Robert Atkinson

USMC Ground

Fighting Bob aka old gramps hails from the land where Pro Wrestling is religion and dip is toothpaste. He leaks out his hard earned wisdom like the inconsistent stream that comes from his aging prostate. He never fails to explain a situation from some random YouTube video that he found when he was making sure his UNSAT status remained in check. Nevertheless his dark humor and sadistic comedy always provides the Sprint Team with a much needed lift in spirit. His knowledge of football is extensive due to his now 38 season career. A prior marine true to heart he never fails to spend his money smartly such as his loan investment into the local establishments of Acme and Stan and Joes. Roberto is truly one of the greatest men that ever walked these halls and any person who knows him is now better for it. Take it Sleazy. TNKK!

Sara Baugh

Navy Pilot

Sara Baugh started out a strong four years at the Naval Academy as a towering 6'2" member of our Navy Women's Volleyball Team; however, she decided to lay down the spandex after only a year and a half to take up her less time-consuming pastime of traveling around the world. Between hiking Mount Ulriken in Norway and feeding over 300,000 fish in a North Atlantic salmon farm to braving the desert heat in search of Israel's lost treasures, Sara graciously brought her knowledge back to us common folk by assisting in the Naval Academy's Foreign Affairs Conference. While she is very independent, she would not have survived the past four years without the multitudes of Anne Baugh care packages, and the support and infinite wisdom of the "man pack." As this ocean engineer moves on to the next phase of her life, we can only hope that this baby giraffe shows more grace and coordination than she did at the Academy to become a successful naval aviator.

Hunter Beck

Naval Flight Officer

Hello there, my name is Hunter Beck and I'm going to be part of the NFO community when I graduate. To many people I seem like a super suave and classy gentleman. In reality, I am a lanky pseudo-athlete that enjoys vigorously whacking tiny balls as a sport. When I'm not diddling around on the Squash court getting overly friendly with my teammates/love-doves, I can typically be found procrastinating in my room watching immature videos on YouTube instead of doing homework. Seriously, I've missed like 5 really important papers because I'd rather enthusiastically air out my sweat-drenched boxers in front of the window all night. I've learned a lot here though, I found out what my 3-striper rank meant after having to ask my roommate (true story)! I'll be spending my future with my beloved jellyfish-stung girlfriend that I am a slave to. You own my soul, Brittany! Love you!

Travis Bridges

Surface Warfare Officer

Hails from Hollywood, Florida. While being raised by a single father, and having a serious obsession with Lego's and roasted marshmallows, no one thought he would end up at the United States Naval Academy. Survived four years of Navy football at the small weight of about 318 pounds. Many would say he's came a long way. He continues to make his family and friends proud (they are slightly surprised) on his accomplishments. He will be a Surface Warfare Officer.

Andrew Castro

Navy Pilot

From the simple town of Knoxville, Tennesee comes a simple man with a lifelong passion of sniffing glue and flying them fancy air-cars of the sky. Andrew Castro, a.k.a. Bakey-Bake, Bakius-Maximus, Auralius Bakius, Bakerson, McBakerson, back-that-booty-up-Bakey, or just plain old Jewdabake, has managed to sleep through 85% of his Naval Academy career. When he's not hibernating in his rack, Bakey prides himself on being a wizard at finding low quality, virus ridden, shakey-cam episodes of Merlin. From his crusty towel to his 4 year old sheets, it is hard to believe that the word 'hygiene' is in his vocabulary. However pungent his aroma, he will undoubtedly follow his dream of being a Naval Aviator as long as he has his faithful dozen alarms to wake him up in time to fly. We know he will make Tennesee proud, but honestly, how hard can that be?

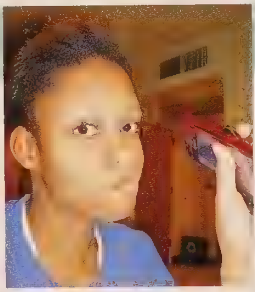
Nikolas Curry

Surface Warfare Officer

Hailing from Canada by way of Niagra, NY, this furry little bear made his way across the border in 1992. Over the past four years, he has spent the majority of his time playing World of Warcraft and designing fantasy worlds in Minecraft. When he is not stuffing his face with food, Nik can be found with his face buried deep into another man's crevasses as he dominates them… on the MMA mat. As a future SWOdaddy, we know he will fit right in with the odd sleeping habits and high intake of coffee. Let's all just hope there aren't any tall trees between the gate and his ship at the end of a long night. This kid has a large heart full of love for others, the kind of love that is as deep as he is round. Stay strong and beautiful. We will always accept what you are.

Zetta Don

Surface Warfare Officer



Zetta is a woman of few words, but the few words she does say are interesting. In the future may her choices be logical. She is loyal and loving to the few that are close to her. May the sea carry her where she needs to be.

Jonathan Driesslein

Submarines

Jonathan Driesslein is the Renaissance Man. Equally proficient in sailing the high seas, customizing his Miata convertible, or discussing the merits of Aristotle vs. Ayn Rand, he is a force to be reckoned with. Never guilty of following the beaten path, Jonathan truly stands out among his peers. Investigating the quality of his sailboat's safety gear, he launched himself overboard, confident he could rescue himself unassisted; he could not. Disregarding the expertise of professional mechanics, he applied his automotive skills by personally changing his oil. As an added safety measure he drained his transmission fluid as well. Such creative approaches to life's challenges surely will benefit him in the submarine community. We only hope that he won't treat the reactor like his transmission. Or crash the boat. Jonathan has always stood for what is true and just; you would be hard pressed to find a more loyal and valuable friend.

The reunion

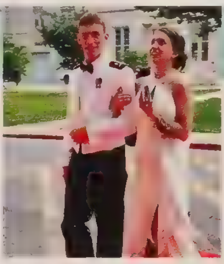
Max Dunn

SEALs

Commonly known among his friends as Fathead, Cerveza Head, or Cabeza Grande it is evident that he has one distinguishing feature and it is not his sweat soaked chest hair (which only the most fortunate have brushed up against at Acme). Max is charismatic, charming, and smart (waste of a head if he wasn't). Truly unique, he still finds a way to charismatically charm anyone he meets with the use of the Big D: "DUBAI!" Still, we love Max, and want him around....unless he is hungry, ordering food for you, telling us why he's a Maestro, or wishing he was as masculine and physically imposing at his roommate. By divine power Max resisted the daily Wes B track temptations and is a member of the 2% with Johnny Watson. His beautiful ex-GF broke his heart for his roommate, Keef Eckert. Also, October 2011 is a month of infamy for Fathead.

Zachary Eaton

USMC Ground



Hailing from West Virginia, Zachary Eaton, Esquire, heard, "Go West Young Man," and immediately ran in the opposite direction. Due to natural leanings that his hair imbued him with, he decided that the Naval Academy would be the place to go to prey on the most stressed out souls, despite his disconcerting ability to never act stressed himself. Zachary Eaton is living proof that one can simply glide your way through here, between his video games, shows, and denials to work out in the morning with his roommate. But don't let that make you think this man is lazy. No one will be quicker to help you out if you ask, hosting friends and whole camping groups at his house, leading the company Bible study, MQS, and working hard to help out his squad. The Naval Academy is proud to unleash this ginger on the Marine Corps.

Keith Eckert

SEALs

Keith went to the Naval Academy. That's about all anyone can say about his time here. He literally didn't do anything that is required to graduate from this place. He hated everyone. He even failed a class called, "Intro to Think." However what he lacked in academy performance he made up for with extracurricular activities. Co-founder of Latino-Heat, he has performed countless lap dances for drunken bachelorettes. He has stared in a movie called, "Cougar and Dude." Still, he has found time to sculpt the most defined pecs, and completely waste $32,000 on strippers and bad memories. His height has been an obstacle in his life. In his words, if he was 6'0" he would have been a "male model" or in the "League." But those are his predictions, because his cheeks are too fat and hands are too slow. I'll guess he'll have to settle with going to BUD/s.

Austin Gallegos

Navy Pilot

Al is a strange cat. He hates cats, and straws. But you hate mostly everything when your whole life's pursuit has been to change a mug into a doughnut. His second goal was to become a Navy SEAL, but his refusal to be trained by his roommates and close friends resulted in his cushy choice of aviation. His only joy in life is watching his tide roll each season... whatever that means. At the academy he devoted himself to the higher calling, League of Legends, until the fateful day that ol' Ward Hall scolded him for his greedy bandwidth nabbing. Due to his high level of performance, Austin was traded to 18th company. This also allowed him to continue to practice his baby voice with his significant other. Don't get me wrong, he is a great dude who is an admirable partner in the brewing business.

Thomas Greene

USMC Pilot

Mastergunnerysergeant Thomas Greene's four years by the bay undoubtedly prepared him for a career in the Corps. Have an opinion? Doesn't matter, you're irrelevant. Although he wouldn't notice you if you did. There's nothing he can't do with his tongue. A self-proclaimed master, you have to work with what you've got, right? Although the Academy eliminated shotgunning companies, it didn't stop Tom from moving to 17th Company. Apparently they were more appreciative of his outstanding vocals in the shower, his ability to impersonate any comedian, and his chewing habits. 3 minutes until dinner? That's more than enough private time. Speaking of time, every day is chest day and time is money. Tom never saw an item his dad wouldn't purchase. Such dedication will serve him well in the Corps. He is a great friend and as dependable as they come. We all hope to serve with you in the future.

Geoffrey Grooms

Information Corps

70% of the world is covered by water…80% of people live on or near the coast… 90% of commerce is done through the water….101% on watch. Wait…101%? That's right. It is with the highest honor to dedicate an entire percentage point to the diligence and steadfast leadership of MIDN Geoff Grooms. Whether it is his relentless commitment towards shaping up our USNA Women's Basketball Team, or always finding a way to add a little bit of swagger into the lives of whom he touches, Geoff is not what the Navy wants – he's what the Navy needs. Through the crazy weekends in D.C. and impromptu trips to other nearby universities – Geoff leaves behind the Swag Quarters (2338) and the academy with the truest piece of advice: "I've been at it since a youngin on the dolo – till I found my team and said bye to doin' it solo".

Sean Hunt

USMC Ground

One word to describe Sean Hunt's 4 years in Annapolis: commitment. In whatever he did he fully committed himself, including four years to the boxing team. While on the boxing team he was the captain his firstie year and won Brigades by knockout. He committed himself to boxing so much, in fact, that he experienced one of the most BRUTAL hernia surgery recoveries of all time. He was also committed to activities outside of the hall. He literally committed himself to the streets of Philly on Halloween. He committed himself to a four year relationship to his girlfriend. Their relationship was never stronger than on Ring Dance, even if she doesn't remember. Overall, Sean's unwavering commitment will serve him well in the Corps. He was a great roommate and an even better person. We all look forward to serving with you.

Olivia Kosaka

Surface Warfare Officer

Of all the people to get engaged first, nobody's bets were on Olivia. But for real. She's had her fair share of "friends," but her heart is just so big that she needed to fill it . . . at Sweetlife. Who knew the yellow fever would grab such a catch? She's the youngest of her friends, yet she is the most motherly of them all. She takes care of every one and makes them the most yummy food. Who remembers I-Ball? Plebe year? Youngster year? Spring break? Ring Dance? Olivia doesn't, maybe the rest of the Brigade can fill her in. Although she may not be commissioning, she'll make the greatest Marine wife and mother there ever was. Rah. The only loser in her life is the Navy.

Alexandra Lynch

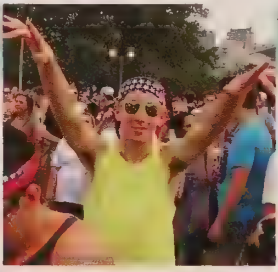
Surface Warfare Officer

Coming to a wardroom full of puppies and rainbows near you, Alex Lynch will drive on a train full of sunshine to her ship. She plans on being div-o for combat operations where she can install her baby-RADAR to detect cute infants at distances up to 3000 miles away. She hopes to be stationed in San Diego where her "not-boyfriend" is currently going training to be a Navy SEAL. When speaking in front of her division, hopefully she will be able to control her predisposition to turn bright red, when talking to any group of people. But Alex is the type of friend to put others before herself, her smile will brighten your day, and the SWO community is lucky to have her!

William Mayo

Navy Pilot

From the heart of God's country, the Republic of Texas, comes a vertically challenged man that likes to fall gracefully into small aquatic areas and be judged for it. Little is known about his private activities, however. He often likes to be a clam, staying in his room watching Laguna Beach and other shows that have no right being on the air. In addition to repeatedly being denied love by a certain New Mexican, Wil (Big Willy) Mayo enjoys long walks on the beach and protecting his precious "Keurig" coffee maker from his vandal roommates. Wil hopes to make a name for himself in Pensacola by becoming a Naval Aviator and gummy bear enthusiast. We know he'll excel no matter which platform he chooses, as long as he stays on his toes. Room 2437 will miss your hairy body and jive pillow talk.



Dylan McCrea

Submarines

Who even reads the Lucky Bag? Not Dylan. Chances are he's at the local drinking establishment, even if his family is in town. He never met a party he didn't like or a girl he didn't love. If only he could've connected with a female the same way he connected chairs with swimming pools. Not many people would testify on behalf of Dylan's optimistic attitude. They couldn't. It doesn't exist. Often labeled a Debbie Downer, Dylan was known to hate anything and anybody who existed on the Yard. Pilot? No. Sub EDO? No. Plebe Summer Ops? No. Such rejection could knock the most confident man to his knees, but Dylan remained his ole pessimistic self. Trust us, everyone knew about how much his luck sucked. Regardless, such flexibility will serve Dylan well in the Fleet. He is a great friend and will make an even better officer. Semper Deep.

Forres McGraw

SEALs

In war, there are no time-outs. Good thing Forres Ian McGraw doesn't take timeouts. Between snack breaks and reading SEAL porn, you can find this towering Texan being super tactical on the Combat Arms Team. A good ole boy with a taste for country music and green-eyed girls, Ian is a loyal friend and a fighter. He's come a long way from being the fat, shy kid in middle school and has an exciting future ahead of him. God Bless Texas.

Nicholas Moilanen

USMC Ground

Nicholas Robert Moilanen, the Cyclone of Navy Ultimate, is truly a global citizen. Though he speaks Chinese fluently, he'll greet you in the hall with a Texan "Howdy!" Next to Texas, Nick prides himself on his illustrious Finnish heritage, pursuing the language in his free time and educating his friends on Finland's wealth of international accolades and military bad-asses. Ask him where Santa lives. Despite striving to thrive outside of the standard Naval Academy system, he still took time to grace the Plebes as Train-O and Sea Trials CC. Oceanographer, Wilderness EMT, Sky Diver, Traveler, Scuba Diver, Economist, Moderator, Leatherneck Vet, Magic Hands, Nick has taken every opportunity USNA has offered to experience life. Defying all odds and successfully beating the SARB, Nick is on his way to be a Devil Dog. Honorary member of the class of 2015, "Meng-ke" is sure to excel wherever life leads him next.

Jacob Neal

Navy Pilot

There's never been a fart that Jake hasn't laughed at. If only everyone else had the same reaction to his organic monstrosities. He loves the prospect of hitting on women he idolizes, but his luck with women is identical to his luck with street performers. Whether it be a friendly facebook message to a European violin player or a genius one liner to the milf love of his life, they never seem to take the Oklahoma bait. Maybe he'd have better luck if he ever went out. Often times he'd rather just eat hummus and listen to Dave Matthews. His weeks of sobriety, however, are followed by intense bouts of excessive drinking, often times leading to his head in a trashcan or naked in a bathtub with his last request: "Get Sean." Jake is an extremely hard worker and a great friend. He will fly high as a Navy pilot.

Kathleen O'Brien

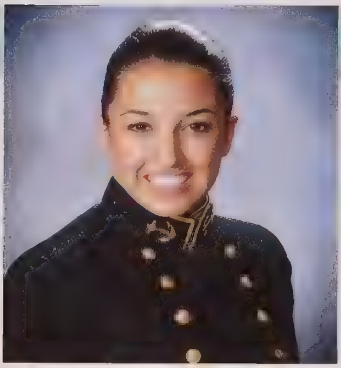
USMC Pilot

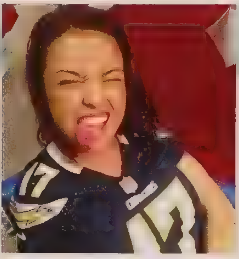
Bro, do you even lift? Because Katie does, and she probably squats more that you do. When she's in Mac D, she can be found with her pole handler as they worship the temple that is his body. As a future yut-bag, she is already struggling to maintain a motivated bun #yut. A history major who studies like she in Group 1, she still finds plenty of time to devote to her friends and company mates. This New Jersey babe is a great person, a wonderful friend and is going to be a great Marine.

Daniel Park

Surface Warfare Officer

AKA Wu-Tang, Park was born in the heart of rap music, Queens, New York. He lives by the rap music and loves his rap music. He loves his rap music so much, he thinks he's blacker actual black people. He loves sleeping, especially sleeping through formations and classes. He also loves his korean girls although he can never get one. He never does his homework everyday but he never forgets to make racist jokes and remind his roommates how fat and smelly they are. Although he has never been good at driving a ship, hopefully the time he spent with the YPs would help someday. "Wu-Tang Clan ain't nuthin to #&$@ with" -Wu-Tang Clan-





Sydnee Percival

USMC Ground

Sydnee Percival came to the Naval Academy following a brief yet eventful year in Newport, RI. Her interests include running pants, hashtags, and the sprint football team. She was a member of Navy Women's Volleyball Team during her plebe year; however, you will never find this ex-varsity athlete in Mac D. When she wasn't mixing potions in the basement of Michelson, this NARP spent all of her time in Wes Brown training for the Marine Corps. If her fitness level didn't give that away, her slicked back hair certainly did. It is a wonder to her roommates how she managed to make friends with nearly everyone at school during her four short years here considering the long hours she spent at her desk during study period. That hard work paid off though because she has managed to watch every movie on her Netflix account at least twice, while still earning her chemistry degree.

Austin Price

USMC Ground

Spongebob Squarepants once famously asked, "Who needs dumb old Texas?" And in his best Squidward Tentacles voice, Austin Price responded. Dallas' favorite son made a name for himself in Annapolis by pushing himself and those around him to their absolute physical limits. Not even a semester of civilian living in Georgia could keep this motivator from fulfilling his destiny as 18th Company Training Officer. Most nights, Austin can be found wandering company spaces, popping in to friends' rooms and providing a welcome distraction to those of us who and have actual homework. He spends his free time ground fighting, and his signature move is having thirty pounds on whomever he fights. Austin is bound to inspire the Marines he will command, and his 18th Company family is excited to see him succeed at the next level.

Justin Roberts

Navy Pilot

I take two steps forward and then I fall of track. Placing my faith in the Lord without looking back. This journey full of pitfalls, it vexes me still. Humbles me greatly as I open up And submit to His will.

Four years have now gone by and it's plain to see, I was meant for this place and it was meant for me. Many seasons have passed and fond memories faded. You can surely guarantee on May 23 I'm elated. Once I step off the stage and place USNA in rear, I'm going to reflect on my dear grandfathers and their distinguished careers. One Munford Point marine and two army, they served with great distinction and pride. Here I am in 2014. What a blessed ride.

Brandon Romero

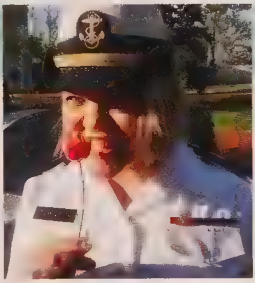
Surface Warfare Officer

How can I describe this man, Funny, Wild, Sweet and the list goes on. I cant believe this year is coming to a close. In just 4 short years this guy has been by my side through thick and thin. I've seen this guy at his worst, like face in toilet bad. But, I've also seen this guy at his best, running the Filipino American club, doing speeches in D.C., and hearing about his accomplishments in London. Full of freakin life this guy is! The only guy that can put me a choke hold and I know he is kidding. The only dude that can smack my headphones off and know he was just playing around. Ro will always be my lil Chihuahua, barking away and making me smile all the time! Even if he looks me in the eye and calls me Geoff, or tells me that "You don'

Karina Schmidt

Surface Warfare Officer

A former dark shark, who was finally satisfied by the white meat, our great friend will be tying the knot after graduation. Unfortunately, this creative artist has been repressed, forcing her to fill every inch of her notebooks with doodles of Mr. and Mrs. Howard. She's headed out to the surface warfare community, but her voluptuous assets won't prevent her from executing safe ship navigation. Her safety-cushion hugs, really make your day, and her caring nature puts a smile on everyone's face.



Frederick Shaak

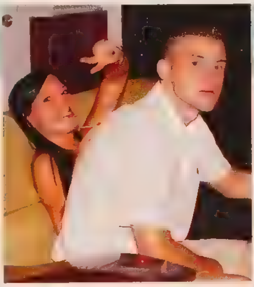
Navy Pilot

A Trident, Marshall, and Rhodes scholar? Cured cancer? Solved world hunger? Member of the varsity soccer, fieldball, and tennis teams? Impossible is nothing. Not for Fred. While he did not do any of the aforementioned things, there is no doubt he could have. Fred's much too chill for that though. Shabooya. My name is Fred. Yeah. And I am chill. Yeah. My name is Fred. Yeah. And I'm still chill. He's proficient at the harmonica, piano, guitar, and banjo… all at the same time. He never met a Netflix series he didn't like. He would know, he's completed them all. Fred's time at the Academy has been filled with success without any necessary effort. He's considered a natural and will no doubt succeed in whatever he decides to pursue.

Kennedy Trotter

Surface Warfare Officer

"This ya boy Kennedy Gage Trotter the King of the water" a white boy that could spit fire with the best of em at the rap battles. You've come a long way from being that extra LOUD Texan telling all of your wild stories plebe year, to Georgetown...,to breaking swimming records, going to Olympic trials, actually training the plebes a very, very little bit, to now heading to Florida to be a SWO Daddy. Think about it, we could have actually been marines if we could wake up at 0500 for the PFT last year but bump that. Love you man. Kill it out there. Pow Pow.



Giorgi Tsurtsumia

Georgian Ministry of Defense

Giorgi Tsurtsumia, hailing from Georgia (the country, not the state!), has been a beloved member of the 18th Company family since his arrival four years ago. After gaining fame during plebe summer with his Honey Bear antics, Gega has thrived at the Academy in every aspect. Fluent in Georgian, Russian, English (his third language!) German, and Turkish, this guy is clearly way smarter than the rest of us, and his success in Ocean Engineering is a testament to this fact. This Georgian Bear is also a world-class water polo player, though thankfully he doesn't strut around in his speedo too often. After graduation, Gega will return to his homeland in the Caucasus, where he will serve his country in the Georgian Ministry of Defense.

Alexander Turitzin

Navy Pilot

This Taylor Lautner look-alike goes by the name of Alex Turitzin. But when he is hunting in the local bars, he goes by the name of Sasha - a derivative of his Russian-Mongolian-New Jersian heritage. But when this little wolf isn't chasing the ladies, he is hitting the gym. Everyday is leg day and we can all agree that he has one of the finest asses in 18th company.

Matthew Van Halanger

Surface Warfare Officer

Alexander Yachanin

Submarines

Excelencia. Eficiencia. Perfección. These are just a few palabras from Chile to describe the infallible, globe-trotting Alexander Stuart Yachanin. Brigade-renowned for his 4.0 and adorable dimples, Mr. Yachanin has been spotted by many roaming the halls reorganizing recycling bins and informing the owners of their misdeeds. When not hunting for environmentally unfriendly recycling fiends [mostly his roommates], Mr. Yachanin is known for going to bed ungodly early in order to row lightweight crew as the sun rises on the Severn. Need Ocean Engineering tutoring? You better swing by before dusk or the highest grade you're getting on that is a C. On a more serious note, the Navy is lucky to have Alex. Not only will he be a competent, dedicated submarine officer, but he is probably going to save the world through renewable energy. The sky's the limit with this one, or should I say the blue ocean deep?

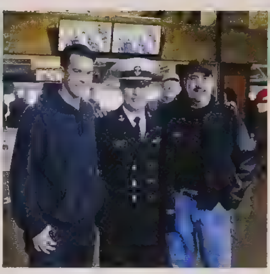
Austin Arino



Surface Warfare Officer

Austin Arino will always be remembered for his polite and calm demeanor. He is one the most caring people I know and is always putting the best interest of the underclass before his own. If there are two things he is best known for, it is his love of computers and the Star Wars lightsaber battles in the Hall when we need to unwind the most.

Juan Barba-Jaume

Surface Warfare Officer

Juan Jose Barba-Jaume (but since nobody can pronounce his name, we call him JJ) is gifted with a quick wit and not-annoying sense of humor, but his best attribute is his compassion. Whenever not studying for tests or writing essays weeks in advance, JJ sought to brighten everyone's day with his kind remarks and encouraging actions. His selfless sensitivity saved many shipmates from the perils of the Dark Ages and alleviated the woes of many troubled midshipmen. His sense of empathy is so expansive that it took years for us to figure out the deep and sincere source of his compassion. Rooted in his devotion to the Philadelphia Eagles, JJ is routinely wounded by his team's performance. In an effort to ensure that no person shall endure pain as deep as this, he transforms this grief into motivation. This benevolent man is a saint.

Benjamin Berkey

Submarines

"If not me, then who?" — Travis Manion

The sentiment behind this quotation has driven Benjamin Berkey's career at USNA. From Plebe to Firstie, Ben never shied away from responsibility. Ben took on many leadership roles: from Brigade Training Sergeant to Company Commander, to becoming the Brigade Executive Officer. Ben also excelled academically within his major of Systems Engineering. Ben excelled within his role as Director of Hockey Operations for the Academy's Hockey team while learning the value of working alongside close friends. These friendships will last a lifetime. At heart Ben is a big teddy bear. His signature trademark was his nightly phone call with his beautiful fiancée Christine Haggerty. Ben and Christine worked hard to become members of the exclusive 2% club. Ben is becoming a submarine officer, but the memories and friendships made at USNA will stay with him — even when he's 20,000 leagues under the sea!

Bryce Boyer

Surface Warfare Officer

Any person who has met Bryce Boyer knows instantly that they have just encountered perhaps the most interesting individual they will ever meet. Philosopher, philanderer, life coach, libertarian, mentor, model, economist, and dear friend, Bryce has always been there for anyone who needed him. His easy-going, gregarious nature sometimes masked his truly deep rooted individual determination to succeed in every task he assigns himself. His apparent goofiness is a mere manifestation of his extreme love of life. Bryce is out to have a damn good time, jump on every opportunity the world has to offer him, and swoop in and captivate the girl you just spent the whole night working on. Most of us are just bystanders in Bryce's world, but a privileged few of us have stood at his side and survived a night with the one they call Fireball Bryce.

Jacqueline Chimiak

Navy Pilot

Jackie Chimiak aka "Jay Quellin" or "Jay Chims" is THAT guy. She's THAT guy who will bail on plans last minute or leave you promptly at 1600 to go on a run but will always make it up to you 10x over. She's that friend you can't stay mad at because you have important stuff to tell her. And she is, and always will be, the best friend I'll ever have. "Best Freyend" may not have done the best on her exam to get pilot but... good thing everyone wanted to go SWO this year! This Oceanography major [lame] knows many secrets about many people because everyone can trust and love her without reservation. She's best known however for her two equal loves in life: a love for pretty much anything unhealthy and running. How that works, the world will never know. Pensacola, hide your baked goods.

Jean-Luc Currie

USMC Ground

Although thousands of individuals graduate from the Naval Academy, each one can be categorized into one of a few types: there are the malleable ones molded by academy life, the brittle ones that are crushed by the pressure, and liquid ones that passively go through the motions. Then, there are a few who manage to press back against the insurmountable might of the institution in order to leave their own mark. Jean-Luc Currie was one of the latter. He put on the weighty six stripes of Brigade Commander hopefully at first, only to be relieved at the end of the semester when he was told he could go back to the plow. Yet the deeds accomplished on high are not his true legacy. He will be remembered for his friendships around the Brigade and his genuine care for others. The green team chose well; he will be a great Marine.

Jack Dembowski

Surface Warfare Officer

Dembooooo. Sports. Whether it's sitting in his underwear playing FIFA, sitting in his underwear playing Battlefield, or just sitting in his underwear, no one has accomplished so much wearing so little. And if you think he's good at ditching clothes, wait until he's starts to ditch people! Boy I tell ya, he's the modern day Houdini. Dembones was the king of useless sports knowledge and his home state, Georgia. Not all people can claim to have been closer to the moms of DC like he can. As a Surface Warfare Officer, Jack will continue to positively influence the lives of everyone who is fortunate enough to work with him.

Ryan Demers

Navy Pilot

Ryan DeMers grew up on a little bitty mountain top in the San Bernandino mountain range. Much like the county of San Bernandino, Ryan was voted most likely to go bankrupt due to his spending habits. His love for wafting farts into your face, playing Rift, and unsuccessful San Diego sports teams has led to a world of heartache, but his loyalty towards his teams parallels the bonds he shares with his friends. Known as the "Once a Week Showerer," Ryan sets the bar for personal hygiene and fashion sense. Ryan has always been an ambitious fellow, one who strives to set the record for most consecutive days wearing the same underwear, and most workouts completed without a single squat. As an aviator, Ryan's work ethic will pay off, if not on the golf course, then most definitely in the air.

Andrew Felton

Submarines

A guy who usually loses arguments and doesn't realize it until a survey has been taken. A guy that has been nicknamed "Grandpa" for his early nights and cheap dates. He was spotted at a festival walking 4 miles to save 20 cents on beer. He was one of the smartest people in the Brigade, but his chair nine haircuts made him look a little slow. Andy's claim to fame was established in a video where he admitted to consuming a beverage with the street name "paaaaannk drank." If he's not golfing, you can find him in MacD doing sets of push-ups and sit-ups, and if you miss it you will likely hear about it in vivid detail afterwards. Despite his flaws, however, he's an essential piece to any guys' night out. Andy will be successful in anything he pursues and the Sub Force is lucky to have him.

John Founds

Nuclear Surface Warfare

The best way to judge John's mood would have be his smile, of which he has two very distinct options; A: None or B: an ear to ear projection or happiness like Jose Cuervo and Johnnie Walker are having a tug a war with the corners of his mouth. Unfortunately, no matter his mood you'll have to deal with some of his "Philly Thug," spare no expense, you better grab some thick skin lotion, kind of humor. Hard headed and opinionated as he can be he has become one of the most genuine people you'll ever meet and even better friend. If you're lucky enough to call John a friend you can be happy to know you have a friend for life. SWO(N) is lucky to have him. L.S.C. '14

Steven Frazier

Naval Flight Officer

Steven Frazier is the definition of a refined southern gentleman. You can often find this native Georgian wearing cowboy boots with a large belt buckle, complaining about how a truck should always be dirty, or chatting with his pretty southern-belle girlfriend. While at the Academy he has double-majored in Political Science and sleeping; and let me tell you, he excelled at both. As a member of the Varsity Rifle Team Steven became an All-American his 2/C year and has served with distinction as our team captain this past year. He will soon be heading to Pensacola to catch some rays and fly little planes. All lucky enough to know Steven agree that the fleet is about to receive a wonderful NFO. We will miss his long southern drawl, infectious humor, and his huge heart. Fair winds and following seas my friend.

Robert Gay

Navy Pilot

Rob has continually impressed everyone in 19th company with his talents, whether it is with his ability to multitask between watching Family Guy and playing World of Warcraft, redecorating his desk after a night in DTA, or his ability to sleep 18 hours straight. Rob will take his love of White Russians and beer (and any alcohol honestly) to Pensacola, where he will train to be a Navy Pilot (aka professional drinker). While he won't be able to camp out in Charlie's until minutes before Gate 1 closes or get Steerage pizza every night of the week, Rob will no doubt have some good times in Florabama.

Michael Gonzales

USMC Ground

What could be said about Mike that anyone would actually care enough about to write down? BLUF: Mike could easily be someone's grandfather. His particularly plain exterior hid an ancient, crotchety, and decrepit spirit that quickly earned him a reputation as someone you should pity. As Mike was nearly blind, he relied mainly on his sense of hearing to navigate using echolocation. Unfortunately, his hearing was even worse than his sight, which is what led to his death during plebe summer. Luckily for him, Mike's illogical but indomitable bull-headedness allowed him to overcome even death, as he refused to believe our cries of disbelief when he returned to the company just one day after his body was fished out of the Severn. Hopefully all those years of wearing a flat-top as a child will pay off, although I'm sure you will make a great elderly Colonel immediately upon graduation.

Kai Hall

USMC Pilot

Honest, blunt, and tall Kai Hall stands fast, admits the swelling tides of his past, as self made as a man may be, his rise is as a beacon that all might see. Throughout the yard he struggled and sparred to keep himself SAT, lean, and hard. The best of friends in the darkest of times, he'll work to get you through the rough and the grime. Through weapons, through training he led from the front, now he aspires to be a Devil runt. But not a dog of the sea or land, but the sky is his end and that he will rend, be it propellers, rotors, or jets they may send. May he never change a day in his life, in aerial support of whomever in strife. The best of luck in all he endeavors, be his end Heaven, Hell or whatever!

Christopher House

Submarines

Chris was initiated into our room after a Eurotrip with Guth-daddy, where he earned the nickname "mousse chug." Chris "Topher" House had a love for large bulbous chins which I could never quite rap my head around. Hailing from the state of North Carolina, Chris was sure to let everyone know that he was smarter than his detailers, even going so far as to personally notify one of them. Whether studying, playing golf, or watching videos of men lifting heavy things, whatever he was doing you could always be sure it would be boring as hell. Academic NARP, Bowman and Trident scholar, and sub select, Chris earned many accolades during his time at the academy, but what mattered to him most was the close personal friendship he made with Alejandro which will surely stand the tests of time. Good luck for the future, you'll go far but never fly. REDRUM

Zachary Ingold

Surface Warfare Officer

Zach, Zingaling, Zingle-McCringleberry, or Zingold as he is most commonly referred, is truly a one-of-a-kind individual. He was born with an extra dose of passion, and his fire and ice mood swings will leave any rational person perplexed as they wonder why the door came unhinged in the middle of the night after a simple butt-slap. However, this same attitude has enabled him to become one of the most decorated swimmers in Navy history, and will make him an asset in the surface Navy. If he is not laughing at every show on Netflix, one might see him whiz by on his bike, or catch a whiff of his Tex-Ass fart spray from down the hall. There is no limit to the adventures that will be had by Zach in the years to come.

Mary Jordan

Navy Pilot

Mary, Carter, Jordan, we're still not really sure which one is her real first name. Although a native of Texas, this cowgirl prefers kittens to longhorns. We fully expect her to own at least ten cats (she is no "Lone" star) by the time our reunion comes around, and she will be purrrrfectly happy. After all, she will have to replace the 26 Katz that currently occupy her life. As the captain of the cross-country team, MC acted as a valiant circus ringleader, quite literally herding Katz. As she leaves this post, we are proud to announce that her future Navy career will be taking her to sunny Pensacola. This came as no surprise to her family as she is the fourth Jordan Pilot. But those Jordan boys had better watch out, we have every confidence that she will blow them out of the water...or the sky. Stop, Hammer time.

Martin Kwong

Naval Flight Officer

Martin Kwong is LOVE. He's like an innocent soul; trapped in a cruel, cruel world. "It's all an evil ploy of the world against you, isn't it Martin?" "Yeah, man… definitely." In other words, Martin gets flustered easily. But watch out! Because if you try to fluster Martin in my presence I'll defend his boyish innocence to the death. That's MY roommate to make fun of. (He makes a pretty darned good one I'll mention). Anyways, what I really want to say is that Martin is Asian. Oops, I meant to say he's "culturally sensitive and loves fine cuisine." He comes from humble beginnings, but he loves his family, and is genuinely one of the nicest people I know. So I know without a doubt he'll make a damned good Naval Flight Officer. If you only take one thing away from this, just remember- "It's chill bro."

Eric Lies

Nuclear Surface Warfare

I, Eric Lies, sallied forth from the womb November 2nd, 1991 and immediately began wowing the world with my unabashedly good looks and rapier quick wit. I didn't always know I wanted to sell my soul to Rickover and join the nuclear navy: I had aspired to be a wandering troubadour and writer, commonly known as a hobo. I regret nothing, however, and am proud to have people who pretend to be my friends in public like Andrew Sawyer and Kai Hall. Champions among men. I enjoy long walks with pretty women and know my way amongst the performing arts, one normally leading to the other. So I've been known to wear banana hammocks and say silly things… it's just part of the territory of Supreme Chancellor of Masqueraders. They only gave me 150 words for this, but if you're looking for a good time, give me a call at-

Michael Love

USMC Ground

An accomplished wrestler, Mike is the largest person to ever be diagnosed with "Little man syndrome," as he sometimes forgets that it is not socially acceptable to grapple his friends into submission as they attempt to do their homework. Nonetheless, he is an essential part of any night on the town, and he goes to great lengths to ensure that everyone has a good time. A man who is always looking a for a good time, Mike has never missed a round of golf with the guys, and he can probably count on one hand the number of weekends that he didn't make an appearance at Acme. A friend of everyones' Mike will do big things in the Marine Corps and whatever he decides to pursue after.

Kash Manzelli

Intelligence

Kash "Self" Manzell, not to be confused with Matt "Self" Kilby, is the left handed hitting first baseman for, and captain of, the baseball team. Also the most sarcastic person you will ever meet. LIT-ER-ALLY. With arguably the best hair in the Brigade (head and chest), Kash constantly found himself being the poster child of "What Not to Do" PowerPoints around the yard regarding haircuts. If you're looking for Kash, chances are he's asleep and late for something. His bed would be a good place to start, but don't forget that elevator at that partment building in Philadelphia…or that random porch in DTA. No matter how bad his day was, Kash was always down to split a beer tube which is proof of his loving personality. In conclusion, the Intelligence community is getting a special Officer with the addition of Kash who is truly a phenomenal teammate and friend. #TSM

James McDaniel

SEALs

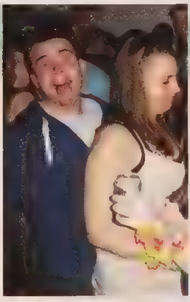
A space cadet of the highest order, Jim Tyler McDaniel is a man with drive. This drive deposited young James at the United States Naval Academy. Jim arrived at the Academy with the intent of spending his four years on the club rugby team. Unfortunately for Jim, he was cut from the team after just a week, mostly for a complete and utter lack of athletic ability. With characteristic resilience, Jim bounced back, instead focusing on being a nerd with a penchant for working out. As his ambition and drive would have it, Jim was selected for the Naval Special Warfare community. Sam Houston once said, "Texas has yet to learn submission to any oppression, come from what source it may." As a true son of Texas, Jim lives by this standard, neither balking at the judgment of other's nor the pressure of society. The Navy is lucky to receive such a tough, lovable, goober.

Nnamdi Moh

Surface Warfare Officer

His laugh has been heard at distances up to a mile away, and his smile seen from space. After Hootie and the Blowfish denied his request to join the band for their reunion tour in 2009, Nnamdi decided to attend the US Naval Academy, and 19th company is sure glad he did. While his roommates can be found applying Bernoulli's equation to the conservation of energy in a converging diverging nozzle, Nnamdi has been known to keep himself busy studying Political Science by coloring of maps and referencing worldstarhiphop.com for the latest world events. His favorite pastimes include listening to 90's alternative, studying fashion, impulse buying, and observing zoo animals. A true innovator, he engineered the all-popsicle diet, one that is sure to become a fad when people realize his genius. A friend of everyone's, he will be an asset to any wardroom of which he is a part.

John Nowell



Navy Pilot

John "Johnny" Blackwelder Nowell III will be sorely missed in 19th company. During his time at USNA, Johnny exemplified the expression "work hard, play hard," as evidenced by the fact that he continued to do homework even during second semester firstie year and had only opened Netflix for the first time this semester. While he did love to do schoolwork and would go to extraordinary lengths to avoid doing anything fun, Johnny will continue his hobby of excessive drinking in Pensacola as a future Navy pilot. During the weekends he spent the majority of his time getting "Blackweldered" and falling down stairs. What's most important is that he continued to drink, even after a concussion and subsequent trip to the hospital. Even after all those shenanigans, he might yet turn out to be a great officer! You stay classy, Johnny Nowell.

Alexander Ortiz

Navy Pilot

Mr. Ortiz aka The Commandant aka The Tiz aka "Sir, Admiral General, sir" comes to us from either Puerto Rico or New York or Hershey, none of us really know, and neither does he. Son of an 91' grad, this "sweetheart" has always wanted to live the candy-coated life of being a pilot, wooing women on shores both foreign and domestic. Alex can almost always be found on his face... in his rack that is, talking with Chesty Puller about new ways to motivate himself... or just sleeping. Unless you are an attractive woman, expect him to be late for just about anything, including buses to important performances. Alex's larger than life personality always brings joy to a room and he guarantees laughter with every interaction. This owner of a devilish grin and words smooth as Hershey's chocolate, Alex Ortiz is one helluva guy. Semper Fidelis; You're a good kid.

Samuel Peterson

Naval Flight Officer

"Jokes on you 19, these belts are fire retardant!" And from that moment on Sam Vic Slammy Slamwise Peterson was one of our own, for better or worse. Sam was always in pursuit of becoming the ultimate Renaissance man: he talked sports, politics, economics, history and whiskey with equal ease. He was a maestro in the kitchen, a superhero on the squash court and a genius on the golf course. He endeared himself to us as he stalked the deck in his matching Navy exercise suits, offering bits of wisdom on whatever idea happened to be floating through his unstoppable mind. You could always count on him for a cup of coffee . . . or a perfectly timed awkward comment. Some pilot is in for the ride of his life with Vic as his NFO.

Kristin Rovito

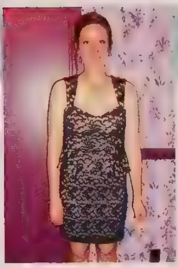
Surface Warfare Officer

Thank goodness Kristin is a Surface Warfare Officer because the term, "SWO Mama" was coined for her. She has always been a mama cat who takes care of her kittens, from the biggest macho man in company to the tiniest of her roommates (all 8 of them over 4 years). She donates her time and energy to the Academy and the Annapolis community and makes a mean sandwich for any poor, starving midshipman who shuffles into her room. But Kristin's generosity and maternal instincts don't overshadow this sassy kitty. Just like the cats she loves so much, this girl has claws. So when you see her strutting down the DTA "Runway," or living it up in San Diego, looking fabulous, don't get on her bad side.

Aleksandra Sawyer

USMC Ground

Who would have thought that the girl who lost her voice halfway through Plebe Summer would turn out to be one of the greatest people ever? Some may ask how on earth she survived, but it is obviously a testament to her and all she stands for. Throughout her time by the bay, she has proven herself as a tough and dangerous devil pup as well as a compassionate and willing friend. This future Marine will assuredly do anything she wants in life and do so successfully. After all, who else can jump out of their rack 5 minutes before anything and look stellar? Despite toughing it out playing Navy Rugby for three years, don't let that fool you. This girl has a soft heart, incredible insight to life, and such a strong dedication to her friends and family. As she enters this new chapter in her life, we wish her the best of luck, the brightest future, and the fullest glass.



Lauren Schmiegel

Nuclear Surface Warfare

When she isn't tightening her bun or preparing for nuke school, Lauren collects her weekly receipts and focuses on Naval Academy tasks, referring to her daily agenda and agenda's agenda, which for the most part are always marked up at least a month in advance. You can almost bet she's preparing for the upcoming exam in four weeks or counseling someone. Her love and faith are two characteristics which distinguish her from the rest of the world. If able, Lauren would move a mountain for anyone. A natural role model and mentor to all who have been blessed to cross her path, there are nights when she would prefer to sacrifice hours of sleep in order to solve someone else's problems. In terms of faith, Lauren is a rock. She could convince a heathen to do well, simply based on her actions alone. Upon assuming Company Commander of 19th Company Lauren quickly set out to establish the philosophy "Living for your Legacy". Little did she know she had established that philosophy long ago. Always a friend and someone anyone could count on, USNA was lucky to have had a dedicated young lady transfer from Binghamton. Her beauty is ever youthful, her words wise and comforting.

Kieran Simonson

Navy Pilot

Mooner. Moondawg. Moonshine. Moonbiscuit. Kungfu-Panda. Skrimp. When not busy telling you how you're doing something wrong, you can find him slaying n00bz, playing his pipes, and being deceptively athletic. Misunderstood at times, he resembles a hotheaded potato when he might disagree with you. Despite his goofy demeanor, Mooner is an extremely loyal friend and roommate, and will make a stellar Navy Pilot in the fleet. We love you buddy, see you on the other side.

Riacca Slater

USMC Ground

The girl with a thousand names, only half of which are on her birth certificate. This girl has a nickname from each of the friends she has made during her time at the Academy. And each one, from Ponyo to Shorty, suits her well. But do not be fooled by her tiny, docile, sweet and Asian/Pacific Islander appearance. She is a beast; from the rugby pitch, to school, to countless ECAs and everything in between. Stanford – party animals trapped in Capt Smith's van. Las Vegas – OHHH discovering that she is a light weight. Florida- baby's got fullback! She is also the only one ever be excused from ice baths…Who is allergic to ice? Lol. Her optimistic and joyful attitude combined with her intense passion and drive for what she does and the relationships she has, make her the infamous Ponyo. God has blessed the Marine Corps with this one.

Angelique Sturdifen

USMC Pilot

Where do I start?! B.A.Bs, "Worry 'bout your d self!", late-night freak-out sessions, casual strolls around Smoke Hall at 0545, that afternoon at Waves and other salons, tag-teaming Plebe Summer, our (forced) breakup, ...the braids, pottery dates, wine dates! (stay tuned for more additions to this list in many years to come!) A big moment in Ange's time at USNA was one afternoon in Waves when she took the "firstie chop" to a new level...and not to mention a year early! Never ceases to amaze others on how adventurous she is! Looking for Ange? Try the weight room workin' on that bod! Being with her always turns into an ab workout because the laughter never stops. The most loyal person around, she puts her heart and soul into every friendship. Here's to you Ange, our aviator motivator! YUT! OORAH!

Heidi Swanson

USMC Ground

Heidi Swanson hails from the great state of Texas. Her big personality has kept her very involved at school. She has been part of the Musical and Halloween concert all 4 years of school. She is one of the most hardworking members of Glee Club, but that does not mean she will not play hard, especially when packing up at the end of a tour in Hawaii. When she is not 'tispy' she spends her free time painting pottery and playing Nintendo 64. She has also mastered planning a wedding solely through Pinterest. Her dedication and loyalty to extracurricular activities and friends will make her a great Marine.

Brandon Swindler

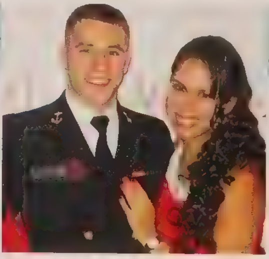
Navy Pilot

"Yoooooooo, what up what up, it's ya boyyy, Bswin." If he died tomorrow, this is the phrase he'd want on his casket. From his addiction to supplements, to his uncandid ability to change his mind just about every other day, Bswin is an inspiration to all. He's a simple man; a bottle of noxival and a good lift is all he needs. In the process of discovering himself at the Academy, Bswin found his artistic side and joined the art club for one day. During that day, he drew a circle that might be seen in museums someday. If this wasn't a sign that artistry was his calling, his days as a foot model were proof enough. Too bad his craigslist modeling agent was a serial killer. When his classmates think of the good ol' days at the Academy, Brandon's name will be at the root of any funny story.

Thomas Uyttebroek

Navy Pilot

This future aviator hails from the forgotten state of Rhode Island. Not one to sugarcoat anything, you can always trust Tom's word. Over the past 4 years at this institution on the severn, Tom has developed into a quick witted professional. This has become evident over many drinks at Fed house. Even when entirely intoxicated, Tom will use pilot hand signals such as "pull chocks" to signify his departure. When not intoxicated, Tom can be seen near the yacht's dragging inebriated midshipmen back to their rooms. A romantic and a scholar, Tom has little time for ignorance and is one to let you know that. He looks forward to a career in Naval Aviation, and could not be happier about changing his mind about the SWO life.



Luke Walsh

USMC Ground

Along with countless features of his personality, Luke Walsh has a walk that can be spotted miles away. His physical fitness, mental toughness and ferocity are unforgettable. He's a Marine select and one of the very few who enjoys running the Obstacle Course back-to-back 10 plus times. He plays every sport he can. Luke's intellect is also unforgettable. His major is ocean engineering, but he also speaks French well, and spent 2 months in India for the Critical Languages Studies Program where he studied Punjabi. He enjoys playing with legos, training plebes and pretending he's a frat star. He is a member of the 2% club as well. Luke Walsh, you lucky bastard, Fatima Guillen is an angel.

Benjamin Wright

USMC Ground

Ben "Babylegs" Wright was known in 19th Company for getting big and drinking. That's about it really. Unfortunately for him there's no Mangia's in Quantico. Good luck becoming a Marine without their loving support and ample supply of alcohol. Being an English major always gave Ben plenty of time to play video games and generally goof off, which was great practice for the future since he will surely be unemployed for most of his adult life. He hated his roommates and they hated him, pretty much everyone did; eat it Mike and JJ. I don't know how any of them survived living with each other for four terrible years, but somehow they all did it; assuming JJ wasn't kicked out after this was written. Good luck in the coming years, I know you'll make at least a decent Marine officer. The end.

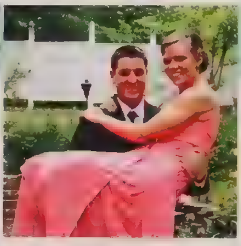
Payton Alsup

Submarines

Payton, better known as Peanut33Nuts4Jesus, was raised in the Deep South, as a white, god fearing, Anglo, Pro-test-ant. He is very suave with the ladies, but even more so with the many eligible bachelors around Bancroft. His brief stint on Christian Mingle, led to many suitable Christian ladies, yet he prefers to play the role of "Mr. Steal Your MAN". He loves to read, the first 20 pages of any book, but that's it. This is a product of his many hit and run obsessions ranging from backgammon to classical chamber music. All in all, he is a cultured (???), southern gentleman, self-proclaimed world renowned chef, who is down for a finger lickin' good time.



Audrey Bauer

Surface Warfare Officer

Audrey Elisabeth Bauer. The single most awkward athletic person to ever walk the earth. Seriously watching this girl on a basketball court and then strolling down stribling to class is seriously night and day. When she finally manages to get to those classes though, they are just as easy as an open three because the self proclaimed "big girl" is always putting academics first (well... first behind talking on the phone, steerage with friends, walks, Pinterest, and wedding gawker of course), why wedding gawker? This diva princess has found her man and is tying the knot ASARA. Armed with a pen and to-do lists to cross off, wedding planning is no match for her. After the wedding, the limits of BRE will be tested as Audrey and Luke head to Norfolk. Whichever destroyer she is going to is blessed with a hard working and intelligent woman who is going to be awesome at whatever she does. Also, some one should warn them that their biggest concern won't be drowning due to the ocean, but because of post it notes...

Eli Bronshteyn

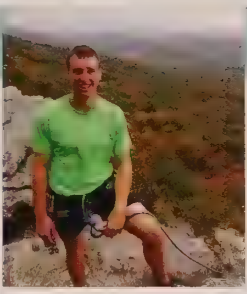
Naval Flight Officer

Ilya Bronshteyn, the not so little Ruskie American that could. Surviving a full frontal Yut Yut attack and secondary mids aviation warfare, his Intel countermeasures and strong allies lead him to be one of the few commissioned veterans of Smoke Hall musters. Misunderstood by many, but a true friend for those who are lucky enough to truly get to know him. Ilya is a living example of a person who has enemies because he stood for something, and was not afraid to go against the crowd. His worldwide talents might very well prevent a third would war. Generous and forgiving to those who are grateful, but rightfully ruthless to injustice and to those who wish our country harm. He's thankful for mentorship from Chief Brantley of 20th Co, all his instructors, and loyalty against odds from Smashmore, and Collin Wood. The NFO community is lucky to have him.

Kerstin Caesar

USMC Ground

Our littlest track star turned song bird hails from the land of "bubblers" and "jimmies" (yes we're still confused) somewhere in Barrington Road Island. Kerstin is always the first person to start that taboo political/religious conversation and always the last to pick up her room. (Oh and did we mention that other taboo, Firstie brass, youngster...?) But regardless of all her heated conversations and fiery antics Kerstin can be counted on as the fiercest and most dependable friends to be had. We will miss her, and beloved "Raggy" immensely, but there is no doubt she will do incredible things for the Marine Corps. Ooh Rah, Yut yut, Kill



Joshua Clark

Submarines

A 50 year old man stuck in a 22 year old's body; Josh is a Navy brat and beer snob through and through. He has three loves in his life, mathematics, his '67 Comet, and his mother. Although he was a part time tour guide to the gates of Narnia, he managed to maintain an UNBELIEVABLE academic record. This allowed him to pursue a graduate degree at George Mason. According to ESPN.com he was a five star recruit expected to be picked first for the elusive YP Commodore position. Unfortunately, Navy nuclear power lured him away for the submarine force, with promises of money for more Oak Barrel Stout.

Chase Dalton

Nuclear Surface Warfare

From San Diego to Singapore, Chase Dalton is the most interesting man in the world. Joining the Nuclear Surface force, he will be an aficionado of piano , late nights and glasses of scotch. Late night fights with separated roommates will surely be missed, however we all hope that once he leaves this place he will finally be kissed. From San Diego to Annapolis, to the rest of the fleet, we all know that once he's an admiral we won't be shocked of that feat!

David Dolinar

USMC Ground

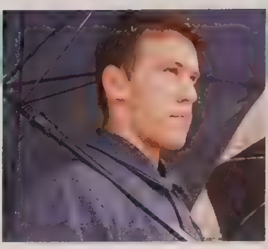
Hailing from the armpit of California, Jacob...I mean David, was destined for big things. As a founding member of MGD, he keeps the high life alive in everything he does. Reading was never his strong suit so systems engineering was a perfect fit. His skills really paid off when assembling a futon. When Jake wasn't breaking hearts across the continental United States, he was crushing souls on the rugby pitch. Unlike all of his brothers forever unclean, David managed not to taste the forbidden fruit. Don't let the muscles that Wes B sculpted fool you, this future RAH machine is a giant teddy bear (just don't mess with his Fig Newtons).

Albrey Felder

Surface Warfare Officer

As one of the most distinguished members of 20th company, MIDN Felder has been a shining example of what a Midshipman should aspire to be. He has shown complete focus in his academic courses. Physically he has lasted through the four intense years. He has also found different and innovative ways to incorporate leadership skills learned in his leadership courses. As if this wasn't impressive enough, Midshipman Felder also participated with the Varsity Football team for each year. He found the time to keep a good relationship with his peers. He also became a shining example to the plebes and youngsters who have been in his fire team. Albrey L. Felder Jr. A shining example of what a Midshipman is and should aspire to be.

Alexander Fishman



Submarines

The first time I met Alex he was running around in his NYC apartment, 6 years old. Who knew, 10 years later he would become part of our family chasing our 6 year olds around. After 4 years as his sponsor Dad I can attest that this Mid will make a positive impact on the Navy and achieve great success in life. His attention to detail, love for everyone, big heart, and sense of humor will lead his sailors to accomplish great feats. We will miss him when he leaves and wish him the best of luck. Some people are special enough to go from casual friendships to lifelong family members. I will miss the piles of laundry, mounds of food, dozens of rides, millions of memorable moments, thoughtful favors, caring conversations, helping hands, side splitting laughs, late nights, fire pits, trampo-soccer, camp, bellowing songs, comforting words, guaranteed fun, and life lessons for everyone, legitimately.

Kadeem Gordon

Surface Warfare Officer

Inner-city Philly meets small town Missouri. A crazy combo, but that was the reality for Kadeem Gordon for 4 years by the Severn. He had to put up with my country slang and odd ideas like sleeping with the windows open or the door unlocked. I must say, it was an adventure to live with Gordon, though. Whether it was getting slapped awake at 0200 on a Saturday or having to pry a chair out of the wall, I never knew what to expect next. Without him, though, I may never have learned about fashion or what "swag" was. Cause let me tell you, Gordon had a lot of swag. I don't know if this guy ever had to buy himself a drink; people were just that attracted to him. It was a privilege to spend 4 years with this guy. The Fleet is in for a real treat.

Mary Hamilton

Navy Pilot

A rose by any other name wouldn't smell as sweet as our Emily Rose. With twitter just a distant memory, 4/C Mollz found a haven inside the dirty walls of young Vick's. As the leader of the 15%, MoHam worked diligently to bring service dress hippie to the forefront of academy life. On the weekends you could find Molly interacting with the local wildlife; whether it was hanging out with Barnacle at ACME or frolicking with rabbits. Molly is in it to win it; I mean why drink if you're not trying to black out? Truer words will never be spoken about Emily Rose than "don't save her, she don't want be saved." A true savant of all things classy, this wine connoisseur, tap dancing queen, and gate keeper of the purgatory will truly be missed by buds everywhere because at the end of the day WE ALL WE GOT

Joshua Hildebrand

Surface Warfare Officer

Dreaming of the days spent on the sea, Josh wasted no time getting underway. As a plebe, he embodied the stoic qualities of Alexander Hamilton and always placed the needs of others before himself. Hand over hand, josh climbed through the ranks and reached the pinnacle of his career as a Midshipman serving on 20th Company's staff. Thin, clean, and neat like a blank sheet of paper, Josh was always there to set the example for subordinates and peers. As he ventures upon the ocean, may he forever have fair winds and following seas.

Jon Huntsman III

Navy Pilot

Jonny….What's there not to say about him, he's practically a legend. He is known for his superb coloring skills in professor Tomlinson's poli sci class. He's one of the cool kids originating from the place where shredding powder and riding bikes down mountains is the only way of life, good ol' Utah. Jon once grew the balls and sent a chit up to his company officer asking if he could "go home and shred some powder for the weekend." Only Jon would have such an elegant way of asking. Known to go big or go home, Jon may be the only person to ever drive the 11th green subsequently missing the 4' eagle putt. An avid adrenaline junkie, Jon will be flying high with the best pilots in the world. Who knows maybe this goofball will stick around to become the first Admiral in charge of a coloring squadron?

Nicholas Jasman

Surface Warfare Officer

The Drift King of Sioux City, South Dakota where his fame has caused some portly gentleman to confuse his large round head with a meatball. His favorite live artists are Garbage and The Offspring, ask him about their shows, he'd love to tell ya. His Midshipman career has been highlighted by his captainship of the rack team, where his record is unblemished. He may seem like a shy guy with the ladies, but a few libations bring out his inner Nicolas Sparks (talk to Ali about it). May this coffee chugging salt lick of man have fair winds and following seas. Much Fantasy. Such Football. WOW

Mitchell Kallek

Submarines

From the crook of the thumb of the ever familiar palm state, Mitchell was born with a Busch Light in his hand and a to-do list on his phone. On holidays he's known to reach for the darkest of meats. Whether he's earning glasses from Johnnies, fist bumping his Eskimo brethren, or pursuing a relationship with Google Translate, he's always the life of a party outside the gates. Within [GO GREEN] Bancroft, Braceface often enjoyed the inside of his con locker and generously donating his lunch money at noon meal formation. His priceless chariot, the Merc, has seen more bodily fluids than BMU. Always willing to lend a helping hand, Mitchell would give you the shirt off his back, even if it's to clean the lotion off your car. But after all, that's just like, our opinion man. Sips White Russian

David Kerby

USMC Ground

I have known David Kerby since I-Day all the way back from the summer of 2010. Throughout all this time, David has been the most loyal of friends. He is from Kirksville, Missouri and has always enjoyed being outside in God's green earth. David was a history major here at USNA, and yet always seemed to find extra work and stay busy. Never one to do something halfway, David (or "Derby") was the man who ran marathons with no training, simply to see if he could. He was the type of person who would drop what he was doing to help a friend whenever you needed him. Loyal, to the end, faithful to the last, and steady as stone, David Kerby is the definition of you would want behind you in any fight. David has an unshakable positive attitude and continues to see the bright side of things even in the midst of a challenge. He is proud to have the opportunity to serve God and his country by being a Marine Corps officer and I am proud to call him my friend.

Ryan Keyes

Submarines

Big Tuna aka King Narp aka Meredith hails from Ohio. A right tackle by trade, he always claimed athleticism, we saw him trip on a white line. Long hair don't care, even if it's using a fake in DTA or calling his SPC mom. Ryan doesn't get embarrassed, ANFB. Always the drunkest girl at the party, he owns more vests than Jim Tressel. An animal rivaled by none, still batting 1000 in Philly. Meredith is prepared to dominate the sub community. In his words "Mess Around, Get Smoked." Big Tuna gets his name from when he ate a tuna sandwich one time. Meredith is a man that knows what he wants often telling people "Nah man, I'm good thanks." Either way we're all sure that Ryan will by stiff-arming nerds and maintaining a "functional" sub. Godspeed Tuna.

Nadila Khan

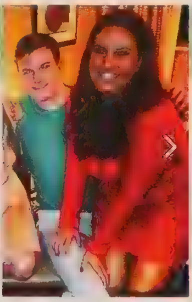
Naval Flight Officer

Genghis Khan, Kublai Khan, Khan Bro Chill...Nadila Khan is a woman of many names, and many talents. Filming, editing, dancing, banana eating, reggae parties, online shopping--she truly does it all. But her most important talents lie within her magnetic personality and infectious laugh. This Princess of Persia has a character much bigger than her small stature would suggest, and she always knows how to turn any situation into fun. From her early days at NAPS spent napping in her closet, to her Academy days drinking gallons of coffee and secretly being super buff, Nadila has become quite the formidable force sure to leave her mark as an NFO. Always there for her friends and always willing to help others, Nadila is a beautiful woman inside and out. The aviation community is lucky to have this feisty Persian coming to Pensacola, she will do great things. Love, G,P&S

Ryan Kochert

USMC Ground

With his body carved from the mountains of Cleveland, Ohio, Ryan "Cherto" Kochert (Ko-hert) had his birth narrated by Morgan Freeman. It has been said that the story of Samson is loosely based on his life. As a 15 year old boy he attended a Dave Matthews Band concert and left a man, six times over. With his newfound strength he took up archery and became the most efficient hunter the world has ever seen. His prowess could have taken him to the Olympics but pole vaulting captured his eye and brought him to the Naval Academy. His first few years of schooling, he continued his hunt for prize animals until he heard the siren song of the one who cut off his hair and sapped him of his strength. Guacamole. Smokey Spam. Systems Engineering.



James Kuzmick

Navy Pilot

Jimmy Kuzmick, affectionately known as Captain Ahab or by his Cajun name Cabbage, hails from the great state of Washington. Jimmy is known for his love of the Seattle Seahawks, Dunkin Donuts, and mentally unstable women. When he isn't playing zombies with his overly familiar best friend Ben, James can be found in Charlie's enjoying an IPA and thinking about Ron Jeremy lookalikes. Jimmy has always found gin to be his kryptonite, especially in the city of brotherly love, and he often enjoys chasing it with a nice glass of milk. Jimmy's best qualities include his humble personality, his extremely hands on attitude, and his pet iguana. After graduation Jimmy will be relocating to the Dog House in Pensacola as a Navy Pilot, where he will hopefully continue to FEED THE BEAST…HUHUH.
With Love, Johnny and Andrew

Andrew Lacosse

Navy Pilot

Before Andrew came to the Academy, great things were already in store for his shame. Who can forget his beautiful piece of literature on ridding the world of obesity and making it a better place? Andrew always had a strict no Mid policy while at the Academy #AM #SM and it was not surprising that he is a huge fan of flood gates or finding new ways to consume beverages... He took the phrase Mids for Kids to a whole new level #U18. Indonesian royalty has nothing on him or when he decides to leave. Maybe one day Andrew will be able to not hit a wave #gustofwind. We will always love Andrew even if he plays with dolls on his surface cruise and burns his foot because he will forever be a blood hound that will always be on the prowl and in our hearts. #LordsOfDogtown #FattyPatty #NMWP

Paul Masteller

Navy Pilot

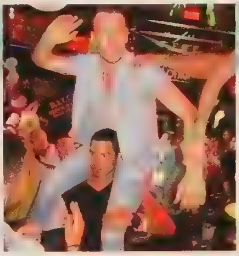
Paul fell into our family by chance, and we are lucky to have him. After 3 years of testing USNA limits the most common question in our house has become "where's Paul?". He has given us hours of stomach cramping laughs, endless entertainment for the kids and an inhaled an exorbitant amount of food. Few people I have met are as easy to talk to and debate with on anything. With not a worry in the world and a huge heart I know that he will be a great leader and succeed in anything he puts his mind to. We will miss him when he leaves and wish him the best of luck. Some people are special enough to go from casual friendships to lifelong family members. I will miss the piles of laundry, mounds of food, dozens of rides, millions of memorable moments, thoughtful favors, Dora and Diego stories, caring conversations, helping hands, side splitting laughs, late nights, fire pits, trampo-soccer, building forts, camp, bellowing songs, Nagini, comforting words, guaranteed fun, and life lessons for everyone.

Benjamin Matson

USMC Ground

MIDN Benjamin Matson was born in Bloomington, Indiana. He moved out to the Chicago land area and lived there for nine years right around his 6th birthday. When he turned 16, he again moved to Muskego, Wisconsin, has called this home ever since. In high school, Ben learned to love a good challenge, which he encountered by joining the varsity wrestling team. This love spurred him to join the USNA Club Boxing Team, and he never feels quite right until he has spent sometime in the boxing gym each day. He has service selected Marine Corps Ground and thanks God for this opportunity. He considers his father and grandfathers to be among his personal heroes. Nothing suites Ben more than a long car ride out to southwest Wisconsin, listening to Zac Brown Band all along the way, and hunting white-tailed deer up on his grandfather's property with his Remington 700.

Christopher Morales



USMC Pilot

Born on the streets of New York City and proudly Mexican, C-Mo enjoys the finer things in life like clubbing, expensive bar tabs, and his on again off again relationship that he has maintained for the past decade. Often associated with the track team as an athlete, Chris's contribution to the team goes much further than running fast or throwing a shot put far. He's the self-proclaimed "PR" guy for the team; his events are socializing with the officials and delegating his managerial duties to other managers. He recently set a school record at the final Army-Navy meet for the most consecutive days of varsity status without actually doing anything athletic. When he isn't skipping meals, his favorite thing to eat is a big plate of cheddar munchers while watching CNN for the 15th time that day. All in all, he's a big brown man that runs the town, man.

Matthew Morrison

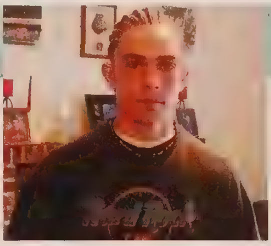
SEALs

Alexander Mund

Surface Warfare Officer

The illegitimate love child of Mickey Mouse and Ariel the Mermaid, Alex "Al" Gray Mund was born to run and run fast. Raised in the shadow of the Magic Kingdom in Orlando, Florida he split the first 18 years of his life becoming an Eagle Scout and water skiing. Upon his arrival at USNA he immediately distinguished himself as a "cool guy" for his completion of Dark Souls and the many demons he and Carl slayed in the process. His position as 20th Company Dungeon Master built upon this reputation. His tasteful purple skinny jeans and excellent standing in EE have allowed him to join the prestigious SWO EDO community. The few, the proud, the salty.

Matthew Padilla



Submarines

Matt "Chinchilla" Padilla hails from Juarez, Mexico and later became known as Detective Big Cactus from Santa Fe, New Mexico. He buys about 4 drinks for every girl in the bar because he has so much love to give, and partially in desperation hoping one of them will give him directions to the door. He operates his vehicle almost as recklessly as his money (he hit a parked car once, might've been those prescription glasses). His simple healthy diet consists of one cup of sprinkles, an entire box of fruit rolls ups and one corona and lime, but they cannot be touching, repeat twice daily. He will be forever indebted to Cmo for the hookup with the banker #dollarbills. Drew Brees is 5'9''.

Grant Page

Surface Warfare Officer

PageMan raced his way to Naptown donning an Ensign-stache and a smile only a billboard could love behind the wheels of a 470 hp behemoth he calls his car. Hailing from the great continent of Chico. A true Blue Jays fan – he's been known to rent limos to go see Fast 5, board Bahamian yachts VBSS-style, and hand pick coconuts in Jamaica. Needless to say this man has more watches and V-necks than the Western world has made. He's been known to enjoy Cubans and Crown Royal while shooting craps victoriously high kicking in celebration. A sharp young man, who wants to do nothing more than be more like his father has done exactly that and so much more. His maturity, passion, and loyalty make him a world class friend. To one hell of a sea warrior and a future salty SWO, may the bourbon be aged and the cigars robust.

Kenneth Piech

Submarines

A native Inuit, he shared a one bedroom igloo with his brother, mother, father, his grandmother and his entire village. He lived a simple life on the shores of Alaska clubbing baby seals and ice fishing since he was a little a boy, never truly learning how to drive an automobile. He has repeatedly been seen unconventionally using one way streets, exit onlys and dirt roads in the DC Metropolitan area. Moving to the Mainland, he developed a taste for the White Man's firewater which has led him to many other interests including Cirque du Soleil dancers and porcelain worship. When he isn't lost he can be caught studying at Georgetown University. Luckily submarines do not dock in the Czech Republic because he might go broke.

Colleen Randolph

USMC Ground

Colleen is never caught without a smile on her face. Her laugh is contagious and her personality is one of a kind. Her love for her family and friends is endearing. She was raised a Navy brat and is excited to graduate and join the Marine Corps. She has dedicated her free time at the academy to the Navy Women's Swim team and Triathlon team, as well as battling through Calculus and EE. Colleen never backs down from a challenge and looks forward to all her adventures that lay ahead. The Marine Corps is lucky to have her. "You're off to Great Places! Today is your day! Your mountain is waiting, so… get on your way!" -Dr. Seuss

Bryan Roby

Surface Warfare Officer

A litter of puppies fought in a cage. Only one would emerge; their lives they would wage. Pulled up by his scruff the truth was revealed, the pup was Bryan, his new fate was sealed. From Chile to America, Bryan made is way. Here, he fell for a girl, Lilo, also known as Ms. May. He quickly realized that her time came to pass. His mission now was to conquer every class. He went by many names, some that didn't take, I knew him as the savage and the little brother of Jake.

Alison Schwinn

Surface Warfare Officer

I know what you're thinking…There is only one Alison Schwinn?! It seems almost impossible to think this could be true. She's everywhere whether it is running with the marathon team, practicing field hockey, singing at glee club, doing an important company job. And why? Because she cares! When she isn't off doing one of those things you can bet you will find her reading, reading some more, or stuck on Pinterest. Ali also has to be one of the best dressed people I have ever met. Sometimes I think she is getting paid by Lilly Pulitzer and J. Crew to wear their clothes around as a model for their brands. I know her sense of style won't leave her when she is off sailing the high seas as a SWO mama! She is the bestest roommate I could have ever asked for and I know she will do great things!

Samantha Seitz

Navy Pilot

If you ever have one of those nights where the homework load has piled up, and you're up past midnight studying, stop by Sam's room for some popcorn and a late-night chat. She'll be up. Every. Single. Night. That's what being an Aeronautical Engineering major does to you; however, we all learned how all that hard work pays off at the Aero Dining Out firstie year… man the stories of nerds partying hard never get old. No one would ever predict Sam's nerdy-ness when football season rolls around. Somehow Aero and the military don't often mix with drop-dead-gorgeous cheerleaders. Just once I want to see the sweet old men react to Sam explaining that all the cheerleaders are in fact Midshipmen… Sam, you are going to be the most beautiful fighter pilot the Fleet's seen, and hopefully the amazed looks will eventually diminish? Love you so much and good luck!

Samir Shaikh

Surface Warfare Officer

To some, motivation, dedication, honor, and duty are just words taken at face value. MIDN Shaikh embodies the meaning of these words in everything he does. With him excellence is the only standard. He is a leader in its truest sense, being both professional and compassionate. Someone you trust to make the right decision- every time. Someone who legitimately cares about others, and will always put their needs ahead of his own. Without a doubt MIDN Shaikh is destined to do great things for the Navy and our country.

Geramiah Simoes

USMC Ground

Geramiah Simoes known better by his friends as Fat Man came to the Academy to swim but after a few years decided to hang up his speedo and pursue a more enjoyable life. However his times spent with friends in the locker room and countless hotels will never be forgotten. Since leaving the swim team he has been a master at everything imaginable. Between snowboarding, surfing, golf, squash, health, weightlifting, running, wrestling, football and of course dieting he has found a way to be the best. He will make a great Marine officer as no matter what has landed on his face he has always found a way to survive.

Nathaniel Swift

USMC Pilot

Hailing from the middle of nowhere, Kansas, Nathaniel 'Nater-Tot' Swift is perhaps the cheapest son of a gun you ever met. Pay him what you owe him because he will come after you like a repo-man, he'll get that $1.36. His dedication to protein and supplements have served his body in no way, he remains the scrawniest in company. Confusing Rugby for an American sport he hopes to one day make America's Sprint Rugby team, for those little guys. Successfully getting engaged during his Second Class year is undoubtedly his greatest achievement in life… he actually found someone that will put up with him. Failing to join the real core, he settled for the Marines. Semper Deep.

Nathan Brown

Navy Pilot

Brownie! You made it…can you believe it?! You will truly be missed with your funny sense of humor since we met you in Plebe summer, like making up words like chacumberdy, janky, and kirkin (what do they even mean?) or thinking you could speak German. You tried very hard to get people in company to use these words, but couldn't. Remember that time over plebe summer you broke your leg…was it all that running or chopping? Nobody knows, not even you because you ran on it broken for a month without knowing, and then one night was fireman-carried across T-Court! Remember when you jumped off the 10m and acted like you were running in place, but forgot to keep your legs together. We will never forget your love for firehook sandwiches, "DON'T touch my honey bunches of oats!", or the giant bag of gummy bears you kept under your desk. We know that you will be living it up in Pensacola and will make a great Naval Pilot! P.S. don't worry though, you don't have to go through SEAR school until you get winged…Have fun and fly high Brownie!

Zachary Brown

USMC Pilot

Born and raised in Delaware, Zachary George Wesley Brown is the eldest son of Ellen and Lawrence Brown. Captain of the Naval Academy Jiu Jitsu team and member of the Color Guard and Green Classroom, Zac spent much of his time involved in many ECAs. Graduating with a Bachelor of Science Degree in English, he looks forward to joining the United States Marine Corps as a Pilot. "However many words you read, however many you speak, what good are they if you do not act?"

Andrew Caveness

USMC Ground

Baby Drew, Baby Drew, dribbles on his bib. Baby Drew, takes a nap in his Harry Potter crib. Jockey Drew loves to watch the horses spin around, But silly Drew can't explain the quickly spinning ground. Dancing Drew, he prepares backstage before the show, But any interruption now will surely make him blow. Tricky Drew likes to be the troll under the bridge, Unless he's fighting dragons on a snowy mountain ridge. Morning Drew walks on by and makes our spirits bright. Just knowing Drew is good enough to sleep so well at night.

Brian Davenport

Submarines

The wonderful D-Port. He is known for his exceptional ability to wake on a moment's notice and will give you a very cheerful greeting if you wake him too soon. Most people work during the day and sleep at night, but Brian likes to stay up all night and sleep periodically the next day. Some believe this is due to his affinity towards binge watching obscure TV shows. If you maybe have seen that movie, Brian definitely has seen that movie. With a freak-like intellect, he is always there to make the hardest of problems seem simple. Though he was swift of foot in XC, he found his true calling as a NARP. He showed this skill by finishing as the distinguishable Sacko champ. That's okay because he found love in a hopeless place…PCB. He is an outstanding individual, but a better friend. Semper Deep, brother.

Connor Davis

Submarines

Connor Davis is a man of many "ironic" contradictions. His outward physical appearance would suggest a high-degree of athleticism, but in reality he suffers from a crippling lack of basic motor skills. For instant comedic relief, throw any object in his direction. A self-proclaimed southern patriot, Connor oddly chose to major in Chinese. His Chinese name is something nobody cares to pronounce correctly. Despite his Asian language tendencies, Connor is well versed in all nuances of the English language and enjoys contributing next-to-nothing of value to those conversations occurring around him. In all reality, despite his disgustingly odorous clothing rack, we've been lucky to have Connor as our roommate after he found love in his old company. He'll make an excellent submariner, and a better friend to all who have the patience to put up with him. One day, when he's CNO, I guarantee he'll name every sub Serenity. America!

Margaret Gilroy

Submarines

Margaret Gilroy, often referred to as the ice queen, mother marge, large marge or large Marge in charge, is one of the most selfless, diligent and approachable people you will ever meet. Yeah, she's a dumb blonde. Are those locks really real? Who knows, but she was in Glamour so they have to be natural, right? She's so sexist that she runs a program specifically to exclude males commonly referred to as Girls on the Run. When she's not studying or baking cookies you can find her not working out with the rest of the marathon team. I hear she also hates giving back to the community. That's why she's mag vp; everyone knows that's not a real position. She's going subs, but that doesn't matter because she never had a social life anyways.

Kevin Ginn

SEALs

Known by most as Kevin Ginn, but by few as Colonel Sanders, Kevin is the true definition of an officer and a gentleman. When others find themselves handcuffed to the struggles of everyday life, he is undoubtedly their key to salvation. All kidding aside, Kevin will have a great career as a SEAL, marry a smoking hot blonde, and have more children than friends—he has a lot of friends. I will always remember Kevin as the least eligible bachelor—old habits die-hard. I pray that Kevin remembers these wise words from Ron Burgundy while he's running around the beaches of San Diego: "It's so damn hot. Milk was a bad choice." Stay classy Kevin, and don't forget to stay tight…or loose. Et tu, Brutus!

Zachary Haueter

Navy Pilot

From the moment he emerged into this world wearing full flight gear, it was blatantly obvious that Zach Haueter was destined for big biceps and bigger achievements. His life has been the music video to "Highway to the Danger Zone." He is passionate about life, lifting, and lift-kits. His arms are almost as big as his truck. While he has loved his dedicated workout schedule, he has also worked hard academically as an Aeronautical Engineering major, in keeping with the flyboy theme of the epic that has been his life. He service selected Naval Aviator, because as he will be very quick to remind you they are better than pilots. Zach, we're so excited to see the heights to which you will soar.

Daniel Huber

Navy Pilot

Daniel began his collegiate journey gamboling from the strawberry field's of Oxnard California to USNA. Daniel Jacob Huber (or is it Zuber, Hurley or Vanatta? We could never tell...) can normally be found thrift shopping, studying at the library or building Mount Saint Huber on his desk. When he is not taking strict accountability for the company, flipping over chairs and hurling his beverage at people, or taking one of his world-famous desk naps, it is safe to assume that Huba Stank is looking up pictures of his pagan God—the Nigerian nightmare. Daniel is a true friend that will make a great Naval Officer and will certainly be successful in anything he goes after—unless it's artistry, journalism, dancing or anything that requires the right side of his brain to come back to life after a 22 year stasis.

Emily Hughes

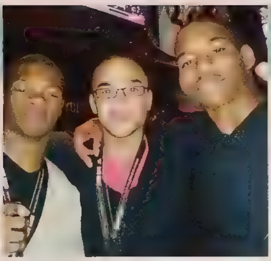
Nuclear Surface Warfare

Although our firsties probably thought your freakishly long legs, goofy glasses and messy hair all dressed in white from plebe summer was a perfect fit for your natural genius (not to mention your minor spaz attack and trip to the hospital)... I was never fooled. I have always been in awe of your independence and self-confidence. Whatever the struggle, you remain composed, when everything seemed against you; you never wavered because your confidence is defined by something much deeper than external factors. Your courage is shown through your desire to lead in unconventional ways, to travel abroad independently, and put your neck out for people. I know you are going to make an exceptional officer. Just promise me by then you will put on your own pants, unravel your own sports bra and avoid public settings populated by your subordinates. Thanks! Love ya girl friennn!

Anasitasia Ioane

USMC Pilot

Ana Ow-An-In-Knee. Island Strong. Island Time. OHANA is her motto, but don't ask her what it means. Once she starts, the sass don't stop. This sassy rower is the newest contestant on the Samoan Bachelorette. We got bets on who gets that final rose Sana. A million Facebook notifications from the whole island and a personal bar from Tisa has catapulted this future Marine to celebrity status. Be careful what you say for you might hear Hm, You Talk too much! If you want to take a fun road trip with someone, Ana is the girl...for the first 5 minutes until she falls asleep. The only way to wake a sleeping Ana is a cup of sugar and cream with a splash of coffee. Congratulations on these four years, and the Marine Corps is lucky to gain a yut pup like you. NWC 2014: ROLLOUT.



Marian Jester

Surface Warfare Officer

Marian Jester, excuse me, MaRian Jester has lived in Texas but resides in Ohio and is a die-hard Buckeyes fan. Even though he lives in the middle of nowhere (Mansfield), he seems to have learned a lot in his life and continues to provide a positive influence to those he interacts with. Marian does not play sports here, but he's still a great all-around athlete after doing soccer, boxing and wrestling all throughout his life. Marian is continuing a military legacy with his oldest brother being a 2011 Academy graduate, his cousin a 2012 Academy graduate, his second brother a 2012 West Point grad and third brother will graduate in 2015 from here. He is an Ocean Engineer major in 4th company, and service selected Surface Warfare Engineering Duty Option. With all of his many talents combined, he will certainly touch the lives of those he will soon lead.

Christa Kamon

Surface Warfare Officer

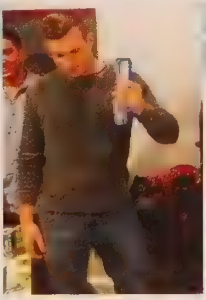
Christa! Plebe summer, I remember you as the short girl who did not know any rates, but got away with it somehow! I was mad, but I learned to love you. From our intense roommate talks about everything they tell you not to talk about, to crazy dancing all night long, I do not think I could have found a crazier roommate. Senior Chief probably agrees, especially after the chocolate milk incident. You are such a unique person and put 100% passion into everything you do and believe. Especially your creativity, I have always been blown away by how you can add depth to the simplest things and make them look beautiful. You see things differently and make beautiful creations that everyone can understand. You will make a phenomenal officer and I know our paths will cross again as SWO-mamas. Thanks for the Crazy Love, you changed my world.

Conor Kearney

USMC Ground

Conor Joseph Patrick Kearney (Marine Corps Ground)- CJPK won't be at MQF, but if you happen upon him otherwise he's always pleased to meet you. Holding such illustrious positions as the Class Vice President, the Naval Academy Foreign Affairs Conference's Chief of Staff, and the Ice Hockey Team's President, and head of the "Aspiring Vineyard Vines Model" Club, it was clear that Conor was born to lead -- or at least his leadership style would be like novocaine -- give it time and it always works. Conor gained Class-wide notoriety for his wicked funny e-mails, which served as weekly reminders to go to Firstie Club. Of course, his true glory was earned in the penalty box -- sorry, on the ice rink. As Navy's finest...um…"enforcer," no one could break a perfectly good stick or earn two minutes in the box with such aplomb. Yes, Conor sure is leaving USNA with many a good memory: I-Day, Herndon, and most especially Ring Dance. The Marines got a good one with Conor Kearney, just remember he doesn't work on St Patrick's Day.

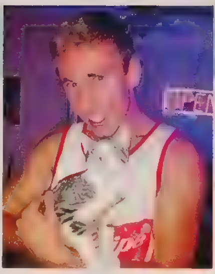
Mark Lanfranki



USMC Pilot

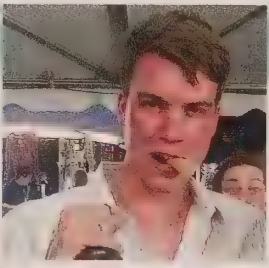
"I wish I loved one thing as much I hate everything." Mark Lanfranki. He truly is one of a kind. I can't think of anyone else I'd rather have at my side, whether it be at the bars, fighting, or just going on the all too often Chipotle run. Here at the Academy, we often throw around words like honor and character, but in Mark's case, they are some of the only words I can think of to describe his personality. Well, along with sarcastic of course. Mark, just remember, if you use standoffish humor to mask your inability to relate to people on a personal level, you'll be golden.

Justin Lenhart



USMC Pilot

Justin Lenhart, known by many as Lenfart. He may be spotted on the weekends driving his purple truck, "Julie", around town, but he'll tell you she's dark maroon. Approving liberty for him was always questionable, as his party tendencies decimated everything he touched. In short, he takes the term "liquid courage" to a new level. A sunshine state native, his easy-going attitude and fierce loyalty make him one of the best people to have in your corner. Not to mention his insane fighting skills from martial arts III. Legend has it that he once defeated a troop of thirty ravenous midget assassins through the sole use of hammer fists and eye gouges. Solid prep for a future Marine Aviator. Remember, when it gets to be that time of night and you're in need of a way home, get with this guy 'cause he parties his way back.



Lucas Leonhardt

USMC Pilot

Known throughout the land for his alien screech, Luke "Left-Curve" Leonhardt is a strange fellow from the woods up North. He lives by the creed: if you are the loudest one in a fight, you are most likely to be right. He enjoys a good shower fresh with the scent of Sharpies and coffee grounds. A die hard Wisconsinite; Luke enjoys throwing chairs when watching the Packers lose. As much as he absolutely, thoroughly, probably, sort of enjoyed Leatherneck, he will enjoy flying, not the Marines. During a productive stint in PCB, Luke finally did not hesiTATE. No matter where his career takes him, Luke will be found liberally standing up for the underprivileged, common man.

Samuel Lilek

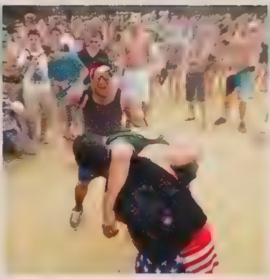
Submarines

Sam has worked hard for his "disheveled surfer" reputation (though he doesn't surf), which is why his propensity for success in the classroom may come as a bit of a surprise. But, one conversation with Sam and his middle name (pronounced Wise-man) becomes more than appropriate. Sam played four years on the Navy Club Soccer team, where he mostly chilled with chillers but occasionally did indeed play soccer. Sam has traveled all over the world in his time at USNA, though next time he goes to Europe he'd rather walk than take Space-A again. After a summer month in Japan couldn't satisfy his thirst for Asia, he spent first semester of his 2/C year exploring Japanese culture, cuisine, language, and legal system. All sarcasm aside, Sam really does have a bright future in the submarine community. Or at least we hope so.

Alexandria Membreno

Navy Pilot

Alix Membreno is one of the few people in this world who can say exactly what she is thinking, every time, and get away with it. An unfailing source of tough love and brutal honesty, she will always tell you what you need to hear, how you need to hear it (and possibly assault you in the process). Regardless, her enduring loyalty for the people she cares about is as strong as her rippling back muscles. As tough as it will be to watch her leave for Pensacola as a future naval aviator, it will be significantly more difficult to stop involuntarily talking like her (an unfortunate consequence of extended exposure). Alix can fill any room with energy and color the minute she walks through the door. I know that wherever life takes her, she will continue to make those around her feel alive and remember who they are.



Adrian Montecinos

Submarines

Adrian Montecinos, there's not a party you haven't missed or a rave you didn't find. I know I can always count on you to get me inebriated beyond a level I desire as you then proceed to nurse your second beer. I guess it only makes sense that you live life to the fullest because at NAPS and Plebe Year you found yourself on more days of restriction than a political science major can count. Through it all, you have been one of the most loyal friends I have known. I have no doubt that you will bring the party to the submarine community as well. Maybe you can even get those Iranians to chill out by offering them a few brews, but who knows. Until then, keep doing you.

Sean Murray

Surface Warfare Officer

Sean "Seanbro, Seandog Millionaire, Sean braaaahhhh, Crab Cakes" Murray is a beast of inexhaustible energy and a rapscallion of low breed. He is widely known for his "Last of the Mohican" like natural running ability (he is a legitimate Indian after all) and his propensity to let others eat first. Sean-by-day, 'not that guy'-by-night, he is known to sound a lot like Bruce Wayne once the sun sets. Who knows, with that leather jacket and those fancy boots could he actually be the Batman himself? I can see him drifting across the PRT finish line with a knowing smile on his face, the ruse is perfect. "TURN OFF THE LIGHTS" he bellows that night. One thing's for sure, Sean is the friend none of us deserved but the friend we got anyways. Good luck in the fleet bud, the Navy is lucky to have you.

James Neigel

Submarines

Bears fan by heart, Colts fan by circumstance. His exploits are legendary, his conquests many. Although there was that quiet period 2/C year; still a real mystery to everyone. Seriously, no one had any idea what was going on. Luckily it couldn't survive AC and the James we all know and love came roaring back to life just in time for 1/C year. With a propensity to inflict punishment on his body unimaginable to the average person, both in the weight room and out in town, James came away from this place a stronger man than most. Also smarter, kinder, and as loyal a friend as there could ever be. The submarine force is lucky to have him, although Charleston better watch out, no southern city has had to experience the mayhem James will bring with him since the days of Sherman.

Daniel Novak

Naval Flight Officer

Dan "the Relationship man" Novak, plenty good with the ladies, but never single for more than a week. Dan always had great flow, on top of his head of course, although he needed some maintenance to fix the other sort. Not that it ever slowed him down. Take Concan for example, the "music" was pretty loud that night. A natural intellect, Dan was perpetually distracted by the thousands of hours of mindless television he watched while working diligently, studying dolphins or something frivolous like that. Jokes aside, Dan is one of the most reliable guys we know and will be an outstanding officer. It's a good thing he's going to be an NFO, with his thing for helicopters and all. Maybe that's why he needed that maintenance? Thanks for the friendship man, the fleet's lucky to have you. Also a shotgun would definitely blow you off your feet you fool.

Norman Overfield

Information Warfare

Started Plebe summer with some of the sexiest drill ever witnessed. He is a guy who always held the highest standards. He made those around him want to be better by the example that he set. Always a team player, he was willing to help anyone who was in need even without them needing to ask. Norman is a great roommate but even more so a best friend. He was always there to let you know when an idea was too crazy, or join in when it wasn't. He'll dominate being an IP officer like he does all his computer class because he's wicked smart. Looking forward to kicking it with you on the sunny Florida beaches where we're both retiring to.

UNITED STATES

Cody Peterson

USMC Ground

When Cody Peterson isn't busy demolishing his foes and leading the team on the football field he is often found pondering those great questions that arise in life such as "I wonder what a guacamole tree looks?" Ok, so Cody may have suffered a concussion or six too many, but that doesn't change the fact that he is one of the best dudes I know. Seriously, his natural leadership, loyalty, and overall manliness is something that I can up to for the rest of my life. Oh, and for those wondering, Cody determined that a guacamole tree looks sort of like an oak tree. "Cody Smash."

Jordan Rettie

Submarines

MIDN Rettie was born in 1992 and raised in Sacramento, California until the age of nine, after which he and his mother moved overseas to naval bases in Italy. Appointed to the US Naval Academy in 2010, MIDN Rettie was a member of 21st Company, captain of the fencing team, and a brigade investigations officer. MIDN Rettie enjoyed summer cruises aboard the USS San Antonio LPD-17 and USS Higgins DDG-76, and internships at the CNO's Executive Panel and SECNAV's DUSN (PPOI). An honors economics major, MIDN Rettie's research focused on poverty in Washington, DC, and in 2012 traveled with a team of researchers in Rwanda to study post-genocide civil-military relations. MIDN Rettie enjoys traveling, sailing, and looks forward to service with America's submariners.

Dwayne Saunders

USMC Pilot

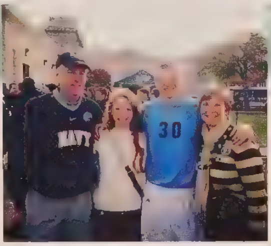
The trainer, who's still chill. Locked on, but far from locked on. I'm glad he came to the Naval Academy, or else he would've gotten his degree from Boston College Community College. There's no filter on him, and that doesn't always work out well (haha), but most of the time it does work out – and it will take him incredibly far. He speaks his mind, and stands strong for what he believes, even if it means he has to take a hit for it. Whether he's getting a back rub from the foot massage machine at Six Flags while hundreds of people walk by, or giving a one-on-one brief to a less than happy Admiral, Dwayne stays comfortable in his skin, confident and courageous. I've learned a lot through his friendship, and I'm grateful to have him as a brother. I can't wait to watch him take on the world.

Kevin Sercia

Navy Pilot

This guy... He didn't know his left from right when he showed up on I-day. He was so bad at drill, it was honestly funny to watch. After the shock of plebe summer ended though, Kevin gained his senses, and became his normal cocky self. He's also really abrasive and offensive...only if he likes you. Practical joker extraordinaire. Strangely enough, he's one of the best friends you can have. He's more than willing to lend a hand if he isn't in the middle of one of his 15-hour naps. He can always give you good advice and his honest opinion. Maybe he'll have his own show one day like Dr. Phil, if he's not a millionaire on wall street. Best of luck to you man, you'll be a great P-3 pilot after graduating #1 in flight school. I'll see you again when you're back in Florida, the best state ever.

Gavin Snyder



Submarines

Copper Cab's hair was always combed over to perfection. Unfortunately though, his finely coiffed hair was his only real accomplishment at USNA. His firstie year he started as goalie on the men's soccer team which won the Patriot League and advanced to the second round of the NCAA tournament. He received numerous personal accolades, including being ranked first in the nation for save percentage. At this time he was also a leader in the hall as the Company Commander for the 21st Company Blackjacks. But nobody really cares about these trifles: the hair is Gavin's real talent. In his time as CC, Gavin put a large emphasis on improving academics and stomping out fraternization. Gavin will be vital to ensuring that his future submarine meet its redhead quota, and hopefully he will be at least reasonably competent too (after pre-school of course).

Andrew Thompson

USMC Pilot

Andrew Thompson is hands down one of the nicest, kind-hearted, and caring individual trolls you will ever meet in your life. There are times when observing his actions will cause a person to think, "Wow, I could never be that nice." Originally from the Windy City, he is a lover of da Bears, Blackhawks, and Cubbies. His loyalty is evident in the teams he loves. The Cubs have not won a World Series since 1908 and da Bears aren't going anywhere soon after signing Cutler for seven years. Andrew is a HUGE nerd! Chemistry, Anime, and the continual necessity of integrating intricate words into normal conversation. Besides his nerdiness, Andrew is a man's man. He drinks Dr. Pepper 10, hunts with a bow, lifts like the beef cake he is, praises Ron Swanson like a God, and is a connoisseur of beer. Be thankful to know such a genuine person.

Joshua Whitt

Information Warfare

Helpful from the beginning, JD started plebe summer as one of the most helpful, motivated plebes in company. He set an example for all and continues to look sexy in uniform. A fun loving country boy with a great sense of adventure, he is also an avid skydiver and member of the Trap and Skeet team. He's a great guy to be around, but also one of the best friends anyone could ask for. Although Information Warfare wasn't his first choice there is no doubt that he will excel in it with his hardworking attitude and don't forget "He's your Huckleberry!". Best of luck until we start our Island Bar, Blue Skies!

Philip Williams

USMC Pilot

With a K-bar in one hand and a coffee cup in the other Phil Williams has cut his way into our hearts. Never failing to debate anything from history to the merits of room organization, Phil has spent his time as a devoted member of BCM. While he may drink enough coffee to make him a SWO he accomplished his dream of being appointed Marine Pilot. Phil Williams is a tremendous friend who has always been there for the celebrations and mandatory events. We wish you success in the Marine Corps and a challenging and enjoyable career. We'll always be there for you Phil.

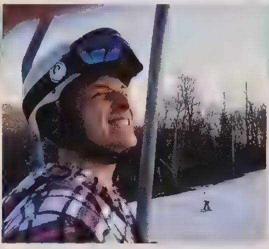
Tanner Anjola

Naval Flight Officer

TFA. The only one who can claim he has been in the Navy "all his bloomin life" since he was the son of Chief Neptune. Always drinks with responsible friends. Loves to clean showers, especially after a night of drinking. Very respectful of friends girlfriends. The first to offer Academic help, especially in dynamics. Fiscally responsible, keeping the liquor stores in business. Eager to go sit in the back seat of an F-18, but happier flying a Big Boy or a Red Robin. He loves to talk through movies, in fact he will not be quiet, especially when Toni is around. He wishes he was from Fargo. Always calm and never makes fun of anyone. Always takes the higher ground, being a man that never holds a grudge, especially to airlines. He is the man, the myth, the legend, the Task Force Anjola.



Anthony Blazevic

USMC Ground

You are unique in 22nd Company for so many reasons… Our only Canadian exchange student, our only 2 percenter, and our only heavyweight rower (validity of this "sport" still being decided). You have a rare talent for the mandatory sciences, but still manage to uphold your commendable Netflix reputation. You'll get to the top of the "IT Most Wanted" list soon! You surprised us all with your Marine Corps selection, but in reality the Corps is very lucky to be receiving the best shooter 22nd Company has to offer. We know you will succeed in the Corps and beyond, unless of course you get deported back to Canada. It's going to be strange living apart after we've been together for so long (I-Day), but my basement will always be open to you. Best of luck Motivator! YUT!

Jesse Burroughs

Surface Warfare Officer

22's giant teddy bear and prior enlisted nuke…sort of. Hates the mornings, but not because he's hungover; after all, he can't go out since he "has to save money." After graduating high school with 5 others he now has a PhD in Sports with numerous supplements and visits to powerlifting nationals to prove it. The King of Cardio, while never struggling to get a respectable bench press, is "one cookie away from failing height and weight." All that heavy muscle weighing him down. His favorite activity is sleeping, during which his grunting is so bizarre that he often awakes himself. Be careful with any dates around this guy, he's such a ladies man that she might just leave you for him; although he does enjoy the company of three sport varsity athletes. Your indomitable spirit, passionate drive, and dedication will carry you far! Good luck as a SWO, Jesse!

Matthew Busick

USMC Ground

He goes by many names: Baby Bear, Big Man Busick, and Short Guy. He's the biggest fan of Texas from Oklahoma. His vertical handicap is negated by his massive truck and form-fitting shirts (in only 3 plain colors). He mentally prepares his body to destroy Mac-D weights by staring blankly at YouTube music videos on repeat and memorizing the words to every Lil Wayne and Chief Keef rap. On the weekends, he can be found crushing Jack-and-Cokes at Acmes, sharing wise words such as, "Why go to Europe to walk around and look at buildings when there's Google Images; If I turned in a copy of Hemingway as my own, it would get a zero for being retarded; And, she seemed like a nice girl." Matt's an awesome guy and will make one hell of a Marine Officer. Best of luck with all your…. look! A bird! RAM!! –Brad, Brandon

Jacqueline Callahan

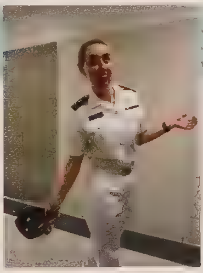
Surface Warfare Officer

Emerging from the deep waters of South Africa, Thailand, or that night at Willy T's bar in Key West, Jackie is always blazing a new path, meeting new people, and trying new things. The adventures of Jackie and Abby started back before Jersey Shore made it big and we were teenage "seacadorks." Since then rules have been bent, adventures have been made, and memories never forgotten. If you can't find Jackie traveling the world somewhere, you'll probably find her in her room googling images of whales and other seacows. It's her second favorite past time behind diving and playing hot or not at the bars. Our tastes may be different in the men we seek, but at least we keep a similar creeper list. I'm going to miss our bedtime talks and the bed texts, but without a doubt I know I will see you on a TED talk someday.

Abigail Chek

Civil Engineer Corps

Whether it be shredding powder on the mountains of Utah or learning to dive in the Florida Keys, Abigail is always up for adventure. This crazy country girl embodies the mantra 'live life to the fullest' and can always be found instilling this value into her teammates on and off the ice as she is co-Captain of the Women's Ice Hockey Team. Abigail utilizes her Jersey girl tenacity in all aspects of life, especially when she qualified for Boston on her first marathon. The Abby and Jackie Team actually met in 2005 and fate allowed us to spend the past four years together. Our adventures are endless, with the most successful being the streets of Key West and the DTA Pub Crawl. 22nd Company is going to miss her bright smile and spontaneity as she heads to Gulfport, Mississippi to be a Civil Engineer.



Caitlin Chrans

USMC Ground

Congratulations, Chrans, Cait, Lin (or whatever you go by)! You did it! You are the only female Electrical Engineering Major of 2014 left unstruck. As a four-year member of the skydiving team, it's a little hard to believe that you hesitated on the 10-meter during Plebe Summer. A cycling enthusiast, dancer, published author, wilderness explorer, Brigade Ops… seriously, what didn't you do? Except make the triathlon team… You had quite a resume as a Midshipman, but let's be real, you were really a Wooop at heart. I guess Marine Ground is the closest you'll get to the Army, good thing you won't have to swim! Keep daydreaming, find a nice boy, and good luck out there. Love, LLNP

Elizabeth Cotter

Surface Warfare Officer

Liz Cotter is truly one of a kind at the Naval Academy. Her compassionate, adventurous spirit and hipster glasses shine through the uniform and truly make her unique. Although we were all jealous when she frolicked through Germany for a semester, the many attempts to read her journal or steal her pumpkin brought us all countless nights of laughter. On Sundays, one could bet she was either reading poetry, relaxing in a coffee shop, or rifling through literature in an old book store. One day we will all hear that she returned to the Naval Academy to be an English Professor. Well, as long as she doesn't disappear to an old cottage in Ireland first... Although we are all going our separate ways, I'm sure the "circus" will find its way to Middleburg, Virginia again and we will celebrate the amazing friendships ghost walks have given us.

Stephanie Deboer

Navy Pilot

Deeeeeeeeeeeeeeeebort! If we were to think about the sweetest person at the Naval Academy we would think of Stephanie Deboer. Incumbent Wardroom savior, this 5' 11 Dutch angel will probably out walk you, but not out run you. She'll drop everything she's doing to help you with homework, and possibly even iron your shirts. She's brilliant, she's a baker, and did I mention that she's tall? Worried about our heathen soul, this Christian las from Northern California is the best roommate us two can ask for, although we could do without the flannel. Just kidding Steph you always look cute. Naval architect extraordinaire, she can function at full capacity running on 4 hours of sleep. You're ready for the fleet Steph, although pilots get more sleep than you do now. We love you girly!

Brandon Easler

Surface Warfare Officer

Grandpa Easler is the first Mid to graduate with a major in Netflix and minors in X-Box and Confederate History. When the "Big Easy" isn't ranting about the "War of Northern Aggression" or merits of triangle trade, he's stockpiling firearms and coffee beans in preparation for the alien Jaffa invasion of Earth- which of course is possible because he saw it on Stargate SG-1. Brandon is a spring break party animal, always bringing a new set of Kindle books to "drown out all the loud, obnoxious college kids everywhere." He woos the ladies with stories of his new bionic shoulders, decimated first after a brutal pugil stick fight; then by an intense sugar packet tickle fight. Big Easy will be a great SWO and is an all-around good guy and friend to all…unless he just started another 20 page paper at 9:00 the night before it was due. -Brad

Andy Felix

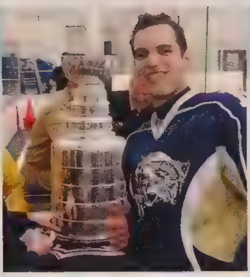
Navy Pilot

Andy, you've introduced me to so much: shock mansion, pidgin, and OOW/SDO swearing bass to name a few. Even in our nightly, politically correct, eloquent, and entirely thought provoking room conversations, you always slipped in good advice when it was needed. Thanks for the nickname, thanks for pulling me into the most easygoing room in the company for 3 years, thanks for being a leader in HI, NJ, and PA's unbeatable combined style and fashion, and thanks for being a great friend and a true Taylor. I'm glad you went Navy my boy—even though your gunny impressions are top tier. I promise I'll see you in the 808 soon. SHABBA!

Veronica Ffrench

USMC Ground

Veronica Jean Ffrench is the girl we love to hate to love. We love her infectious smile- We hate to see it on the martial arts mat. But we love our beautiful, funny companymate so very much. Veronica famously attracted suitors ranging from Texans, bodybuilders, Roundtree's and a nameless convicted criminal. Calling all men who want to be outran, out-lifted, and verbally reminded of his shortcomings. As a two-semester XO, Veronica demands respect, fear, but mostly love. Surely she's walked onto your heart like she's walked on to everything else. We know Veronica has the graceful strength to conquer her battles, hopefully she knows a gang of Spartans and her WorldStar sisters will always be there with the assist. Your letters will get mixed up with Edmonds' valentines, but maybe you can catch up to our favorite Marine on a rugged ruck run over the remains of shepard's heart



Aaron Fleming

Navy Pilot

"Flem. Flem Dawg. A-Aron. Sheriff of Lake McMully's. BDF to Jenna. The Coco-Loko. Claude Je Lefleu. A Junior Hockey veteran and UCF Golden Knight. Fast Eddy can be seen on a JumboTron at most non-televised sporting events. At the young age of 22, during his plebe year, Flem survived Bell's Palsy. According to head coach Mike Fox, he quit hockey sophomore year, but no one found out. On the ice Flem will go down in Navy Hockey history for most minutes played and his majestic swan dive in front of hundreds of intoxicated IUP fans. A NOLS graduate, a sea trials skipper, and shabooyah legend on road trips. Fleming is heading back to the Sunshine State to begin his aviation career. He'll be joined by his newlywed wife, Jenna, and his friends who will be mooching for home cooked meals."

Ian Gray

Submarines

"It is not the critic who counts; not the man who points out how the strong man stumbles, or where the doer of deeds could have done them better." The credit belongs to the man who indulges skim milk. Whose skin and face is golden. Who never needs his suits to be tailored because he is the manikin. His blood is GQ+. "Supe's list" came easy, but fashion killa' came easier. He can exhaust more special request chits to Ohio to entertain his Cancun love faster than the waitress who once responded to the "accidental" snap of his fingers. The German pride sinks deep in this one. Not Nazi deep, but deeper than any fathometer capable of measuring. For him, it's all German "err'thang." If there is never a vehicle built by the Volkswagen automotive empire in the rental car lot; you'll see him walking. We call him "skimmer." Shabba!

Caleb Haney

USMC Ground

Caleb came into the academy 4 years ago thinking his brother would help him out since he was a 2/C at the time. He thought wrong. His brother let him struggle throughout plebe year. He didn't even tell him to shave before reporting on I-Day. He ran cross-country and track for two years but dropped to just track for the last two years. He is an Operations Research major but contemplated going General Science several times. He ended up sticking it out and will graduate with well over a 2.0. He service selected Marine Ground.

Daniel Hurley

Submarines

Hailing from Wayland, Massachusetts, Dan came to the Naval Academy knowing only one of his classmates very well. A personable young man, he quickly made new friends. As Darth Vader said, "The Dark Side is strong." Passionate about intramural sports, Dan was the 4th string QB, Head Coach, and LVP of the flag football team, which made it to the finals, and promptly lost. Sometimes known as the Goose Guzzler or Boston Lightweight, he was famous for his stays at the Country Inn & Suites and his souvenir from Spring Break in Mexico. An Economics major and poet, Dan was successful in the classroom, leading to his eventual choice of the Submarine force. The silent service is about to get noticeably more loud. Dan was a leader among our class and will surely be highly successful in both his Navy career and whatever company he eventually becomes CEO of. JJM

Richard Hutyra

Navy Pilot

"Where's my stuff?! Where's my stuff?!" That was the first thing Richard said as he ran into our new room, lost, confused, and stressed, at the start of Plebe summer. Little did I know, I'd be rooming with him for the next few years and have to put up with his high stress levels and random hyper episodes. Then of course our reenactment of the Reformation just about every week kept our room lively, since the early alarms weren't lively enough. Oh how grateful I am to have watched him grow into the man he is. Richard is nothing short of inspirational. His intelligence, ability to focus, and genuine heart will take him wherever he wishes. I'm convinced the man can run the country. He's a gentleman in every sense of the word and has the work ethic of a warrior. Watch Richard "What more do you want?" Hutyra go.

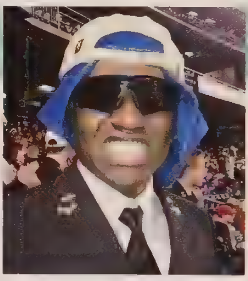
Alston Harper

Surface Warfare Officer

Mhmmm Brother, We all know how you are gunny's favorite. I remember when the Batt O made you cry. The time you caught me stealing your shirt. And of course the time you got the first brick. Not to even mention Killroy. A lot of funny memories with you bud. You might not have been the best quote on quote midshipman, but to me your going to be one of the best officers no matter what community you end up at. I'm glad I have been your roommate for 4 years. I'm going to miss the times we spent; and I am glad to consider you one of my best friends. The majority of our conversations are not appropriate enough for this but later MAAAAA

Darryl Lindie

Naval Flight Officer



Like a prawn from District 9, the self-proclaimed "Lin-Diesel" can be found during study hour on any given night shuffling from room-to-room telling people how busy he always is and "Tss Tss-ing" at his own jokes. When he's not leading the NSBE Panthers Chapter or vomiting at inopportune times during spring break, Darryl is planning the next happy fun time hosted in the basement of his house. He excelled during plebe summer from his chair in the P-Way, mastering the manual of arms before buying steerage and sitting at DryDock. Realizing that his greatest talent is hand-eye coordination, Lindie decided against a career in engineering for flying airplanes. As much as we like to tease, Darryl has a big heart and genuinely cares about the people around him. He's a great friend and even better fourth roommate. -Brad

Lucille Lu

Naval Flight Officer

Lucille Lu undeniably has the most idiosyncrasies of the 22d Company Spartans. On the rare chance we catch our California panda bear awake, Lucy is saying something outrageous and hilarious. Lucy famously boasts a guitar repertoire and stock full of Nutella and King Hall bread to outlast World War III. She still doesn't know she isn't an old, southern man. Lucille is an outstanding, dependable, honest friend. Hopefully she'll never know there are no first place rankings for friendship. Maybe we'll find Lucy retiring in the Chinese countryside, rooming with Chrans, or maybe we'll sit next to her on a bus stop bench eating box of chocolates. One thing's for sure, if we find her face down on the side of the road or in that legendary rice paddy, we'll know not to disturb her. She was probably just on a run.

Eric Madden

Surface Warfare Officer

Hailing from Georgia, Mad-Dog was rarely seen without a Coca-Cola in his hand. Eric was always prone to Madden attacks, and set the record by winning countless Eric Madden Awards, often with a 1% tip. Eric made one phone call more than all his classmates during plebe summer, ensuring his mom kept all the mothers in the cult informed. Besides Raul, the international program was never good to Eric. Although at times he drifted towards the dark side, he was always able to right the ship. His swimming career came to an abrupt end, but his contributions to the Ultimate (not a sport) and Fieldball teams were invaluable. Eric was always highly regarded by his classmates, and his friendliness and down-to-earth nature will make him a great addition the Fleet, as long as his ship doesn't run out of Coke.

James Mannier

John McLaughlin

Surface Warfare Officer

John showed up on I-day determined to become a Marine, a goal that changed I-day plus one. Nobody was sure where he was actually from, but he would never hesitate to say his future home will be on Pennsylvania Ave. Besides becoming besties with Gunny Firstie year, John was also besties with everyone in Dental, and he always had one less tooth to brush thanks to a classmate. Famous for making friends drinking and losing them sober, John would never take mercy in destroying your political opinion, especially if it was about the Kennedy Assassination. He also continued his track career at the Academy, typically running every weekday at 0530. If you were not too offended by his remarks, John made a great friend to anyone and his determination, sense of humor and wit will serve him well in the Surface Warfare Community, and maybe someday in the White house.

Nicholas Padleckas

Navy Pilot

Hugh, Hugh, Hugh. You are the most financially savvy individual in 22nd Company; I mean really, if you're not driving your loan, you wasted it! No one is really sure what you're going to service select… You speak like a pirate that belongs on the Surface, have a sheet of paper that says you'll be an Aviator, but we all know you want to be Semper Deep in the Navel Service. Truly though, your career at the Naval Academy has been stellar. You were a member of too many ECAs to count, sailed the seven Severns, and taught us that Character is only worth 4 stripes. Pensacola is soon going to learn the meaning of the phrase, 'Southern Gentleman'. With your dedication and work ethic, we have no doubt that you'll be flying jets one day, maybe even among the stars. Thanks for all the memories! 'Preciate It!

Walter Pope

SEALs

God. Family. Wrestling. SEALs. Since we first met at NAPS this is who you have been and who you will continue to be. My role model and my spiritual leader; I thank God every day that he allowed me to gain a brother in Christ such as you. I know that one day you will end up spoiling my kids with candy, television, and fun, but until that day I'll still count on you to answer your phone when you want, show up just a few minutes late, and point out every beautiful blonde that crosses your path. The SEAL community gained a true warrior. Continue to shine His light in the dark. "For I know the plans I have for you, declares the Lord, plans for welfare and not for evil, to give you a future and a hope" -Jeremiah 29:11

Ryan Rapada

Surface Warfare Officer

Ryan, king of the finer things in life: What you lack in alcohol tolerance, you make up for in style and your one of a kind ability to replicate any GQ photo shoot (your photo here will remove any doubt the non-believers may have). I truly believe you are the chilliest and most tolerant roommate in the Brigade. Thank you. Stay forever the freshest man in San Diego (and I'll be calling on you for style advice well into the future).

Elizabeth Rubin

Surface Warfare Officer

Eli is not in Kansas anymore, but found the lost tribe of Israel here in 22nd Company. The Rubinites fondly refer to her as Queen Bee, but you can call her green beans if you would like to make her laugh. Over plebe summer, Eli graciously implored God to "bless us, everyone." On the average day, Eli relishes Dagwood Sandwiches, but occasionally savors treats from the Cheesecake Factory. A strong support of club sports, Eli strives to close the varsity divide within the Brigade. When Eli lets her hair down, she enjoys quiet naps in Pussers. She minored in Japanese for an extra discount at Sakura, but the Korean owners appreciate her efforts nonetheless. The evening hours unleash her wild spirit, which dances like Beyonce and sings like Whitney Houston. Bold and vivacious, Eli Rubin will share her wonderful spirit with San Diego.

Mohamed Saudulla

Maldivian National Defence Force

So, where is the Maldives anyway? Don't you do it, don't you steal my Christmas. The Miller surprise inspections. Ladies' man. Deafness due to loud music. Heavy Metal is his thing. Ozzy Osbourne is his idol. Future Ambassador to the United States. Always an enthusiastic runner, exceeding the minimum time with no problem. Great writer, just not English, with an even greater passion for mathematics, especially calculus and physics. Hates to love people. Cold as ice, except when it warms, then he thaws. He is especially concerned about how his shipmates are doing, worrying constantly that they are being treated well. Fully aware of his surroundings and persisting that he needs to know what goes on around him. Loves his home country and his future wife, but what else do you expect from a Maldemon.

Thomas Shaheen

Surface Warfare Officer

Tommy! The Shaheen Machine! You are Huge!! Glasses and tucked in shirt, call him glasses and tucked in shirt man. The founder of "Tucked in Tuesday" and the legend for the 6th wing flood party. Sleeps like a contortionist and will never wake up to an alarm on his phone. We can never forget his leap of faith during the Cru Men's Retreat. However, Thomas is a true warrior inside and out who strives to encourage all. He is a brother, a friend and a child of God. May you have peace in all you do and stop to enjoy God's creation. "Your word is a lamp to my feet and a light for my path." Psalm 119:105

David Smith

Submarines

David hails from Chicago and breaks all stereotypes as a true Rastafarian, a reverend, being incredibly fond of the song "du hast", a tea lover who owned a cast iron tea pot, and both the MVP and coach of the Field Ball Team; also, we will never forget David Rage. A true believer in class unity, he formed an incredible bond with classmate Shaheen by flooding 6-1 and earning the first major conduct charges in our class. Early on in his development, he admired a Firstie named Pack, who gave him a pet bearing bear named BoBo. BoBo later committed suicide due to neglect. David was easy to make friends with, always giving others the benefit of the doubt. His life got direction: wherever there was Guinness. David will make an exceptionally fine Submarine officer and his classmates are lucky and truly blessed to call him brother.

Ashlynn Soellner

Surface Warfare Officer

Er mer gerd.....you've come a long way....a really long way. You bring a new meeting to the phrase "started from the bottom now we're here." Your growth is inspiring and you're the life of the party. You can always be counted on for a smile or a hug. We'll never forget your classic locker room dance moves. A lover of many Navy sports teams....and their gear. Good news Ash.. there isn't any crossing of bridges for ships. You'll be a kick ass swo. Were always down for a trip to "Taco Bell" with you. You and Ernesto are the most memorable on the team. (F.E.W.S.)

Gabriela Torres

Surface Warfare Officer

"Ecu-me, but in Mijhami ..." "My momma raised me...." Oh Gaby, your Latina fire is so strong, but we know you love those white boys....Norman. You are an amazing friend and roommate, and we have been blessed by your addition to 22nd company. 80's dance parties, 90's dance parties, explosive rants..."calm down, Gaby." The most loyal friend you could ever want. You may look like a thug in your issued beanie while running, but you will be an outstanding SWO! We love you and your salsa flair.

Taylor Vannatta

Naval Flight Officer

"Give it up for Taylor and the Band!" Tay-Tay, V-Nasty, Vnatz. Man of many names, one passion: worship. From CRU band to children's ministry at BACC, you are bound to hear Taylor strumming his guitar. During the week, Taylor is diligent in keeping me up to date on the latest internet sensations ("You need to watch this video!") and religiously finds time in his schedule to nap (his discipline amazes me). Whenever I'm down, he knows exactly the right words to lift my spirits. He always has time to chat and make someone's day a little brighter. Taylor is the beloved sponsor child of the Holians, St. Cyrs, Graves… chances are that any family in the Annapolis area is one of Taylor's sponsor families. Taylor "two babysitters, no babies" Vannatta, I am so blessed to have met you, and best of luck in Pensacola and then wherever God takes you.

Kenneth Williams-Pittner

Surface Warfare Officer

Attention on Deck! Fleet Admiral Pittner arriving! Laundry King of 22nd company and secret child of the mule. Makes love to random cones during runs. Twinkle toes on the dance floor. Loves his dancing partners. Carrier aficionado. Sleeps with his MQS book. Got a chit for sweating. Created Mikey. The fastest big guy you will ever meet. Personally watered a couple spots on Farragut. Make's it rain daily during the summer time. The king of eating grass at parades. Ask him to teach you how to dougie. If you get a chance ask him about ACME and his love of red bull and vodka. He loves to make cookies with a broiler pan. Egyptian specialist. Kentucky breeding enthusiast. Loves those Westpoint girls. Willingly going to Norfolk. Loves John with all his heart. Crazy is his fancy. Linda's Favorite. The one the only big man Pitt daddy.

Bradley Woods

Navy Pilot

Brrrrrraaadleyyy Wooodddsss "Should of, could of, would of" been a Marine if he had his third choice. Wanted it so bad that he switched spots with our GySgt. Some say he is among 22's top 10 CC's during "CO22.Class2014" tenure at USNA. Lindie, Wyatt and Harper's saving grace. If not for Brad, Gunny would have probably separated them over that failed room inspection. Get 2.4 beers in him and he will literally destroy everything you own. Favorite Mascot: Army Mule. Still wears issued briefs. Might be an astrophysicist after his pilot stint because undergraduate degrees are of no real importance. Never undermine his authority or you will be placed in Bradley's Inferno. He came. He saw. He did whatever he wanted. Hard to get along with sometimes but easy to love. The first to make Admiral in our class. Ill be your Goose any day. -Lindie.

Brennan Wyatt

Surface Warfare Officer

Brennan Wyatt turned down various offers from Division 2 Middle Schools to come play basketball at USNA. "Weight Room" was a common chant from his fans on opposing teams. Balled so hard all the second class wanted to fry him. D is for dumb shit. But "Hypocrisy is what the Naval Academy is about." "You were like my child (that went over well). Never hesitates to borrow your stuff. 6107 led the Brigade in swag and bravo failures. Harper's better half. Most positive restrictee at the academy. ALL OF THE LIGHTS. Street lights, flash lights, HEAD LIGHTS. Did 60 days with a smile, except the 3 that Gunny was SDO. Training Officer? Will drive a ship before he drives a car again. Probably the most excited for Graduation. Heart of gold. The fleet is not going to know what hit them. They are going to love you out there in San Diego. Your boy, Lindie.

Martin Zuber

Surface Warfare Officer

Having evaded Immigration and customs police for all four years, mini Maldonado is heading off to the USS Russell in sunny San Diego. The California burrito population will take a hit while Zuber feeds them to the Sumo Wrestler that lives in his stomach, but their grass will be so much greener. Hopefully he will also meet the elusive chinchilla because he is one of a select few who can communicate with it. While his love of CS/IT will call him away from his desert roots in Texas and his loyal camel, a little bit of that sand will always be with him. California is claiming this skinny, fat, Texan, illegal alien but Huber…….Zuber will always be in the thoughts and prayers of his familia and friends.

Navy Pilot

Joseph Delorenzo, was born and raised in New York City. He struggled to get the right rooming situation, but when he did, it was great. He is by far the best swordsman in the company. Always the life of the party at Brad Paisley concerts. He was even given a special position in plebe summer because of his great laundry folding skills. He is always there for someone when they are down. He likes to have fun and hang out with his classmates. Always a loyal friend that will do anything for his classmates. I am sure when he gets to the fleet he will take care of his people. If spring break was any indication, I am sure flight school will be a blast for him. He is a lifelong friend and I know his career will be successful. He is like a brother to me.

Mark Atkins

Submarines

The biographer of this astounding midshipman writes under the watchful gaze of the monstrous machine behind him whose strange beeps and neon lights have kept him up night after night. It is safe to say that Mark gives the Chair Force a run for their money, having spent most of his college experience in a sitting position. When not leading the nation in cycling, he can be found on his Hal9000 computer hacking the Pentagon with his CS skills, wifing up on Oovoo, or commanding a legion of profane, misogynistic 12 year olds on Battlefield 4. May the force be with him as he prepares for Echo Company at TBS, even though he's already validated it #TBSOnline, and may his future wife have patience when cleaning up after him #CurtainsCan'tHideTheMess.

Andrew Beeler

Surface Warfare Officer

Having sailed before he learned to walk, Andrew Beeler was truly rocked in the cradle of the deep. Andy comes from the lucrative land of Michigan, where he enjoys smooth hits by Eminem, and the violent rhymes of Jimmy Buffett. When he wasn't representing the United States at the sailing world championship, he could be found honing his skills on a Sailing Simulator, learning politics from Kevin Spacey, or arguing with his roommates about climate change. Learning from the most motivated trainer in modern history, Andy served the Hellfish as Training Sergeant, Training Officer, and world's greatest detective, in an order that would surprise you. This Starboard Battalion Commander will represent Port Huron, Michigan well on the USS Chancellorsville.

Casey Bolena

Surface Warfare Officer

Stephan Bristow

USMC Ground

Stephan "Don't Tase Me" Bristow hails from the snowy peaks of CO Springs. Of course, if you're tall, blonde, and well endowed, he'll say he's from Dallas, 'Bama … roll tide, Ireland, etc. The first bear ever to come to Annapolis, Big Daddy cuddles like a boss, but deep inside there's a stubborn heart that took him through a screener with a shoulder held together with nothing but John Wayne quotes and Christian values. This community servant is fiercely loyal…especially to his roommates (his longest standing relationship). Even when the law (read haters) is against him, Breezy will fight tooth and… tooth for his shipmates. A friend to all and a "lover of love," Bris is always there for his brother, brothers, and the brothers. When he's first to plan, he's last to go; but when he's first to go, he's last to know. "Saddle up" Big Dog. We'll sail again.

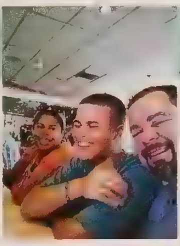
Mario Colon

Naval Flight Officer

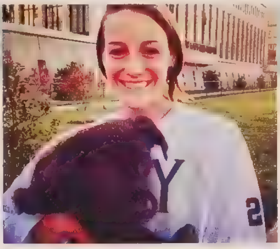
Mario Colon, hailing from Swansboro, North Carolina, the Caucasian Puerto Rican American. If he had any famous last words, it might be "No dude, I'm not angry, it's just my face" or maybe they'd be "No, I'm really listening to you, that's just my face". A great drinking buddy and one of the best friends anyone could ask for. A fan of dancing, cooking in Mother-B (and clogging the sink with corn), camping, or blasting dubstep out of the speakers he got from some firstie at the end of plebe year. All and all, a good dude, although his Youtube video choices may concern you... And if you ever tell'm a story or try to talk, just remember he really is listening. It's just his face. Honest.

William Cortez

USMC Ground



Coming straight outta Compton, a hydrated motivated killing machine by the name of Will "Gunny" Cortez. Though he originally boasted the nickname E2-C, his tenacity in calls for air support from the CMOD desk and leading fire team assaults across the deck earned him his current honorific. A devoted student of history, warfare, and Ari Gold, his effort in the classroom is surpassed by only two activities: the acquisition of gains and sleeping in order to maximize those gains. If you happen to see a mid in MacD getting some cardio in, doing crossfit, and using the Smith Machine, that's not him. But he's close by, laughing at this forever frail individual while building biceps in the Church of Iron. His most prominent feature, besides his chin, is the steadfast loyalty he shows his shipmates and his value on honor. A true Guatemalan, friend, and Marine. Live large, die large.



Alexis Cowing

Navy Pilot

Alexis "Lex" Cowing has a contagious laugh that can be heard throughout the halls. She has filled the hall with pandas, hippos, bears, and a "moo cow". More than once she has suggested getting a room dog, but since that didn't seem possible she resorted to meowing…all the time. She spent her hours playing on the lacrosse field and sleeping and socializing and watching TV, occasionally doing some school work. The baby of the company she still found plenty of opportunities to have a good time, just ask her about youngster year. She has a huge heart and is quick to smile at everyone she meets. Fly high little birdy, meow!

Eric Davids

USMC Pilot

"Happy" Eric Davids burst from the quiet serenity of Boulder, CO to leave Brad and Annie for the steely grind of the Naval Academy. Eric's naive optimism was nearly crushed over plebe summer until we proved to him the Naval Academy was actually fun and games. Boston, Philly, Charlottesville, and DTA were close targets of opportunity, but nothing will beat late-night honey butter chicken biscuits in Dallas. Eric can always be counted on for a beer or two at McGarvey's--especially before an important interview. He proved to us that driving a Subaru and picking up girls aren't mutually exclusive. Always willing to give a big bear hug to cheer you up, Eric's glowing personality can break through the darkest of the Dark Ages. We are positive that Eric's Marine "war smile" will melt the hearts of even our most dedicated enemies. Good luck in the UK and to the shores of Tripoli, I'll Sail Again.

Robert Davis

SEALs

Robert (Danger) Davis, known by most for his famous, throaty "Mmmmrrrrreeeehhhhh" has spent the majority of his tenure at USNA watching Les Twins, mimicking Les Twins in the mirror (when he forgets his roommate is in the room), and listening to a playlist comparable to a teenage girl's. However, despite his usual shenanigans Robert can do no wrong in the eyes of his company mates. He was a tyrannical plebe summer detailer earning the fear of the plebes and the justice of the brigade conduct system. A wrestler by trade and a SEAL select, his only real fear is of cross country runners, who he insists are the toughest guys on the yard. His colorful email monologues and flashy watches will be missed by his company mates. Although he is math major with a minor in youtube, we all know Robert is destined for great things in life.

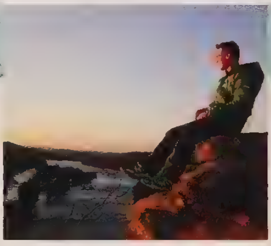
Aaron Dougherty

Navy Pilot

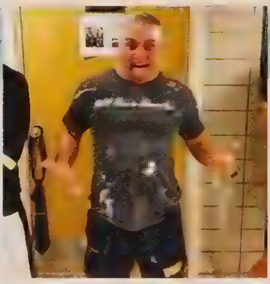
Aaron Dougherty is a dedicated and proud Dr. Pepper drinker, and Texan. He has an expansive list of talents that include his wide-arm span, avoiding the conduct system, searching things on the internet, and playing flight simulator. His extraordinary success in these abilities, however, did not transfer over to hand-eye coordinated sports, lucky for him he won't have to play basketball in the cockpit. Aaron's advice on topics, such as life, are as valuable and amazing as his skill in landing an F-18 on an aircraft carrier simulator after a night at Castle Bay. His roommates enjoyed his company and soulful talks enough to room with him for three years, also his girlfriend's mint cookies were also a huge plus. Aaron will make a lasting impression on the Aviation community, as he has in 23rd Company. His friends will miss his witty one liners and saying A-Aron.

Jared Edwards

Navy Pilot



Jared was born in the rainy, green, wine and pine of the Rogue Valley, southern Oregon and came to the Academy after a year at the Oregon Institute of Thuggin Out (Technology). Dubbed "Professor Science," Jared gave up his former life of standard college truancy, frattitude, and stealing traffic signs to spend four mild-mannered years sacrificing his social life and vitamin D intake for engineering homework and Wikipedia. When not busy with his studies, the Professor went to great efforts to help his classmates to succeed in school, from helping them cram for tests they would later outperform him on to lending his typing hands to a blinded PRK victim with a paper to write. A great friend (probably the reason many of us graduated) and promising future Naval Aviator, we're just glad he made it off the rock wall during plebe summer. Good luck on the flight line Professor.



Casey Escamilla

USMC Ground

When Casey "Cat V" Escamilla, a.k.a "cheese wheel" amongst those who know him best, is not eating or dominating the Jiu-Jitsu mats he is hibernating in his bed, especially during the winter, which is not ideal for the native Floridian. Having the logic needed to be successful in computer science, he likes to think he is right about everything. He is in fact right about everything, as long as everything means food. Always the first to help someone in need, he often finds himself needing help looking for things like his ID, learning how to be slightly more organized, and even more people to go to happy hour with for wings at McGarvey's. After a few drinks he will tell you exactly how it is, if you can manage to understand him. If you had to sum up Cat V in one word it would be loyal.

Kevin Flaherty

USMC Pilot

Kevin "The Littlest" Flaherty, has been swimming his way through life since conception. Unable to rely on strength alone, Kevin has resorted to asymmetric tactics from Atherton to Naptown. Born of Carol and JJ, they thought he would follow in Brian's footsteps, until he met "The Meatlocker". When not upholding standards, Kevin can be found searching the halls of Mother-B, Bob's bathtub, O'Neill's, DuPont Circle, and Antarctica, looking for his long-lost chin. "Dónde está el club?" No stranger to sleeping outdoors, Kevin will undoubtedly excel at TBS, but it's no French Riviera. This jet-ski enthusiast discovered the Jäger-Jack-Jäger, but he still can't look Captain Morgan in the eye, or Major Acevedo for that matter. This future Marine calls his living room to attention every time JJ walks in and always maintains the grooming standard in the Flaherty Manor. "The strong do what they may, the weak suffer what they must."

Ryan Fowler

USMC Ground

Ryan "Special Agent" Fowler's favorite season is undoubtedly the summer. Perhaps this is because of the fond memories he holds of shipmates helping shipmates over Plebe Summer, but more likely it is because of a chance encounter he had with a certain "Summer" in San Diego. From summer to summer, Ryan developed into a real live devil dog during his years at the Academy, and hopefully his gender will never again be questioned on the obstacle course. After dabbling in Drum and Bugle Corps and Semper Fi Society, Ryan found his niche senior year in Bob Wall's entourage. Through it all, Ryan was both a caring teacher and an avid learner. Ryan would frequently lead lectures for plebes about social science skills such as locating Afghanistan on a map, and policemen would teach Ryan about open container laws. Ryan was a good friend to everyone, and that's what's most important.

Joseph Gallagher

Navy Pilot

Hailing from Walpole, Mass, "Joey-Bag" is the proud son of Big Mike and Lolly. While he may have escaped the docks of South Boston, he couldn't escape a nautical path. Self-proclaimed fitness expert, dietician, financier, and lady-killer, Joey proved that the Naval Academy really isn't all that hard, if you're smart enough. He was always willing to lend a flannel to a friend in need, but Joey's been known to ruin more than one photo…and a set of dinner dress whites. No broom can withstand his wrath, nor can the shower floor, the walls of the Fleet, or the stall at the O-Club. His biggest regret is not going to ring dance. If you ever need a wingman, he's willing to help, he'll even jump on a grenade if need be. Naval aviators will love this meathead, but not as much as he does.

Obakai Grandisson

USMC Ground

From the gritty streets of Newport, Rhode Island to the cobblestone walkways of Stribling, Obakai Grandisson, known by his stage name, Oby-G, has captivated audiences with his lyrical wordsmithmanship. A future Marine Ground Officer, he displayed his killer instinct as a plebe every morning meal when he shanked his table's Naked Juices (In his defense he did save his squad from some seriously extended head calls.) This mild mannered frenchmen, a political science major, became highly interested in foreign affairs during his firstie year and will continue to make mature decisions. As Oby prepares to join the fleet, he'll continue to rep his hometown of Chesapeake as he garners attention. Until then, Officers, take your ranks off, take your ranks off.

Kennan Healy

Navy Pilot

Kenny "Narpmaster" Healy, loves to brag about how good Rockhurst was at sports, but suspiciously never mentions playing any. Oscar and Mary Kay reluctantly sent their son forth from the bubble of Leawood, KS; wherever that is. Kenny leaves his mark everywhere he goes: Little Italy, Broadway, The NY Subway, The DC Metro, Eurail, London, Joey's back, our floor, Kevin's lap and Buzz-lightyear. Any weekend Kenny can be found wandering the streets of Arlington on the end of a leash. He may hook left off the tee, but Kenny definitely makes up for it with his short-game. Despite lacking a neck, Kenny has earned the favor of every O-5 and above on the yard. The Naval Aviation community will be lucky to have this Maverick wannabe, if Julia will let him.

Daniel Hibert

USMC Pilot

Born and raised in San Diego, his excitement for snow plebe year quickly wore off. He began at the academy when he was only seventeen because he's way too smart for his own good. He turned 21 halfway through 1/C year, meaning he had plebes who were allowed into bars before him. He majored in aeronautical engineering, and if that isn't already nerdy enough, he's often seen staring at birds, reading books, or watching Star Trek. Someday he'll be on Jeopardy! and win some money for all the random things he knows. He's always wanted to fly and (accidentally) got picked to be a pilot for the Marine Corps. "Marine Corps, yut yut! Semper fi! I love it!" Daniel loves ranch doritos, Sakura, orange soda, airplanes, cheezits and skyping with his fiancé, Marin. His multiple talents will serve him well as a Marine Pilot and leader in the future.

David Matasic

Surface Warfare Officer

David Matasic is a fratboy at heart. The picture above depicts a boy who truly thinks he is the best and will stop at nothing to prove it. There is a direct relationship between the count of libations and his athleticism. Any sort of competition will be lost given a challenger have the nerve to contest him. A stranger to no one, Dave knows probably 95% of the brigade. Any night out in DTA can be characterized by knowing everyone in every bar and buying drinks for anyone. Dave's dedication to himself is overshadowed by his dedication to both the lightweight and heavyweight crew teams. He countlessly sacrificed his body, and order of merit for the team. Dave Matasic is truly the all American people's man. There is no doubt in anyone's mind he will make a great leader, Surface Warfare Officer, and friend.

Sean McDonald

Navy Pilot

He will always be remembered in our hearts as our captain…or should I say "captain retired", our fearless leader who holds several titles: from the NCAA record holder for being offside, to making 1st All-American Hide and Seek Team. It all began with the night we found out that only one man can truly make him "climax" to his full potential on and off the pool deck. From there we realized that he didn't have enough "HOPE" and "CHANGE" that memorable night to go the distance. He has proven to be handicap accessible where the lights had to be on for FULL effect…or that one night where he couldn't work an ATM, so he decided to "take a nap" to remember his pin…but nothing trumps his REAL title…Sean "the fisherman" McDonald, known from the east coast to the west coast as the premier catch and release fisherman… reels 'em in and never texts them again #partypooper #battcdr…we love you…#hipster #seesteamcaptainDISMOUNT #SBPCB2012 #hideYOcellphones #AZ3WAY…almost ~love Navy Water Polo

Christopher Pagan

USMC Ground

Chris is one of those guys that always knows a guy...and has a loosely defined plan. Whether its Brad at Castlebay, Greg on 6-2, or some random people from 1st Reg that turn out to be pretty cool, there's always something to do, and his plans...well they're always good stories and usually a good time. Chris is the kind of guy who keeps his house open to all, and the Pagan's know how to make people feel welcome, from good food to a good dog, Rocky. No matter what happens, Chris is there for you, even if it's just to share the drinks and the long drive to the game after your 21st birthday.

Colton Peterson

Submarines

Bob and Pat don't deserve this "Meatlocker" resident. "Skeet" has been the pity project of 4130 ever since a woop broke his heart and crushed his motivated high-and-tight. No one ever fried him for his six-pack of tallboys, but I'm not sure there is a MIDREGS violation for a rhino-back either...As a dedicated Mech-E, he occasionally forgets to keep the ratchets in the toolbox. "Have I reached the bottom yet?" No, Colt, you haven't. Here's another barrel. Never afraid to whip out his opinion, Colt is the loudest member of "The Meatlocker." Forget friendship and love, Skeet gets by on dip, cigs, and Makers. Uncle Bob has never been more happy to see a mid graduate. Maybe Colt will live up to his little brother's legacy in Charleston. But he's gonna need a bigger fish tank.

Gregory Poser

Submarines

Greg aka Gucci Mane was and always will be the best dressed man in the Newark County Jail. When Greg goes out, all he wants is artichoke pizza and the French toast from UMD that he pays for with his 80 DOLLAR WALLET. Greg was never afraid to go for the big fish in Washington, or the young sister fish in Annapolis #summerseminar #fridgeisstocked #brettfarvejersey. Greg always had the hottest whip, literally on fire, yet he wasn't afraid to trek through blizzards to get home #stilldrunk. Always looking to have a good time, Greg was not afraid to break out Oasis on the piano or use his funnel by the French sign. Greg was in such great shape, he was ready for a PRT in any pizza shop in New York. That lovable hipster that with the Black N, Greg is most importantly one of the best friends someone could have #bromigosforlife.

Michael Raffels

Naval Flight Officer

Michael Raffels hails from Seattle, Washington. His interests include tennis, weight lifting, computer repair, running, and dogs. Mike spent much of his academy time slaving away at his dysfunctional computer. Fortunately for him and his roommates, Mike has a natural ability for fixing electronics which frequently would malfunction when Mike used them. When he wasn't fixing his electronics, mike could be found living up to his happy-go-lucky character. He enjoyed outdoor concerts and watching episodes of Rizzoli and Isles. Despite his large biceps and traps, his infatuation with Macklemore makes many question his manliness. Not only can he quote all of his songs (for the most part) but he is regularly found wearing his "My City is Filthy" tank tops. Aside from his quirky mannerisms, aviators everywhere should look forward to a great NFO joining their ranks.

Allison Reitmayer

Medical Corps

The 23rd company putzfrau can commonly be seen cleaning and cooking, mostly fantastic baked goods. This San Diego native still day dreams of the beaches and sunsets back home but has a special place in her heart for Annapolis. The soon to be doctor has been hiking in Wyoming, a slew of national parks, and through the woods of good ole Quantico, Virginia. She's a little scared of heights, but she'll climb a bear tree any day. Her unfailing positive attitude and outlook on life only adds to what an amazing officer she will be. She might be slightly obsessed with Marine Lieutenants, fossil products, and her coveted cookie butter but is always willing to share everything she has. She keeps her family, friends and her faith close to her heart. We can't wait to see you in the fleet Doc…just not in an official capacity.

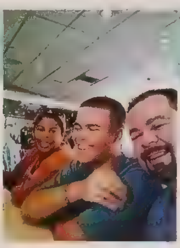
Sean Rynning

USMC Ground

If he is not sleeping in his rack or practicing knife-hands in the mirror then you can bet that Sean Rynning is correcting or teaching underclassmen to yut. The physical epitome of a marine, with 10 inch guns and long distance running Sean can be seen running away from the fight faster than any other marine. Whether its weight on his back or pitching in to expedite work, Sean will always stop what he's doing to finish an episode of Sons of Anarchy. Coming out of the Academy with a Bachelor's in Science and Netflix, Sean can be counted upon to be seen by his superiors taking time out of his schedule to counsel his marines when he is really delaying the work day explaining the his obscure TV quotes. Clearly it needs to be said no more that Sean Rynning is a role model, and "my hitta."

Justin Shelton

Navy Pilot



The man, the beast, the legend, SIIIINBAAAD! Justin Howard Shelton is hands down one the best people you will ever have the pleasure of knowing. Referring to himself as "The Half-Breed" ever since he was a small boy, Justin has always had, what some might call, "a dark sense of humor." That being said, despite his sarcastic nature, he is both very sympathetic and willing to listen. Never take his empathy for weakness; growing up in Detroit, Michigan and standing at a mere 6'2", he is ABSOLUTELY the kind of person you want to walk down a dark alley with on your way to a sketchy bar. At the end of the day, he is both a strong person and a fierce friend whom is always there when you need him.

Michael Troncoso

USMC Ground

Possibly the greatest enigma at USNA, Mike "Chief Wahoo" Troncoso is a true contradiction. He's the dumbest smart person and the fittest fat person we know. He somehow finds the time to sleep 25 hours a day, eat half the Oreo brownies in KH, and complete an undergraduate education at Ohio State (even though his girlfriend's name will be on the diploma), all while maintaining a 4.0 and an 8-pack of abs. If you're within view, the loveable Tronc is bound to invade your personal space and if you're on the Yard, his piercing laugh will invade your ears. If you can't find him in his chair, he's steaming a pattern in the hallway talking to the other half of his 2% (just to clarify, it's the destination that matters? Not how many roads it takes to get there?). Glad we pulled you from the reactor core. Semper Fi Chief.

Valerie Tucciarone

Surface Warfare Officer

Valerie Tucciarone (aka Jackie Chimiak's Best Freyand) is a force that cannot be described in a mere few words, or even this entire yearbook. She is a feisty chica who has lived in Chicago, Vegas, and Texas who enjoys a good night on the town, painting pottery, drinking wine, eating sushi and let's not forget about getting glammed up in those stilettos. If Val isn't enjoying the items mentioned above, then she can usually be found in the gym lifting with the power lifting team (she can squat more than half the guys here at USNA). Val has been an active MIDN here at USNA and has seen it all. Val has had her time of being academically UNSAT and has seen her friends "screwed by the system." Because of her experience and the people she has met, I know Val is going to make an awesome SWO mama!

Justin Versteeg

Submarines

While at the Naval Academy, Justin Versteeg quickly and conclusively decided many times what social role he would fill during his four years. Initially, it was clear that he would fulfill all the requirements of a band geek, when he faithfully served in the drum and bugle corps for as long as it was convenient for him. He then discovered his true calling in life was to be a computer engineer, because only computers seemed to truly understand him. But his computer abilities allowed him to calculate the true path to inner peace, and so he became a jock by joining the fencing team. And as a jock, being a physical specimen, naturally chose to be a submariner. As everyone knows submariners are notorious for their athletic abilities.

Igor Vladimirov

Submarines

Born and raised in Communist Russia, Igor Vladimirov was trained to become THE "one-hit wonder." When he decided to come to the States, he knew he wanted somewhere sunny and warm unlike the mother land he had left behind. He decided that New Hampshire was the ideal place to settle. Struggling with the language, the education, and pretty much everything this country threw at him, he landed a spot at the Naval Academy. He loved it, including all those great restriction days and that fancy sweater he earned. He knew there was no way he would ever step foot on a submarine after Protramid. Upon commissioning, he will be a proud Marine; Submariner that is. One day this behemoth of a man will settle down in that sunny land he wants with a sweet southern belle and a beautiful, muddy truck.

Ellie Webster

USMC Ground

Ellie Elise Webster is a vixen of epic proportions, if you haven't caught yourself staring at her at some point in the last four years then... I don't believe you. What you might not know is that this model-esque creature is a speed demon marathoner, an adorable book worm and a lover of all things precious and cute (insert photo of baby animal here), which would surprise you if you've ever caught a glimpse of her in her plebe training days -- and If that didn't scare you, then nothing will. This Reno, runner, reading girl is about to make the Marine Corps an "infinity" times better.

Thurgood Wynn

Information Warfare

John Wooden once said, "It's what you learn after you know it all that counts", and the Naval Academy certainly taught me a lot after "knowing" it all as an incoming freshman. Our character as individuals is molded from the multitudes of adversity we face. The greatest thing I have learned in life is we all will fail, but it is how we respond to those failures that determines our successes going forward. My backbone has and will always be my God and family, and their love and faith has guided me on a challenging but amazing journey. This is but a step on the spiral staircase of life. Thank you.

Hailing from the Northern tip of the Empire State, weighing in at 155 pounds of steel and sex appeal, you'll hear him before you see him, the best in the business…it's Ben "Bojangles" Zeiss! This Devil Pup is the first to service select Marine Corps after surviving a Plebe year supply corps dive. Of course this is not the only adversity he overcame, as his forbidden fruit were always an easy target (Beeler…this means you). Yet against all odds, his constant presence in the Company made him a staple in our hearts and minds. He's the fastest gun in the East when it comes to helping out a friend in need and supporting his family in the nation's capital. However, don't let his recent sanctuary in Washington D.C. fool you; you can turn the man away from the Empire, but you can't remove the dark side from the man. Stamp.

Gilesa Allison

Submarines

Gilesa Allison isn't only one of the smartest people I have ever met; she's one of the most quirky ones as well. She's going to OWN power school next year and kill it as a Submariner in the fleet. Her life's anthem is a collection of K-POP songs that I have miraculously memorized…despite the fact that I do not speak Korean and have never actually heard them played out of speakers, just as the noise that escaped her max-volume headphones. She's a great person to have a conversation with, so much so that we often go without sleep just because we love talking so much. Whether in a fencing match, or on a test that you studied all night for and she forgot about, she'll kick your butt. Always. The best marine's a submarine! RAH!

Ryder Ashcraft

Submarines

Ryder Ashcraft hails from Kellogg, Idaho, famous for nothing but confusion with the cereal brand. A hippie from birth, she takes her name from the Grateful Dead song "I Know You, Rider." A true child of the Earth, she enjoys eating plants, playing with her pet llamas, and fantasizing about saving sea turtles. Ryder loves all things green so much that she service selected submarines and will spend her next few months in a place without mountains, snow, llamas, or vegetarians. Even though she threatened to blackmail her roommate once or twice, it was always out of loyalty, and her friends have come to know her as an incredibly caring and dedicated person. The submarine force is lucky to have her, and she will no doubt make a difference in the Navy and afterwards. And if somehow we end up on a submarine together, the world better watch out.

Jordan Bennett

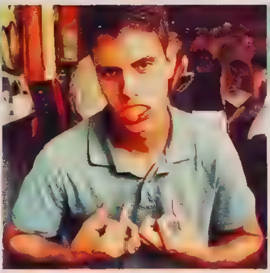
Submarines

Jordan Fenway Bennett was a proud member of the 24th Company family. He hailed from the mighty state of Michigan and brought his passion for the Detroit Red Wings to the Naval Academy. This passion was second only to his love of female midshipmen. From the start of his academy career, it was clear that Jordan would accomplish big things. Other than being Weapons Detail Commander and Company Commander, he excelled at self-induced sleep deprivation, quoting movies, and watching hockey. Always full of energy and fun, Jordan was known to cause a ruckus with his friends in downtown Annapolis and parts of Philadelphia. Proudly earning the nicknames JBiebs and JBAM, he was a terrible influence and a great friend. Jordan has left his mark on a lot of people and will always be remembered by his friends.

Thomas Brown

Intelligence Corps

Thomas Brown, Grand Old Man of The Corps (Intelligence Dominance, that is), alias Richard Diamond, is renowned (notorious?) for many… how do you say… accomplishments(?)… as a Midshipman. Unfortunately, he spent more time as a demoted underclass than not. Despite numerous surgeries and general physical degradation due to old age and the rugged life of a devil dog-turned-sea warrior, he spent the past three years focused exclusively on the physical mission. Only show muscles though – "the back is the legs of the upper body. Don't bother with either." His time-management skills are remarkable, balancing long hours of napping, complaining, restriction musters, attending class (?), and "dental appointments." Knowing he would be restricted from an illustrious career at sea, he managed to fulfill his "Passion at Sea" over summer cruises, notably aboard YP's, but also other vessels. If ever there was an example of leadership and moral fortitude, it was you.



Grant Buckley

Submarines

Grant Buckley, aka young Buck, aka G baby was destined to be top gun with his swagger and alpha male persona. Fortunately for the rest of the male race he was selected to lead from many leagues under the sea. If he wasn't spitting up cake pops or sun bathing at night he was taking scalding hot showers and somersaulting down hills. Grant and the Red Sox both had a curse until the Red Sox broke theirs, until that day this bio will live on with the utmost accuracy.

Meghan Connor

Navy Pilot

"Meeeeeghaaaaan Connor!" came to the Academy from northern Virginia's town of Alexandria with a pole vaulting spot on the women's track team. At the beginning of 3/C year, Meghan finally came to her senses and traded in her pole for a pair of running shoes as she joined the women's marathon team. Meghan fit in perfect with the team, enjoying the ice cream, Cheesecake factory, wine and Amish market outings the girls went on. With her high grades as a chemistry major, her high positions within the Battalion, and her numerous volunteer hours, it's hard to believe Meghan wasn't a "Joe." Meghan is known as an outgoing girl with incredible baking skills (you can ask anyone in her company who has tried her delectable "poo poo" balls). Always willing to try new things like horseback riding, skydiving and skiing, it only made sense that Meghan service selected Navy pilot.

Marcelo Davila

Ecuadorian Navy

Han pasado seis años desde que todo empezó, desde Salinas hasta Annapolis. Gracias a Dios y a mi familia por su apoyo incondicional y por estar ahí cuando los necesite. Grandes amigos y memorias que quedaran por siempre. Tantos Teques y sudor derramado, tantas horas de estudio y de proyectos que al final valieron la pena para conseguir el título de Ingeniero Mecánico y de Oficial de Marina. Corsarios 2012 – USNA 2014

Joel Elenbaas

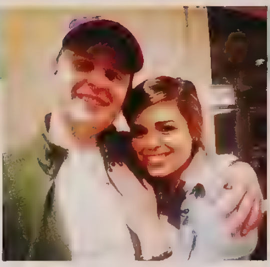
Submarines

I still don't think Joel has ever gotten into a confrontation. He's probably regarded as one of the most agreeable, winsome young men at the Academy. I got to know Joel the best while we spent most of our sophomore year in room 6331, the quintessential "youngster" experience. He spent these days tending to his greatest academic achievement: a model wooden boat that was used for his Introduction to Naval Architecture class. I don't believe it won any awards, but Joel would sand that boat with the gentle compassion that a mother shows her child. I bring this up because I believe Joel's work on this boat symbolizes his loyalty as a friend, one who shows unyielding compassion without ever expecting anything in return. He possesses an innate unselfishness that must only be capable of twins. I look forward to seeing just how much he will give to the world.

Hunter Gaskins

Surface Warfare Officer

Hailing from the bedrock of high school football which is Birmingham, Alabama, Hunter Gaskins is one of the most passionate, funny, and loyal friends anyone could have the pleasure to know. He is the kind of guy that can easily fill a five, ten, or even fifteen minute time period if you get him going on a story. Not a bad deal sometimes. Wait until he tells you about his unfortunate run-in with a possum in his back yard! Anyway, Hunter is going to be a great Surface Warrior and the Navy is lucky to have him. Fair winds and following seas.



Jared Griffin

USMC Pilot

All the SEL's on the yard call him "Gunny." This dog was tamed when he found love in a hopeless place…#yellowfever. This young blood went to see Avicii and got attacked by a vampire. Falls off the bed and gives up, but it's okay…he's British. Cramps make him cry and he is definitely Scho's favorite player…el presidente de Mexico. Notorious for "saluting" the refs. Reigning Bucknell banana champion. Yell "falcon!" in a game situation and watch what he does. Gets assaulted by a cop in Arizona on the pool deck. The Clawwww. Sick tattoo dude…Infidel. Cheetah's high roller. Expert on Teddy Roosevelt. Japanese: A…English: F. Loses every suit he borrows. #hideYOcellphones. We love you, Gunny.

Rachael Honrath

Surface Warfare Officer

Rachael Honrath is a feisty lady that will put you in your place if you mess with her. Her blunt honesty is a respectable quality, as is the tenacity with which she attacks any project put before her. Her excellence as a squad leader has given her the opportunity to excel and her semester as Company OPS left her with a few wisps of grey that she swears weren't there before. Her beastly running skills never cease to amaze people as she laps people on the PRT, going from chair to track with no preparation. She will always be there to make sure you don't become a hermit and force you to go out for friend bonding time. You're going to be a great SWO-tivator and I hope to run into you on the seas! Good luck in everything Rachael!

Christian Horr

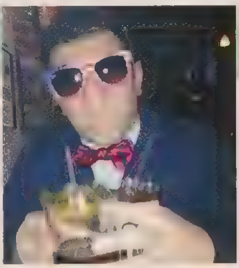
USMC Pilot

Texas boy, born and bred. He is a great friend and an even better roommate. From the crazy times in Ft. Lauderdale to the debates over who was the best SEC football team. Cody loves to have a good time and he knows how to work hard. The sleepless nights will pay off in the future, so will the squats. Born to a Marine, he's following in his Dad's footsteps and heading down to Pensacola after TBS. Anyone would be lucky to call Cody their friend, but only a few of us are fortunate enough to call him our brother. We know you'll do great things as a Marine Aviator. Good luck in all your future endeavors.

Jose Iglesias

Surface Warfare Officer

From rolling socks to keeping sleeping bags rolled on a stupidly fast hike, these four years have been an unexpected journey. Whether it was camping during a storm and searching for a MacDonald's during a power outage or winging it after busting the radiator, we always found a way to jam to an un'orthodox' verse. Hurricane running of any kind will never compare to that run down the hill in DC.



Bahaa Joudieh

Lebanese Armed Forces

So here's the thing, there never was nor will there ever be a man as loyal as Bahaa Joudieh, or as unrefined. Affectionately referred to by the locals as "Judy B", this habibi can often be found prowling the depths of DTA backing up buddies and rescuing damsels in distress. And when I say depths, I mean really deep and really dark. When he's not listening to the latest 90's rap songs or doing his research this man can be found putting himself through The Screener, of which he boasts a 100% pass rate. Regardless of how near or far his foreign commitments take him, the crew of 24 will always keep him close in heart and mind. After all, some ships are wooden ships and those ships may sink, but some ships are friendships and to those Bahaa will always drink.

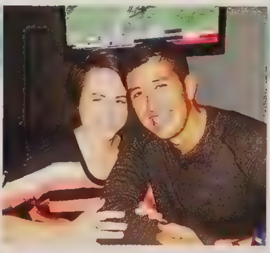
Nuclear Surface Warfare

YP's and Baltimore in whites. The capital lawn and a phone call from Jeff. Skyline drive and park rangers. Camping anywhere we could find. No talking before seven. I-ball, Key West and Nawlins. Tailgates and our plan to go on all the football MO's. Patagonia and Apple products. How does Duke fit so perfect in every song? Man we spend too much time together. Your one of the smartest guys I have ever met and we all cannot wait to see what you do in the future. It's a privilege to call you my best friend. FBSB.

David Lorio

USMC Ground

"God, grant me the serenity to accept the things I cannot change, The courage to change the things I can, And wisdom to know the difference."



Christopher Masters

Submarines

Christopher "Epitome of Evil a.k.a. Mastass" Masters came to the Naval Academy as a promising young Georgia man full of that "southern" charm, proper etiquette and protocol that excuses any awkward and inappropriate comments made behind closed doors. As the strongest, faith driven man in the Brigade, Chris has found time to be a member of the Offshore Sailing Team, enjoying his mojitos and Monte-Sano's. His faith has also led him to become a frequenter rider on the D.C. metro and occasional Harcourt Irish taxi. Remarkably never finding himself in any trouble, his love for the police and the system was always apparent. Chris is a proud member of the 2% club with his girlfriend Andrea Dorsey. Hopefully this subMARINE Corps member will be able to stay on the straight and narrow, eventually purchase a car, and resist any urge to touch his nose when he gets to the fleet.

Patrick McAllister

Surface Warfare Officer

Member of the exclusive cat family. Number 1 Renob in the brotherhood. Rick Dobbs appreciator. Will feel right at "home" stationed in San Diego.

Kelsey McCullough

Surface Warfare Officer

Kelsey is generous, patient and caring. But when the nostrils start to flare, and the knife hands come out, you better stand down, because she can be stubborn as hell. She's got a beatific smile, a great snorting-laugh, and a warm hug when you need one. Kelsey has a huge heart, but on a more serious note...she has a big butt and I cannot lie. That other mids can't deny. When Kelsey walks in with a watch belt around her waist, and a round thing in your face, you get sprung.

Samuel Oat-Judge

Nuclear Surface Warfare

Sam, or Samantha (if you're into that type of thing,) hails from a part of the country where it is acceptable to wear bowties with any outfit. TFM, dude. From the moment we met you over Plebe Summer, West and I knew we'd hate you because you have two last names. Fortunately for you, we overlooked this egregious offense because our GPA could use the help. From bar crawls that bear your name and likeness, to consumption of your first legal drink in a hotel bathroom, to your cleaning of our beloved toilet kitchen, you've truly had the hardest time at the Academy since John McCain… or more likely his kid. Good luck in the surface community, because when you get a star, we'll be able to blackmail you.

James Petersen

Surface Warfare Officer

Meow, I'm a kitty cat and I dance dance dance and I dance dance dance. James is a man of many trades. Hailing from the quaint town of Mt. Airy, MD, he is a superb salsa dancer, Mexican chef, and ardent cat lover. After his time in the Navy as a SWO, he'll most likely be seen working in a taco cart on the streets of San Diego surrounded by 20 stray cats. In his free time, he plans to work on his book, Memoirs of a Pirate.

Krishnan Rajagopalan

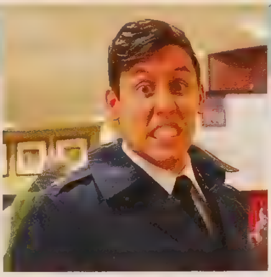
Explosive Ordnance Disposal

First meeting Krish, affectionately referred to as Krishna by Amma, he seemed as to be a shy, awkward plebe that only focused on Academics (talk about a good first impression). However, after plebe year, he decided to change things up a little. The resulting pie chart was a 50% focus on academics, 25% focus on running marathons, 15% focus on talking to girls (that was the hope, anyways) and the last 10% went towards watching Netflix series with the roommates. For the past four years, he's matured a lot and has become self-dependent. He actually bought his own flights for his senior spring break all by himself without Amma's help (from the money she gave him though). On a more serious note, I'm honored to call this guy a brother. Best of luck in the future, but for now keep in mind what we do when we're not Beating Army.

Arthur Schexnaydre

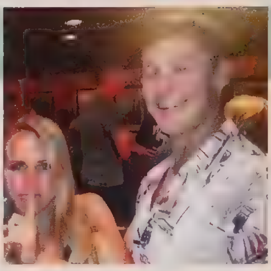
Surface Warfare Officer

Born on the crest of a wave and rocked in the cradle of the deep, Arthur Francois Schexnaydre has wanted to be a Surface Warfare Officer for as long as he can remember [His brief infatuation with the Marine Corps ended with the announcement of mandatory morning workouts]. Though his time at the Academy was largely spent driving large trucks and kicking butt in the Computer Science lab, he will be best remembered for breaking the school record for most parades missed by a non-varsity athlete. Notorious for his "4-chords song" renditions, enviable bandwidth consumption, and incredibly difficult to spell last name, Arthur has been both an outstanding midshipman and a great friend. He will be sorely missed here in Annapolis, but the USS Tortuga will be lucky to have him. Good luck Arthur, we love you!

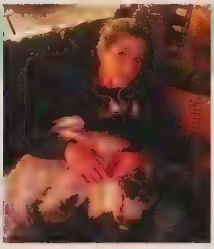


Trevor Shafran

Navy Pilot



Sup. The name's Trev. Trevor is a golden child from Great Falls, VA who defeated all odds in getting into the Naval Academy. Consider it an honor if Trevor selected you to read this bio aloud to him. Trevor can usually be found drinking a much better beer than you're drinking from an oversized stein, surrounded by a group of his closest friends, all of whom he is ignoring so he can talk to the girl who has decided to find out why such a good looking young man is wearing mom jeans. From Newport to Annapolis, Trevor is a bernie's veteran who has truly marked his territory during the course of his travels. Now he's off to Pensacola, and you can bet that he will soon be staking out his domain in Florida, until he achieves his lifelong dream of running a restaurant.



Haley Sobrero

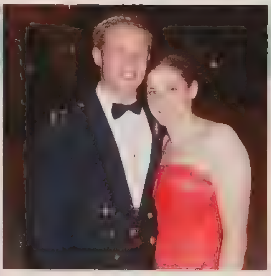
Surface Warfare Officer

As an avid participant in Honor staff, Haley Sobrero dedicates most of her time to investigations and her major (Honors English). When walking through the halls, most would notice her RBF (aka CBF) and quickly take measures to avoid her. On those rare occasions that she does smile, everyone runs because they think something is very, very wrong. Once you can get past all of her scary aspects, she is a great friend and will be there for you when you need her. Haley did well in school and she will be well prepared for the Intelligence Community. She will make an outstanding officer. No matter her path, Haley will undoubtedly end up back in Montana with her Australian Shepherd.

Patrick Sopko

Navy Pilot

Hard working with a big heart, Patrick Sopko will do great in anything that he does in the future. With his fast pace running and big butt to follow him, nothing can stop the momentum that he has once he gets going. Whether it is doing a bicycle pass or killing it in DC, Patty Slopko is nothing short of a legend. He is not afraid to share on New Year's and will always be the light to any dark situation. Patty is a great friend and the aviation community is very lucky to be gaining such a great guy.



Julie Stabile

Submarines

This tough girl from Boston arrived at the Naval Academy, ready to defend her sports teams to the death. It didn't take long for people to realize that they shouldn't argue with her . . . because she always wins. Don't try and burden her with difficult decisions such as picking a major, or a service selection, or a dinner choice, because the process is a struggle. That being said, Julie has the straightest moral compass in the Brigade as evidenced by that 5 stripe billet that took her away from her beloved roommate of 3 years. Having been best friends since day 1, I wouldn't take a second of it back, except that one concert . . . It has been a pleasure being initiated into your family, and I can't wait to see you conquer the world in the next 20 years.

Ivan Subialdea

Surface Warfare Officer

Ivan hails from somewhere quite resembling the middle of nowhere, Alexander, Maine. Probably to make up for living with trees most of his life, he is usually seen building/using some uselessly big computer, surrounded by excessive space coolers to counteract his severe intolerance for any amount of heat. Ivan will be commissioning into the Surface Warfare community, and hopes to eventually make his way back to the woods of Maine, though in the meantime he will drive ships, play videogames, and invest heavily in air conditioning for his new apartment in Norfolk.

Roscoe Thomas

Navy Pilot

Roscoe "Mainer" Thomas greets every day with the speed of a mongoose and the agility of Spiderman. While Roscoe's passionate vigor extends into many areas of his life, he is by far, most committed to maintaining the legend of "The Great State of Maine. Plebe year he appointed himself as Company Maine Education Officer in which he educated his classmates with stimulating and unique facts about his home state. Ross dedicates his nights to keeping his roommates up with his Aero homework and his weekends to the Sailing and Skiing Teams. He occupies what free time he has, by babysitting his roommate at the local bars. His hard work paid off, and he earned himself a Navy Pilot Commission. He is hoping for fighters but will undoubtedly succeed in his community no matter the platform. His roommates suggest the call sign of "Mainer" or "Lob-Star."

Cody West

Surface Warfare Officer

It is not the critic who counts; it is by no means enough that Simple West should be a capable mariner. The credit belongs to West who is actually in the arena, who makes 1 AM "bathroom" runs every night, whose face is marred by dust, sweat, and mold (patrol). He is a gentleman of "liberal" education hailing from a Strong Island family of "learned Dentists." Never forget Jake or Ken - we all know Garrett won't forget either. You like reminding us that you've gotten more out of the Academy, taking the same classes multiple times. Although a savvy investor, you still manage to get swindled for $190.76 on cream at a kiosk. Whether rocking Tims and a tank or Tims and a "dank" suit, we've learned that you can take the boy out of the Island, but you can't stop him from running his mouth about New York.

Brian Williams

Surface Warfare Officer

"Bwill is thy name.....General Science is my game....I've had some ups.....I've had some downs....passing swimming...turned my whole life around."

Paul Winston

Surface Warfare Officer

Paul, Winst, Pauly, P.Dub, Wooze or whatever name people seemed to call him finally completed the Naval Academy 5 year graduate program. He was constantly reminded by his roommate THE B.WILLY that he looked like Colin Kaepernick, Obama, Tony Dungy, Tiger Woods, Kobe,and other random people. He loved football and being a football manager even if it meant breaking a few bones here or there M4L. He was always the relaxed one and never let anything get him down too much, even if he fell victim to the infamous "Neck Tab Fever". He loved his 24 family and is off to the Salt Life as a SWO.....from the great Homer J. Simpson "I'm in an abusive relationship with life, it keeps beating the hell out of me, and I'm too cowardly to leave it."

John Yoon

Navy Pilot

John Yoon or "Jooooooooooooooon" is a conniving character through and through. Hailing from the tiny island of Saipan (no one knows where it is), some of his favorite pastimes whilst at the Naval Academy included messing with people, pulling pranks, and spreading rumors. When he wasn't doing this, which was never, he would be busy randomly chatting with people in their rooms (including plebes). Joon was almost never seen doing homework. This is because he was busy setting the school record for "Most miles walked through 6th Wing during Study Hour." He solidified his record with over 9,000 miles logged, all of which were performed with the "duck-footed stance" so indicative of the Joon Swag. Simultaneously with the aforementioned record, Joon locked in "Most room visits per day per year." Joon was a loyal and funny roommate to 1/C Griffin, but also was a de facto roommate of every male member of 24th company.

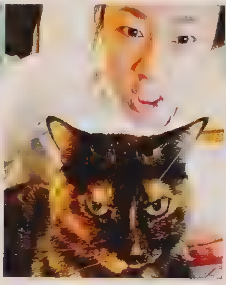
Kimberly Bernardy

USMC Ground

Kim is known for three things: the depth of her altruism, regal decorum, and her ability to hunt down deals. Kim made her bones in the MAG. Her endless e-mails about public service opportunities left you slightly ashamed yet somehow inspired. Fact is, her heart is three times bigger than the average mortal. Kim's bearing is impeccable. During Plebe Summer, some thought she was actually a cyborg. Most don't know it's because she descended from a line of Californian royalty. Her proper title is Princess; address her as such. Believe it or not, Captains and Commanders salute HER on Stribling. Kim is a Groupon hound. But when she's not sneaking of to a discounted Hot Yoga session or filling her room with tchotchkes, she's where you need her: at your shoulder ready to help. She will make a fine Marine Corps officer. You'll find no better friend, no worse enemy!



Sharon Bong

USMC Ground

"Meow", "I'm hangry!", and "I want to dance! Let's go to Fed House! Am I glowing yet?" are just a few choice phrases that you can hear Sharon uttering throughout the week. Although she thinks like a cat (naps on her desk), she tends to eat like a dog (Chipotle and Easy Mac non-stop) and walk like a penguin (only when it's cold). She is always up for learning something new, be it in class, ice skating, having her first dub tub, or visiting a museum. Sharon does what Sharon wants and if you disagree with her you had better be ready for her bone chilling death stare. She's a sassy, truck driving betch who I wouldn't have gotten through the Academy without. She is truly a great friend and will be a fantastic Marine officer. – heart, your almost roommate

Alfredo Bouchot

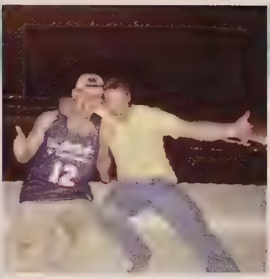
USMC Pilot

With his uncanny ability to get excellent grades without studying Filthy Fred had to find other ways to utilize his time. He truly set out to achieve the USNA mission of moral, mental, and physical improvement. He was constantly seeking "gains" and found ways to "pump" up not only his physical appearance but his self-esteem. He was able to swoon an undisclosed number of Federal House employees with his new direction in life. Fred brought a bit-bull mentality as an OG of the 6-4 locos. He may or may not have participated in the attempted burning of a CMOD. A man of morals, Fred always protected those who needed shelter on the 6308 couch. Whether munching on boxes or training plebes Fred was always committed 110%. He will be a great Marine Corps Aviator, but will always be a rage cager.

Aaron Brantley

USMC Ground

The man is forever known as Brantley-Brantley. Bestowed the honor of wearing double name tags over Plebe Summer, he has lived up to his reputation of being a knowledge- seeker. Since the days of memorizing Reef Points, he has been engrossed in History courses…and LOTS of independent research. Many of days and nights were spent discussing conspiracy theories, guns, corrupt agribusiness ….and, oh yeah, writing history papers. He is a motivator by blood-his dad was a Marine! Yet, do not expect him to do anything even the day before a deadline…he lives for the last-minute tasks. An intellectual to the core, his great passion is food. Look no further to find fermented lemonade, raw milk, and homemade bread in Bancroft! Here is to the best dressed man at Leathernam! No matter where Aaron goes, his open heart and mind will serve his Marines well.



Robert Brubaker

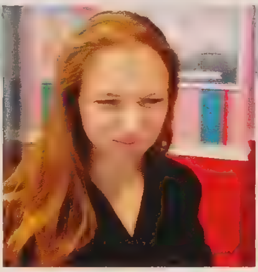
Explosive Ordnance Disposal

Robert McGovern Brubaker, hailing from the watermelon capital of the world, known to many as Robby and to fewer, or more depending on the gender, as Bob. But ladies of the Brigade, this Darth Vader is no villain. An avid Halo player, he's garnered many awards in his DTA weekend contests in Slayer, including two Killing Sprees, a Running Riot, and countless Double Kills. Rob, a fourth-year member of the Combat Arms Team, will tell you himself that, although the shoots are on Saturday mornings, he only competes for CAT on Saturday nights. These unique characteristics have allowed him the opportunity to service select Explosive Ordnance Disposal, an honor that has been heralded by colleagues, superiors, subordinates, and even famous celebrities like Kevin Spacey. A helluva Midshipman, it's scary to think how good of an officer he will become.

Nicole Castro

USMC Pilot

Nicole "Fidel" Castro may be the shortest Marine ever, but what she lacks in height she makes up for in calves. Fidel "Nacho" Castro is the nicest person and her laugh could make even 3/c Billy smile, but if you're on her bad side she greets you with the stinkiest of stink faces. Nacho "Nicky" Castro's fashion sense ranges from stylish Christmas cat sweaters to moose socks, which is her typical outfit for DTA. It gets her plenty of free drinks which she throws back like a champ, and after a night out you can always catch her sprinting through the streets because alcohol makes her run (please for the love of God stop running!). Her constant sass and attitude will be missed in company and on and off the pitch.



Jack Chang

USMC Ground

An ancient Taiwanese prophecy holds that once every Year of the Horse, a warrior will commission into the world's greatest fighting force: the United States Marine Corps. Jack "Jackknife" Johnson Chang is the fulfillment of this divination. Little known to the public, George R. R. Martin drew entirely from elements of Jack's daily life in creating the Dothraki horse lord Khal Drago. Undrawn to the lofty aim of occupying the Iron Throne, Jack is content gliding freely upon the waters of the Potomac in search of record cats and sleeping in his tent warmly beside his Khaleesi. Rivaled by few in the ways of the bow, Jack the Ripper proudly skins his kills and tans their hides. Many a Bancroft mouse adorns this hunter's corkboard. Quick to apply a lifesaving tourniquet or to give you "ten minutes," Jack Johnson is above all a kind and loving friend. Semper Fi my sun and stars.

Conner Dempsey

Navy Pilot

Conner James Dempsey, hailing from the land of minivans and where people refer to fizzy drinks as "pop." He's tall, dark, and handsome, except he's not dark. Conner's a ladies man. Females get lost in his deep blue eyes and feel warm and fuzzy inside when they count the muscles on his muscles. He's smart, yet his default state of mind is dazed and confused. Conner also has random spurts of aggression causing him to flying ninja kick doors down and smash cell phones into a million pieces - that's right he's really done that before. He's a Buckeye at heart and he never loses faith in his mighty Cleveland Browns. He's going to be a superb Navy Pilot one day because there aren't any cops to cutoff in the air. Seriously though, he's going to be a damn good pilot. Fly Navy!

Patrick Durkin

USMC Ground

If you're not chill, stop reading this. If you think you're chill and want to keep reading…whatever. Because real recognize real; and to be honest, you're looking a little bit unfamiliar. If Papi were to preface this biography, he might utter something similar. Chasing the swell, finding low key jams, and turning in his latest antibiotic prescription have always been his passion. Say something funny, he might chuckle. Say something actually funny, and you'll get that classic Papi laugh. Take a peek into the bed of his Silverado; you might find a surfboard, some dirty socks, and the remains of a regrettable evening. Take a look into Pat Durkin and you'll find a grounded, hardworking individual, who is incredibly easy to talk to. Just do Papi wherever you end up, and there is no doubt that you are going to kill it.

Matthew Grimm

Explosive Ordnance Disposal

Never before in the history of the Naval Academy has one man dedicated more time or attention to detail to his diet than Matthew "Son of Randy" Grimm. A mythical man of epic proportions, his large, lumbering legs were once prophesied to fit perfectly in the command chair of America's finest submarines. Instead, Matty opted for the road far less traveled. The EOD guys are lucky to have him. Whether he's running in a bomb suit or kicking down doors with those huge tree trunks, we all feel a little safer around an EOD officer who can easily shield you from the whole blast. He can pick the M&Ms out of his trail mix and sort them by color, how hard can it be to defuse a bomb? Good luck out there brother, watch where you step (and what you eat), and remember, "Too much hooyah will do ya."

David Hall

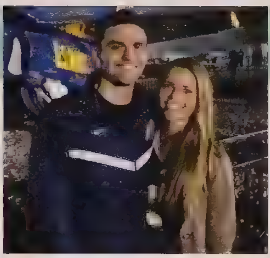
USMC Pilot

David "Which one do I choose" Hall is an outstanding Midshipman and star member of the golf team, David spends most of his time lifting weights and complaining about his body. In between protein shakes and shots of creatine, David is often debating which female companion tickles his fancy for the evening's texting conversations. Since his high school days, David has never had a knack for breaking up with females and often sends an emoji ridden text message to complete the job. While this makes him seem like an undesirable candidate for a relationship, David is more than capable of planning extravagant vacations which he ends up not going through with. There is no doubt in any of his friends' minds that he will most likely drop his air contract in the hopes of becoming an infantry officer. Counting Bodies Like Sheep. -SF

Benjamin Huggins

USMC Pilot

The Dark Lord came to the Severn shores looking for the Mid-life, but instead he found the thug life. "Oh you have Mr. Pibb? I'll take Coke then." Snigguh hails from Tejas, the proud state where everyone's fixin' to do something, all sodas are "Coke", and he won't hesitate to tell you Yankees that he ain't sorry about it. His commitment to the Texan way of life is admirable. He can be depended on to make the smallest incidents large, and the largest incidents cataclysmic. He is a connoisseur of pizza, burgers, chicken tenders, and any real 'Murican food. Not many people know Snigguh like the way I had the privilege to. Snigguh is one of the most genuine guys I know, and his loyalty is unmatched. He will serve his God and country well as a teufel-hunden, and I will gladly fight and drink by his side any day.



Brynmor Hughes

Intelligence

The King of the Light Up Gloves comes to us from sunny San Diego California, and he will never let you forget it. Brynmor is a class act in all sense of the word. As a future political leader, he will be here at the end of the world to save us all. Bryn put in four years of hard work to the Navy Football team and has contributed more than his humble soul is willing to acknowledge. His post-Pussers speeches, while ridiculous, are perfectly constructed and he delivers them is as eloquent as a British noble. a good way to remember Brynmor: as an amazing friend who would crawl through hell (after putting up an ORM) for you. He will be a great influence on anyone that has the pleasure of meeting him as his integrity and strength of character knows no discrimination! Fair winds and following seas Bryn. Splaata Muh!

Nathan Hughes

Submarines

Nate Hughes is the embodiment of the American dream. An elderly Chilean immigrant, he has risen through the ranks at the Naval Academy, and will soon have enough money to be able to bring the rest of his family from overseas. An avid outdoorsman, he can often be found in wilds of western Virginia, shooting squirrels, trapping beaver, and living off the fat of the land. That is, of course, provided he has not taken the three-day to go abroad and see the "missus." Nate has been an indispensable addition to the Bearshark family. If you are lucky enough to find him, you will see a devoted friend, a caring leader, and a humble source of wisdom. His four years here by the Severn and his two years abroad have served him well. He will fit right in with the silent service, and we look forward to meeting him again.

Christopher Johnson

USMC Pilot

Nebraska born and corn fed, you may not know it but Chris actually took a three year hiatus from the gym. The soccer star is pro at just about everything: school, sports and friendship and even boxing, you just need to get a few beers in him. Although some may know him as #GoneByMorning he will be mostly remembered for #FIFA and #HangingWithTheBoys. CJ is going to be one of the top Marine Pilots in no time, he has crushed the Academy, the only car he can't fix is his own. After the military, you will find Chris in a Log cabin in the Swiss Alps, living his Pro-skiing dream. Many people don't know that CJ is a family man at heart. He already the name for his children, Sconer and Greenie Jr. Ain't nothing wrong with that! Undoubtedly, the Corps just got a little stronger. Semper Fly bredda!

Thomas Krysil

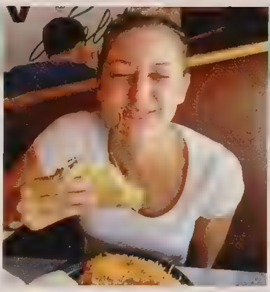
Submarines

Bink! Bink! What can be said about the "Duck" that hasn't been said by CBS sports already? The resident Bostonian adds the fire to the boys of the light side, 6411, with his broad spectrum of emotions. Through thick and thin you will find TK beside you unwavering in his loyalty, ready to stand up for his brothers at any time. If not on the ice or in DTA you are sure to find him at his sponsor's house snacking on Mac and Cheese. Tommy K will be a great Submarine Officer not doing things we won't hear about off the coast of countries we don't know. We are all on our way out buddy. Act accordingly.

Kelly Maw

Nuclear Surface Warfare

This North Carolina sweetheart and self-proclaimed soccer mom painstakingly spends most of her time trying not to look like a midshipman. As a Group 1 major, one can typically find Kelly holed up in her room not doing homework and avidly watching Korean soap operas or pinning cute clothes, guys, or puppies. She avoids King Hall like the plague and instead prefers singlehandedly funding Chipotle. Always on the prowl, this track superstar loves her some 15 minute ab workouts to keep her rockin bod in tip top shape. Kelly also dabbles as an aspiring wine connoisseur; in fact, she usually must taste at least a whole bottle to fully experience its essence. Fair winds and following seas to this bubbly Nuke SWO mama with the biggest heart I know. Next stop: Yokosuka, Japan! – love, your favorite Asian



George McClymont

Submarines

Jorge/George hails straight from 8 mile in Detroit, Michigan but fortunately bears zero resemblance to Eminem. Always known for his incredible sense of style, he can be seen wearing the latest trends (when not in SDBs as of the late), but don't let his "put-together" act fool you. If you ever want to have a weird time, you should just give George one beer, or if you are feeling risky, even two. Hilarity will ensue. He will do any of the following: force feed you animal crackers angrily, disappear into the streets of London, or gain a sixth sense for ghosts. Due to his affinity for responsibility and wealth of experiences, he left big shoes to fill as 25th company ADEO. George has a huge heart and genuinely is THE nicest guy you will ever meet. The submarine corps is lucky to have him, and Charleston will be a much more interesting place soon enough.

Pierce Niemiec

Naval Flight Officer

Whenever I arrive at our room after class, the door is always conveniently locked. A devout Catholic, Piercey-boo has a fondness for exotic females, especially ones he would never date. He incessantly gripes that the Naval Academy had robbed him of his prime, condemning him to a life of celibacy. A proud Na'vi who drinks beer like a baby fawn, he is a frequent patron of the Sly Fox when he is not praying to Ewah for "The One." There's no such thing as excessive Old Bay. He attributes his Ursus-like strength to deer antler sprays and male Clydesdale extracts. His charismatic personality is irresistible, and his thirst for whiskey unquenchable. Pierce is the most loyal and best friend anyone could ask for, and he'll indubitably go on to conquer his ambitions in life- that is if he can figure out how to use technology. You will be missed brother.

Scott O'Brien

USMC Ground

Scott came to 25th company from Hawaii by way of Taiwan. Nobody actually knows what took him so long to get here, but a couple of people are glad he did. Scott can usually be found trying to know everything. He is better at pro-knowledge than all of the plebes combined. His calm demeanor and sub pin lead everyone to think that he's soft. But, deep down Scott is a fighter, just like his rainbow warrior ancestors. The Corps is lucky to be getting a guy like him.

Gregory Oh

Navy Pilot

Gregory "tactical-carry" Oh always distinguished himself amongst his peers by his unmistakable high-and-tight haircut and his ability to make shims on a moment's notice #PlebeSummer. Though most of his time at USNA was spent on menial jobs such as Company and Battalion XO, Greg's true passion lies in dodging bayonted rifles and getting the smell of New Jersey off of him. Gregory can always be found at your local Starbucks while enjoying this month's latest edition of J. Crew Catalog over black coffee. His fashion sense will allow him to fit right in to the aviation community. We know that Greg will excel at anything he sets his mind to, be it flying or starting up his own private security firm.

Blake Roper

Royal Military Regiment

Young Blake came to us from the far away land of Jamaica. The Pirate of the Carribbean himself has 99 problems and they are all women. Known for his thick accent and many talents, music included, Blake has never met a sport that he can't get hurt in. A legend of the hot tub at Pete's, his friendly attitude always brightens the day. The most photogenic man you will ever meet also never sleeps. Ropes crushed the EOD and SEAL screeners, and is an avid Boston Bruins fan. Although he may be a spy, we are lucky to have had him here, and just hope he finds a job someday. Harry is one of the most genuine people you will ever meet. We hope you find a home housecat. Bink bink. Bumboclaat

Mark Santamaria

Surface Warfare Officer

Mark "Jabrone" Santamaria has mastered 8 different languages, but English is not one of them. He has been known to jet set across the globe and has been flagged by the CIA as a potential terrorist for his time spent in Morocco. He has spent most of his time at the gym with an unquenchable thirst for larger muscles. On the weekends Mark spends most of his time with his soon to be fiancé Shelby whom he loves almost as much as he loves himself. Hopefully in the future, Mark will learn that open container laws do exist and horses run faster than people. How is that Turkey getting cooked without the baster?

Bryan Schmidt

Navy Pilot

I
the
PENN STATE

Bryan Robert Schmidt, more commonly known as "Schmidty," has often been considered more Renaissance man than midshipman. Hailing from State College, PA and having an extensive group of friends and ex-friends alike, Schmidty has never failed to find a place to "mark his territory" while on weekend up there. Bryan, a four-year letterman on the Navy Sprint Football team, used talents acquired from Penn State football camps back in the day to help anchor the offensive line as well as provide statements to the courts. Brilliant as they come, Schmidty aspires to run our nation's economy correctly someday, because, as he put it, "someone has to." Following his grad school education at John Hopkins, Bryan will be moving down to Pensacola to attend flight school. Voted Most Likely to Succeed by room 6408 in 2012, Schmidty will undoubtedly be in the running for Top Gun soon enough.

Skyler Schneider

Naval Flight Officer

After four years by the bay, this strapping young Texan has finally managed to tackle every obstacle that Ward Hall has placed in front of him. He has risen through the ranks and joined an elite squad known as the "top 10%" - those who use the most bandwidth in Bancroft Hall. In addition to his cyber skills, he has learned just about everything there is to know about the economy and is well on his way to reaching his ultimate goal of being the "Slug of Wall Street." From "bumping his bass" to his MAC-truck like snore, Skyler aka LT Wolfer's presence is always known. If you see Skyler walks through DTA at night, houses go up for sale. Anyone who's spent a night out in town with this man and has lived to tell the story, should consider them self one lucky individual. He may not make it to every formation on time, but I assure you this man will NEVER miss a happy hour. PS: Please come down to main office to pick up cookies.

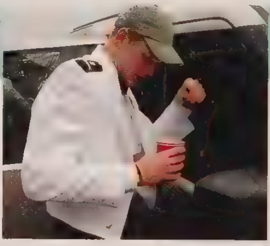
Patrick Sokoloski

Navy Pilot

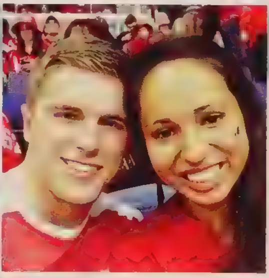
Patrick "My Dad Knows Him" Sokoloski looks forward to flying E-2C Hawkeyes. First up, last down, hooyah Naval Aviation. Oh you didn't know that? See, the thing is, Pat just wanted to thank his parents for buying his G37s brand spanken new. For some reason, there is a "necessity" to make it even better. Patrick spent most of his time working on his massive triceps. Always ready for a night out on the town Patrick has acquired a fine taste for beer meaning that as long as it comes in a can and is cold he will drink it.

Jacob Spaulding

USMC Ground



The first thing people notice when they meet Jacob "Danger" Spaulding is his tall stature and southern drawl, but there is much more to this Alabama native than meets the eye. The son of a Marine and a school teacher, Jake has affection for the Marine Corps and local school teachers. However, his one true passion is Alabama Football. After he serves in the Marine Corps, Jake plans to take his talents to Tuscaloosa and play quarterback for Coach Nick Saban. When he's not preparing for this role by watching highlight tapes of recruits, he enjoys playing FIFA and watching movies. Jake's persistence in all aspects of life is well documented. He has reached celebrity status in 5th Batt for his ability to obtain any movie before its release. And although banned from a certain town in eastern Alabama, he keeps going back. A man of many talents, Jakes greatest is his ability to make people laugh in any situation. Beloved and respected by all who know him, Jake will undoubtedly make an excellent leader of Marines.



Brianna Valladares

Naval Flight Officer

BriBri/Jaguar Paw has always put forth her best whether it be mentally, morally, physically, or most importantly socially. She could strike up a conversation with absolutely anyone and everyone. A nicer, more understanding person you'd be hard pressed to find. Not to mention, her signature laugh can be heard all the way down on 6-0. The past 4 years show she is always up for an adventure and down for a good time, whether it is jet setting off to Europe or even a short road trip to God-forsaken Ohio. Summer training was her strong suit (never had YPs but ended up in Parisian embassies). She PROUDLY selected NFO and we wish her all the best. We hope you pick up flying A LOT easier than you picked up driving. At least there are no buildings to sideswipe in the sky..."In the end, only three things matter: how much you loved, how gently you lived, and how gracefully you let go of things not meant for you."

Kris Ward

Navy Pilot

A myriad of words can be used to define Topher: refined, considerate, kind, and classy are not among any of them. Never the less, Kris came to redefine what it means to be a true Kentucky Gentleman: A hard drinking, lady lover, with just enough charisma to make it all work. If Kris' first love was his boy's and a good time, then his second had to be flight. An aeronautical engineer by trade Kris will go on to make an excellent Naval Aviator. In the future, when Kris is brought up in smoke filled rooms, his friends will remember him and the many hazy stories associated with him, most of which are unfit for print or the ears of anyone under the age of 30. Stay thirsty my friend.

Eugene Yang

USMC Ground

Eugene Yang was born in the hipster-filled suburbs of Berkley, California. He is always intrigued on crushing the next biggest challenge including taking strictly cold showers to rejuvenate his skin, doing Sea Trials 4 times (why!), or going on long hikes with only King Hall snacks. Along with his academic pursuits, Eugene has put in long hours researching the "Big Yang Theory" in the sweat-filled walls of MacD by picking up heavy things and putting them back down. While riding pandas on the other side of the world, he found himself as a leader and the next chapter in his life will involve books on books on books. A Rhodes Scholar Finalist, Brigade Commander, SEAL Screener finisher…Eugene crushes anything he puts his mind too but learned many lessons along the way…Too much Hooyah, will do ya, beer stimulates the mind, this is "MY" pool and MREs do not treat the digestive system kindly. See you on the other side brother.

Jonathan Zurita

Surface Warfare Officer

Jonathan "Loves the Haters" Zurita when not working on his vehicle Jonathan can be found perusing the internet for more stickers. He once dreamed of being a high flying Navy pilot but will instead find himself cruising the blue oceans from Norfolk to the Mediterranean. Jonathan found his calling upon seeing the movie "Battleship." He collects model ships and floats them in formation in the bathtub with him – ready for the SWO life. Where did that $2000 dollars go? Oh wait – we know (and it wasn't the car). Let's talk about girls.

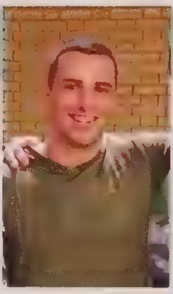
Zachary Braida

Surface Warfare Officer

Zach's journey over the past four years has taken him to new heights. From roaming the halls of Rickover as Narc to becoming a role model on the Honor Staff to tearing up the Mac-D Racquetball courts and endless Bicep curling in the 7th wing gym, he has certainly left his mark (and his nickname - "Bicep Braida"). Now he is ready to go out and make his impact on the world. This California boy is leaving Annapolis's humid summers and frigid winters behind and heading back to his home state. The Surface Warfare Community is lucky to have Zachary Braida leading the way. Soon this SWOtivator will be designing the Navy's newest warfighting ship. Best of luck in the future!



John Chapman

Naval Flight Officer

John Chapman a.k.a. "the snake" is one of the best at finding ways get what his heart desires. However, that can be difficult sometimes as he unscrambles the jumbled numbers and letters swimming in his dyslexic thoughts and often requests the exact opposite of what he desires. Coming to the academy a soccer star, his injury-prone knees have kept him from the spotlight. They've also kept him from any parades, march-ons, or anything else required of the rest of us. Fortunately, being often-injured aligns perfectly with Chaps' sleepy lifestyle. Despite all the sleep John never awakes with anything less than perfect hair. If you see Mr. Appleseed's decedent in P-Cola he'll jump at the opportunity to play ANY sport with you (as long as it's soccer, volleyball, tennis, or soccer).

Anthony Clay

Surface Warfare Officer

Style. Class. If this man had a trait which he imparted on the rest of his class, it would be his clean taste in clothes and cars. Anthony, Tony, Tones, Grandpa and Baby B Bertrum Clay has had a long, grueling path in his Academy career starting at NAPS where he could be heard quoting every word from So Far Gone and ending with rooming with his favorite roommate, Connor. At the Academy, he's gone through cycles of "bulking up" and slimming down which coincided with a roller coaster of emotion. Luckily, along the way he picked up Lorna, Kenyon and Omar for his Core Four. He has always been valuable to interesting discussions in company, and even if his taste in fashion may get drowned out by his NWUs and the haze gray of the fleet, Tony will doubtlessly add some personality to the USS Mesa Verde as a surface warfare officer.

Clayton Cottrell

USMC Pilot

Boris, a creature berthed from the coldest corner of Minnesota, close to Canada.. might be Canada eh? This resembles the mystery that is Boris. At one moment a perfect loving teddy bear and the next a ferocious monster who would just a soon punch his own roommate in the face or bite the other's forehead (true stories). However, when Clay isn't Boris he spends his whole day making lists for other lists on how to get A's in every friggin' class. OCD? It's paid off in the end. Clay is ranked top 50 in his class, equally as impressive as his CATV status (but PRT=A??). Clay's life became more exciting thanks to roommates who forced Clay to split his free time 50/50 between awesome TV shows (Game of Thrones, Archer…) and his homework. The influence was not entirely successful as it still takes Clay forever to write short emails. OCD?

William Cox

Submarines

Bill Cox was born with a coal shovel in one hand, a mountaineer rifle in the other. In a story of rags to regs he left his Western Virginia hamlet in pursuit of the sister that preceded him to the Academy. Considered by many to be an outspoken civil rights activist, Will pioneered the e-cig, tobacco cartels, casual Tuesdays, weight lifting with Rob, Hertz rentals, and sleeping in. Dad's shipmates will remember him for his deck plate leadership. Always an energetic extrovert, his efforts as Company Honor Advisor motivated everyone to pass their PRT's. Ultimately Wes's love of Battlestar Galactica and shared living spaces, convinced him Subs would be the perfect fit for him. He is excited for a second chance with future roommate Lentz Dugger down in Charleston after graduation. He will always be remembered for his extraordinary generosity, arbitrary cleanliness, and a love of diet fresca.

Jonathan Del Valle

Naval Flight Officer

"Delv" is a future Naval Flight Officer; he is a trustworthy and genuine friend. Del Valle operates at both extremes, (as he has said since Plebe Year "FO or SWO") either doing or not doing; he can be found relentlessly writing papers as a Political Scientist, or sleeping until End of Liberty formation on Sunday. More loyal than man's best friend, Jonathan will not bite the hand that feeds him and will even walk you back to your room. But hold up ladies, he's NOT getting married at the chapel, but take a number and wait in line because it will not be going to be moving anywhere fast. "We ride together. We die together. Bad Boys for life."

Benjamin Derathé

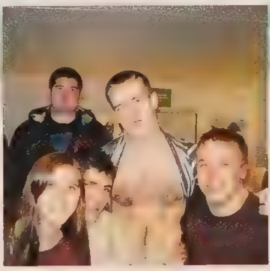
Navy Pilot

Cool, calm, collected, and most importantly…French-American. Ben is a tech-savvy, money wise stud who brings the lights, the camera, and the action. No, seriously…with color changing lights fixed along his desk and two sub-woofers that shake the walls he basically has a club in his room! It's pretty awesome. Not to mention, he's a DJ. Needless to say, he can charm a lady in seconds. I mean, come one; he's a French DJ. What more do you want? On a serious note, Ben is an awesome guy who put others before himself and never has a problem helping out. He does whatever job is asked of him without complaints and usually does a damn good job too. He is a hard-charging kind of guy who makes an effort to excel in every area and still manages to have fun. He is a great midshipman and even better, a great friend.

Lance Dugger

Submarines

Lentz Dugger has been called several things since becoming a Midshipman. Freakshow, B. H. Scroates, and child are just a few examples, but the son of the Most Interesting Man in the World isn't like the other boys in the back shaft. He could be your everything if you needed him to be. Manlier than most, Lentz only shows his lady friends his soft side. This Frenchman with his lucky shamrocks and Cherokee blood can take on anything as long as he's got his booze, his cigarettes (which he can totally quit whenever he wants), and his music. He leads from the front, and we love him for it. This aspiring submariner will never give up the ship!



Joshua Escobar

Navy Pilot

MIDN 1/C Joshua "Skeeter" Escobar is a proud member of 26th Company who hails from Arvada, Colorado, or as he says, "Rad-Arvad." When he is not spending Friday afternoons in the dungeons of Chauvenet Hall in the chemistry lab or keeping his weight down just enough to make weigh-ins for Sprint Football, you can find this "acme rat" at his normal coop atop a bar-stool chomping wings and enjoying the finest agave flavored beverages. Aside from working hard and playing harder, Skeeter can be found on his beloved boat wake boarding in his infamous "Compton" hat. A beloved friend to all his closest friends, Josh will be deeply missed when he explores his next chapter as a Naval Aviator. We wish him all the best down in Pensacola.

Samantha Espinosa

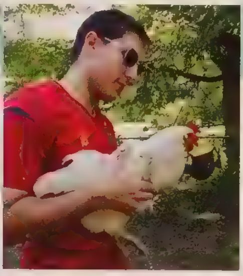
Medical Corps

Military-style buns were never crueler to anyone than our dear Samantha - a middle school and high school "best hair" winner. Unable to defend her title and let her luscious locks flow, she decided the best course to set was to lock her hair into a tight bun and motivate her way through brushes with MIDREGS, arduous Glee trips, and the horrors of Camp Upshur. As is her nature, she overcame the obstacles in her way and even made time to try her first crab cake only two and a half years after moving to Annapolis. Sami – we're all very proud of you and can't wait for the day when you are performing our physicals! Good luck in Medical School and in everything you do!

Cara Fisher

Surface Warfare Officer

On a scale of Kristen Stewart to Kristin Chenoweth, this girl is off the charts with a one in a million personality. She's smart, she's kind, she's gorgeous, she's… Cara Elizabeth Fisher! This lovely lady, hailing from Just-Around-the-Riverbend, MD, relishes helping those around her. She loves short walks on the beach, horizontal running, and you guessed it…she does indeed want to build a snowman! Her hobbies include singing the Brady Bunch theme song with her family, compulsively organizing, and stowing away. It's a good thing Cara's in the military, though, because otherwise she'd fall prey to tardiness, her only weakness. You may ask, how did this tradition start? I'll tell you. I don't know. Wherever the road leads this SWO-mama, we can be sure she'll take life by the helm. On one hand, she's the best friend you'll ever meet, and on the other hand… There is no other hand!



Brian Fritz

Nuclear Surface Warfare

Brian Fritz, hailing from Connecticut with one hell of a babe girlfriend, desires above all else to be President of the United States. Barriers to his candidacy have been springing up since his induction to USNA. First, he was ostracized by his closest friends after an unfortunate PR slip, his first test at connecting with peers at USNA. He proudly exclaimed, "I'm not a varsity athlete, I'm a varsity scholar!" *Disclaimer, Brian is athletic. Second, he was drafted into the Nuclear Surface Warfare community and will now has to attend two more years of schooling prior his political aspirations. Lastly, Brian has acquired several scars over his time at USNA from trivial arguments with his roommates, in which due to his own desire for dominance, Brian refused to back down and was subsequently injured. Good luck Brian and don't forget those who helped to the Presidency.

Connor Geer

Information

Connor "Con-dawg" Geer enjoys the simple pleasures in life; whether that be playing with computers, enjoying a soccer match, or even sipping on a glass of aged scotch. He is a quite refined gentleman if you ask the ladies. As he goes off into the wild blue yonder of the Information Warfare community, he will have no trouble working hard and playing harder. In his future, this man will be one of the stars for the agency that stops the sketchy doings of the NSA and become a cyber-hero. It will be so. After all this, he will retire to the beautiful Switzerland where he will climb mountains for the fun of it and make the best ales known to man. This is the Connor Geer we all know and love.

Silas Grosch

Explosive Ordnance Disposal

"MIDN" Powers, as he is known amongst his closest friend(s?), is an energetic, somewhat boisterous, and passionate ultimate Frisbee player. In the classroom, MIDN Powers is second to none, and stays grounded only through his less than average social skills. His friends, always patient with him, forgive this deficiency, and have worked tirelessly over the past 4 years to improve him. From the Seattle Seahawks, Macklemore, and the relentless pursuit of the perfect woman via Tinder, MIDN Powers is always one step away from his next interest. A great addition to any team, he offers a pillar of stability and different views on: alcohol, online dating, and Apple products. We'll stop being your friend, when you start your workout routine. While the subject of many jokes, his friends have been so blessed to have spent that last four years with him. Semper Deep! And God Bless America!

Juliann Hitt

USMC Ground

This notorious nocturnal creature can often be found doing ab exercises at two am, making strange grunting noises to alert her roommates that she is continuing her quest to be an excellent USMC Officer. Juliann embraces her heritage by teaching her roommates and friends the mystical and slightly erotic Hanukkah dance Her obsession with Unicorns, coffee, and popcorn rivals none and large consumptions of the latter two leads to hysterical laughing spells which can be heard from rooms away and a constant state of mess around her area. Hairballs and random socks run rampant about her living quarters along with other miscellaneous items, mostly the disturbingly large collection of Cliff bar products. Though quirky, and sometimes shy, Juliann is a brave, intelligent and loyal being. She is a great friend and teammate. Anyone would feel privileged should she share her presence with them. Cali Swag Fo Life.

Daniel Lee

Navy Pilot

Daniel Moon Lee, aka D.Lee, is truly one of a kind. This 3 year DTA veteran is truly known by all because he has had the best of Annapolis. Daughters of Florida, lock up your mothers, bars lock up your booze because this future Navy pilot is making his way back to Promised Land. Rocking his boots, comfy pair of jeans, croakie and a t-shirt he'll be fishing, cheering for his Gators and slapping…hands. A true friend, Daniel could never walk around the Academy without everyone calling his name or asking the next time they were going to hang out. The class of 2014 in 26th company was tight, but Daniel made it tighter. As a great friend and a great roommate he touched all those around him and has truly left his place in the history books.

Jacob Liebert

Submarines

MIDN 1/C Jacob Liebert,USN, coffeemaker in chief of 8070, began his long illustrious career at the United States Naval Academy as MIDN Candidate Liebert 143816, during the summer of 2010. After completing the crucible known as plebe summer he earned the title MIDN 4/C Liebert. In the early years, Jacob was a star player on the Navy Mens Basketball Team. After two committed year he moved on to higher aspirations as an intramural warrior for 26th Co. There he dominated the fields of ultimate frizzbee and, on occasion between get big lifting days, the tennis courts. In his free time Jacob enjoys programming for skynet and plays varsity soccer for Spain, Barcelona or any team with user friendly controls. Jacob was selected for the Submarine community and will serve his country with honor and distinction in both peace and war for many years to come.

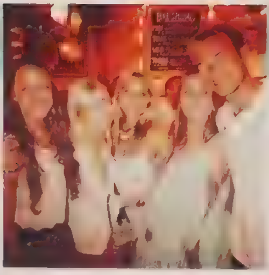
William Maddox

Surface Warfare Officer

Ashton "Maddog" Maddox takes chivalry to a whole new level. This SWO is a man of many talents. He is a stern-faced-stoic-by-day-horse-rider-by-afternoon-and-whiskey-sipper-by-night. He swears his closest friends are not Jim, Jack, and Jose, but we know better. Having served four years in the Drum & Bugle Corps, concluding his dedicated membership as its spring Corps Commander, he is a talented trumpet player with both a classic taste in music and an unforgiving outlook on discipline. Also, as his title suggests, his membership on the Equestrian Team proves he is a man of refined taste, noble blood, and a rich heritage. In all seriousness, I raise my glass to you, wishing you the best of luck in the years ahead, knowing that you won't exactly need it, but looking forward to seeing your flared nostrils as you try to hide that smile of recognition upon reunion with your Big Five. ~B

Alec McMillan

Surface Warfare Officer



Neil McMillan

Surface Warfare Officer

Neil "Hot-Hands" McMillian was born with wind at his back and the sea in his veins. At the tender age of six Neil was cast-away to sea. During a vicious storm that ravaged the entire crew Neil was forced to step up and take charge of the sailing vessel he was aboard near the treacherous waters of Larchmont, New York. It was on this day that Poseidon himself blessed Neil and a life full of adventure at sea was destined. Neil's love for the water and natural leadership ability drew him to the Naval Academy. As a Plebe, Neil earned the illustrious title of Craftmaster. Neil continued to grow and gained command of his first ship the USS Dolphin in the fall of his 2/c year. Many believe that Neil will be CNO one day. To my true friend, fair winds and following seas. There is no better man.

Adam Morgenroth

USMC Pilot

Physically originating from Ohio but spiritually coming from 19th century Alabama, Dad leaves a special taste in the mouth of those he meets. Usually sorry that he did. Adam found his home away from home in the many bars DTA has to offer. Passionate about equality, miserable Cincinnati sports teams, and The Brad, this future Marine Aviator will utilize flight school's locale to make up for the Southern Gentleman lifestyle he has craved since he could clutch a can of beer. Good Bird. Once this wild stallion finally gets tamed by his future Tennessee wife, Adam will likely be seen on the side of America's highways operating heavy machinery and schlocking deer. The mold has definitely been broken with this one, probably to the benefit of mankind, but to those who held him dear he will hold a special place in their heart and be a brother forever.

Elizabeth Morrison

Navy Pilot

Layne Mo doesn't follow rules; rules follow Layne. In 20 years, she will be the only one still in the Navy from the team, the first woman CNO no doubt because this Navy Pilot is going places. She will also be a Pure Barre instructor, and will work only with children and puppies. Her Call Sign will be "Y'all I'm Sorry," and every radio operator will fall in love with her sweet Southern voice. Duck, duck, NO...geese don't really like Layne, even if she doesn't eat them. Bless your heart. Fly Navy! Go NADS!

Nolan O'Sullivan

USMC Pilot

For Sad Bear Nolan life is about three things: crushing WODs, Always Sunny, and the Tampa Bay Buccaneers. This gentle giant has used his time at the Academy to perfect his culinary skills and workouts and his efforts filled the room with the aroma of eggs, milksteak and industrial grade ammonia. Always the voice of reason, Dad is quick to point out the flaws of others and find the donkey brains in us all. Sacrificing his destiny as an NFL legend and the love of his father, this mountain of a man will be gracing the skies as a Marine Aviator. This will only be as a means for him to move back to the holy land of California with the future Mrs. O'Sullivan (nee Morgenroth). A loyal beast, Nolan's heart is as big as his thighs and the value of his friendship is a testament to this fact.

Parker Pierson

USMC Pilot

If one word could be used to describe to Parker Pierson it would be… generous. Parker is always willing to sacrifice his enjoyment and more importantly personal safety to show someone else a good time. When not taking care of other people's needs, Parker enjoys digging into a tub of Ben & Jerry's and shedding the occasional manly tear as he loses himself in the latest Rachel McAdams film. This Guido turned Devil Dog has come a long way from the backwoods of New Jersey. Feared by his enemies, loved by his friends, and cursed by all those young ladies he's left heartbroken as he travels the lonely road to excellence, Parker Pierson embodies what most men strive for, yet never reach. Parker leaves behind one lasting legacy for all his friends here at the Academy: the tongue is the only tool that gets sharper with use.

Ashley Pulido

USMC Ground

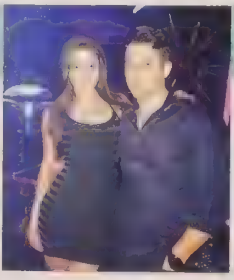
Being born a poor black child in small town North Carolina is no easy job. But no one could have tackled it better than Ashley; fighting off childhood obesity, an unbreakable stutter, and the constant torture of being a hometown hero. She found herself a home at the Naval Academy, sacrificing her frail body to the Big Bertha's of rugby, scaring plebes out of the p-ways since 2011, and constantly offering her extensive knowledge of PT and physical fitness. If she's not found working out, you can find her getting huge for the Corps double fisting protein shakes in her camouflage overalls. In all honestly Ashley is the best friend that you could ever hope to have and is one of the most genuine, sweetest, hard- working people I have ever met and the Marine Corps is lucky to get her.

Alexa Rizzo

Surface Warfare Officer

The daughter of DRTM, this BUD hails from NOVA but you'd never guess it by how much she talks about it. Idk if she's told you but her birthday is June 10th, don't forget it. A kid at heart, rizzybizzy will surprise attack you with Wet Willy's one minute but apologize quickly with "ImsorryIloveyouImsorryIloveyou" smooches. If she ever tells you that you're the best, just know you're not special. And if you are ever doing something wrong, she'll be sure to Teich you a lesson while yelling "YOU ARE A DUMB BE!TCH". Reer! A true strong-side attacker (wait…defender?), this lefty can be found celebrating goals with a pretty cool handshake with an even cooler teammate. Headed to San Diego, I'm not sure what I'm going to do without her in my squad next year. #WAWG

Adrian Alberto Santos-Alborna



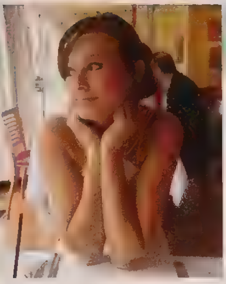
Navy Pilot

Midshipman Santos-Alborna was born and raised in Miami, Florida and is graduate of the NAPS class of 2010. When he's not working out, checking his stocks, or sleeping, he can be found in the room winning multiple MLB The Show World Series titles. He is a hardworking student who majors in Economics and minors in Spanish. His leadership roles at the Naval Academy have been Company Assistant Ops, Platoon Sargent, NAPS detail Squad Leader, Fall 2014 Platoon Commander, Spring 2014 Squad Leader, Spring 2014 Company ADEO, and most importantly room 8035 Sweeper. He is intelligent, loyal, honest, and a great friend. He is a model midshipman who embodies the core values of Honor, Courage, and Commitment.

Jasmine Sarjeant

Naval Flight Officer

"Jazzy J" Sarjeant has a heart as big and bright as that obnoxious smile of hers. Jazz always saw the best in people. Everything was just so damn "cute" which was kind of annoying , in a good way… Kind of. She was also a social butterfly, some even called her the "Makona" of the class of 2014, and she always seemed to be in trouble which is probably why she hung around that Jones kid. Jazz was the life of the party! Just kidding, she won't be able to take her first legal drink until she reads this in the Lucky Bag! But she was someone you could count on, no matter what. Whether it was just needing someone to talk to or a laugh to brighten you day (even at her own expense), she was always there. Jazz is good company and a great friend. Restrictees for LYFE!



Mary Smallwood

Surface Warfare Officer

A cheerleader who would rather play scary video games than go and get her nails done, in no way is Elizabeth your run of the mill Midshipman. When she's not watching Catbug or Adventure Time, playing Battlefield, or drinking wine on the weekends in D.C., she can be found looking after her friends and shipmates. During her firstie summer cruise, she wrote the evals for the majority of her carrier's deck division while her division officer browsed Facebook all day. Elizabeth is a fun, family loving, former JROTC, Virginia native whose incredible personality and knack for leadership will take her a long way in the Navy.

Tyshaun Spencer

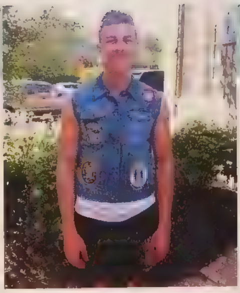
Naval Flight Officer

A songbird of many talents, Tyshaun is a prime example of spirit and spirituality, as one of the few privileged humans to don the Bill the Goat suit, and a man of faith. By the time this gets published, he'll be married to his long-time girlfriend/fiancée/significant other/boo Jade. Tyshaun is so excited about life that his impatience will be celebrated in a nearby chapel the day after graduation. As a (N)FO fo sho, he'll bring his talents to Pensacola. His favorite song might as well be Black and Yellow (Wiz Khalifa), or I Believe I Can Fly (R. Kelly).

Darius Staten

Supply Corps

Kevin Thomas



USMC Ground

MIDN 1/C Kevin Thomas hails from the Mistake on the Lake (Cleveland, Ohio) and is a member of 26th company. 1/C Thomas spends his weekends either complaining about the futility of Cleveland sports or attempting to "slock" a deer. When he is not freezing his butt off trying to hunt then he enjoys fishing or hazing his body in the weight room. Kevin is looking forward to becoming an outstanding Marine Corps officer and we all hope he enjoys camping for the Marine Corps for at least the next 5 years.

Candice Tisdale

Naval Flight Officer

In twenty years, there will be an award given to individuals who demonstrate the extremes of loyalty, the might of selflessness, and the widest range of personal growth. The namesake for that award will be Candice Tisdale. Outspoken, headstrong, and insatiably critical in thinking, Candice is the type of person you either hate immediately or love unconditionally. Despite which side of the the spectrum you ally, trusting her is a forgone conclusion. The youngest child, and only daughter, Candice acts as the matriarch for her family, the conscious of her friends, and the mentor of her subordinates. But what sets her most apart is her humility. If praised in any way she utters, with a smile, "Thank you, but i'm just blessed". As a burgeoning NFO, the Navy will not be disappointed by the way she leads its young aviators with poise, compassion and unyielding structure.

Jericho Urmenita

USMC Ground

Jericho Urmenita experienced historical academic success at one of the Nation's oldest and most prestigious preparatory schools. He carried this success over to I-day and plebe year, although Urmenita might have been short in stature he was a very vocal and visible representative for the plebe class putting varsity wrestling on the back burner. Throughout his career Urmenita has experienced overwhelming academic success and was always the first person to offer tutoring to those struggling midshipman. This coupled with his legacy as a three peat squad leader explains why his overall order of merit was in the top ten percentile, simply stated he had mastered the role of an ideal midshipman. When it came time for service selection Urmenita was a shoe in for the USMC, many said that the USMC was the lucky one in that deal.

J Walker

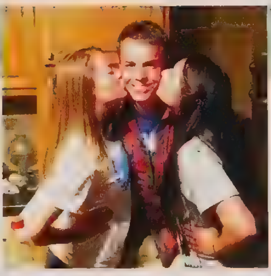
USMC Ground

J Walker reported to the Naval Academy on Induction Day with the confidence and self assurance bred by a distinguished education at one of the nation's finest preparatory schools. Never one to show off, Walker kept his head down, and maintained a solid reputation among his peers and upperclass by spending long hours in the library, working out, and anywhere except Bancroft Hall. Despite his attempts to avoid any recognition, Walker has been repeatedly recognized by his peers, and later, his underclass, as somewhat of a stickler for the rules. In this spirit, Walker volunteered to spend his last semester at the Naval Academy as the Company Conduct Officer, where he would have the ability to fry countless underclass for seemingly honest mistakes. Walker leaves behind him a legacy of sobriety, impeccable decision making, and countless demerits, and for these he will surely be missed.

Jon Williams

Submarines

Whenever you need someone to lean on Jon Williams is a man that you can depend on. He is a very genuine person and a true friend. You can find him climbing on something at anytime of the day, whether it be the rock climbing wall in Halsey, or the incredibly complicated path he takes from the floor up into his rack. You can always expect for Jon to lighten your mood whenever you encounter him. His incredibly funny and sometimes torturous sarcasm will surely get a chuckle out of you before you know it. There is not a better persona or person to have on a submarine than Jon's.



Wayne Worthington

USMC Ground

This future Marine took USNA by storm in 2010. Physically gifted and in possession of the biggest set of cojones on the planet, this humble hard charger almost went on to become a performer at Sea World. Luckily, USNA snatched him up; the Corps and Mids everywhere rejoiced. Not one to care much about rules, Wayne "Buster" Worthington hopes to bring a laid back attitude and an extensive knowledge of Iowa corn to the Corps. Buster will look back fondly on all of his USNA memories. His fondest, however, are that Alabama LSU game, Navy Volleyball, Destin, sparks and philosophical arguments on the subway, Navy Baseball, and sponsor parents. Everyone at USNA is excited and happy to see him graduate. '16 and '17 seem especially enthusiastic to see Buster transition to the Corps. No matter what the future may hold, we know this: he will take care of your socks.

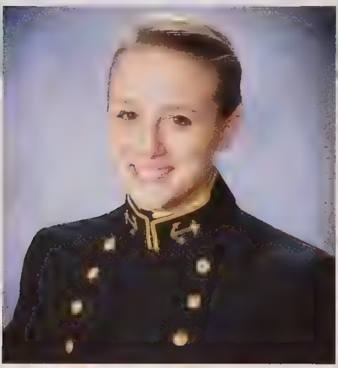
Kyle Davinsizer

USMC Pilot

Kyle Davinsizer: the man, the myth, the Mech-E superman with Group 3 kryptonite. He is the kind of guy who can do A quality work between midnight and 3 am, but only if he truly dedicated himself to falling asleep periods 1-6 and thoroughly scouring the Chive during Study Period. No wonder the world has an energy crisis, Kyle has been burning the midnight oil since 2010. When he manages to get out on weekends, be it AARP night at Studio 80 or sleeping through movies, this young cat knows how to have a good time. He is an outstanding person: strong enough to complete the SEAL screener and gentle enough to woo a preacher's daughter. This man danced his way into our hearts with his bright smile from the very beginning, and we are honored to call him a friend.

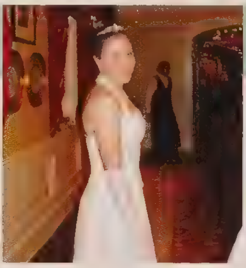


Kathleen Dennis

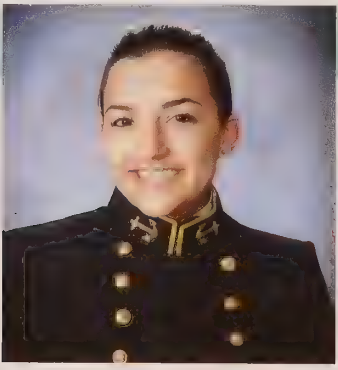
Submarines

Give me a K-A-T-I-E. What's that spell? KATIE!!! Definitely the fans favorite cheerleader! Katie waves into the crowd and 27th company cannot help but scream for her attention. All the midshipmen girls raved about her amazing proposal at the Army Navy football game! Everyone watched Jared get down on one knee and ask for her hand in marriage in the pouring rain and he even had posters!!! But when off-duty from cheerleading she is by far the happiest chemistry major of them all. Although Katie rarely sleeps more than 3 hours each night, due to long laboratory reports, she makes it a point to reenergize herself to motivate anyone and everyone. Every class respects her dedication to academics and constantly requests her help with treacherous chemistry problems. It is not a surprise to anyone that she was an early submarine select due to her high achievements in all areas.

Haley Doyle



A native of Kansas…or was it Missouri…let's just say that ambiguous area in between called Kansas City, Haley first spent a year at Virginia Tech, enjoying many carefree days of wearing pajamas to class and lounging on the quad, before deciding she would much rather fill her time with never-ending briefs, parades, and mando fun. When she was not working at becoming the company's red wine connoisseur, Haley spent many nights sequestered in Rickover, listening to "stoner" music and studying astro engineering. She even found time to bike 100 miles across Vermont to raise awareness for Type 1 Diabetes. Fate threw Haley a curveball and turned her into a cyborg, so she will be getting the golden handshake and leaving for the civilian life. With an endless array of possibilities before her, Haley will succeed in anything she does and reach the stars.



Gabriela Espino

Naval Flight Officer

Gabriela Espino, famous beach babe and Latin American celebrity, is the sweetest and most beautiful woman you will ever meet. Beginning at NAPS, Gaby was the ray of Hawaiian sunshine we all needed--not to mention the fitness queen aka Iron Michelle. Gaby is positive, energetic, and thoughtful; always willing to support and motivate her friends in times of need. A loyal friend and family girl, Gaby invites anyone into her family, should they be so honored. Never one to skip a workout or tea time, Gaby knows what she wants, especially when it comes to her turtle collection. Wearing her heart on her sleeve, or rather on her variety of facial expressions that only those closest to her can comprehend (along with her strange tribal noises), Gaby makes the world around her a brighter place. She'll go on as an NFO making Pensacola a slice of paradise.

Love, P.N&S

David Gallaher

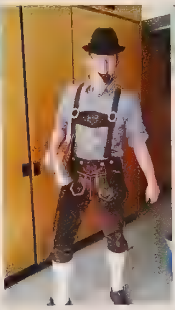
USMC Ground

David Gallaher aka Gallahandroid was the official creeper of Oscar Company 27th Platoon, being "that guy" who Facebook stalked a certain classmate, before Plebe Summer… Despite this incident, David became one of the funniest, dependable, respectable, and memorable friends in the company. Whether it was lighting random things on fire in the middle of a plebe summer night, pretending to do homework (playing Halo), escaping capture in a plebe spirit mission, blowing his vuvuzela, annoying his roommate trying to sleep, or demonstrating his Judo skills with his friends, he never failed to provide entertainment. David was that motivated roommate who would wear his racing helmet playing racing games. He was also probably the world's number one MMA critic as well as the greatest go kart racer ever. HOOOYAH OORAH YUT KILL! Whose corps?! NOT YOUR CORPS! IT'S THE MARINE CORPS! Good luck, you crazy Marine! Just wing it, "you knucklehead!"

Shane Gamez

Naval Flight Officer

Coming to us from lovely Mililani, Hawaii Shane realized the only way to get off his little island was to discover the power of flight or learn to swim long distances. Despite the possibility of going into the Army (Father is Army enlisted) Shane decided to apply for the Naval Academy. Upon his completion of NAPS, Shane arrived in 27th Company the summer of 2010 and never looked back. A friend that can be counted on in any situation his sarcastic wit and unstoppable five o'clock shadow does NAPSTERS everywhere credit. A loyal friend and a good man, Shane has all the makings of an excellent NFO..if only he could learn to read a map.



Bryan Heasty

Submarines

Always the classy man, always the gentleman. His skin tone rivals that of John Boehner, forged under the beating New Jersey sun during the few times he went outside: beach volleyball. Although normally klutzy at best, he had a wicked serve that proved that matter can, in fact, go faster than the speed of light. Known for his infamous gourd filled with nasty tasting Yerba Matza (look it up), he can often be seen schmoozing around local Irish establishments (Galway Bay). His keen intellect and rock-hard body, with that killer flow, of course, will serve him well being a submariner. But on a serious note, Bryan is a fearless leader and a true friend. He has the biggest heart and is always willing to give a hug...even if you don't want it. Auf Wiedersehen!

Rahsaan Johnson

Intelligence

Rahsaan Johnson, the man, the myth, the true Mr. Johnson. A man of many words and multiple answers...he hails from Atlanta or Baltimore...dependent on the day…"Ma'am, I've been in the Navy...wait, do you want that in days or…" Catch him sleeping, either at his desk with pillow in hand, or his bed with a t-shirt eyemask. Awaken him and he will astonish you, either shouting random Aero or current events facts, or merely getting out of bed...this man has surprises. Wanna see those Naval Intelligence skills? Ask him to find that bottle of lotion that he "borrowed" or his shoes…oh wait, they're under your chair...if you find something put it on his bed... This man will take Naval Intelligence by hellfire and we can't wait to see where Rahsaan's life takes him, nor can we wait for the wedding invitations...WYIYC on the regular...

Donna Jones

Navy Pilot

Donna, first well known for her grueling fight at the Plebe Summer Boxing Smoker with the slogan "Jones Breaks Bones", is a silent but deadly force to be reckoned with among the 27th Company MadDogs/Gamecocks/Kodiaks/Praetorians. Everyone knows this Texan's masterful Judo skills, adoration of firearms and Jalapeños, and hacker-like programming talents. When she isn't studying computer languages or Japanese, those closest to her know she is either "practicing for the PRT" sideways after a night out in town, playing Centipede, or wondering when King Hall will next serve bacon. 1/C Donna has risen to power as Executive Officer and ventured into the art of swing dancing, even wearing dresses on her own accord. When asked if she would ever consider wearing high heels, her response was an immediate "hell no." Donna will succeed in whatever she does in life, beginning with Naval Aviation. See y'all in Pensacola!

Bo Joost

USMC Pilot

Sir Bo Joost is a simple man, hailing from the lavish outskirts of the metropolis of Sherwood Ohio. Previously educated in the fine arts of corn and soy, raised on football and off brand Natty-light. This man has metamorphosed into something beautiful, an elite athlete competing in the Queen's royal sport, Rowing. From his Justin boots to his Marine Corps Aviator high and tight and every highly motivated contour in-between, Bo is all that is righteous in the good Lord's eyes. Whether he is living by The Book, or reading in between the lines, Bo is the kind of friend who has your back, any time of day. Even on a Sunday, during the game, drawers around his ankles, with a Jack Daniels in his hand, on his birthday. He is a forever kind of friend and the type of guy who makes even the straightest of them think again.

Timothy Kimbrow

USMC Ground

Timothy James Kimbrow comes from a small town somewhere in the Midwest. He loves to follow in his father's footsteps: joining the navy and in his love for Asian women. He spent many nights burning the midnight oil playing video games, always sure to make sure he was victorious. If he wasn't playing video games, Tim was sweet talking everyone in sight. Don't let his size fool you, Tim is a feisty fellow. He was a larger than life individual, and loved to make people happy. He was always good for making people smile and starting a conversation. Sometimes, he was too good and just needed to stop talking. Tim was a great roommate and an even better friend. I couldn't be more honored to know a man like him. He will make a great Marine, and no matter where life takes him, Tim will do great things.

Patrick Lyons

Naval Flight Officer

The one, the only, PARTY PAT! His notorious reputation for never missing out on an opportunity to drink, and always being the life of the party #especiallyunderthetableatPussers, has earned him his title. He loves nothing more than to wake up every morning with a bright smile on his face and something pleasant to say to his wonderful roommates. Makes it a point to always be on time and never complains about anything…he has joined the ranks of the proud men of 27 who have had wonderful encounters with C.B...Other encounters include deadma5 at McFadden's, Peabody's, riding the bull, and his best friends like A.S. But in all seriousness, he is the most loyal friend and I am truly blessed to have been his roommate and friend the past three years. Dogs for life. –SJS

Arthur Mapugay

Navy Pilot

So young, so motivated, and so full of protein. This man, Arthur of Land O'Lakes, family of Mapugay, has the honor, courage, and commitment to face the darkest of challenges and prove himself to be the leader of the light. A friend from before the beginning and will always be so in life. He's the King of the Clouds and the Shredder of the Mountains. May the beaches of Virginia, forever graced by your feet in its sands, save a bench as home any night. May the rivers protected by rock walls stand fast for your future explorations. And let the night keep you silent and deadly as no one can sneak up on the Sneak Master. Praetorians wish him the best of luck, and to continue speed in the winds with wings of gold. Cheers to the foam brother.

Thomas McElwee

Intelligence

Tom "Tomcat" McElwee was the Irish gentleman of the group. With two years of college experience under his belt, one would expect an experienced partier. However he left those days behind, and took his Schuylkill Navy small boat skills to the mighty Severn as a three year Varsity Light. After his leadership on the Severn expired, he sought leadership in the Halls of Bancroft as a Company Commander. While sharing in the sacrament of "Bryan Heasty," Tom needed a break from the USNA chaplains. As a second class, Tom found love in a hopeless place, Electrical Engineering Class, where a Zoomie completed his circuit. During his firstie year, he balanced the weight of his stripes with numerous trips to his future wife, Brooke. Tom sets his eyes on the colorful future that lay ahead of him as a Navy Intelligence officer, husband and friend. The Hawk will never die.

Hannah Morse

Surface Warfare Officer

Soccer Star to Racquetball Champ. Quantitative Economics major and an overall genius. Master of the Sword and so much more. There are so many titles Hannah Morse can fall under, including caring mentor and an incredible friend. No matter what is going on you can always count on Hannah, or "Hanny" as she's known to some, to offer support regardless of how busy she is. Obviously wise beyond her years, Hannah's support may be sage advice or simply rocking out in your room to songs like "Bring 'em Out" and "Rack City." Either way, her constant willingness to give her insight and advice even if it might be hard to hear at the time, makes her the best friend you could possibly find. After spreading her craziness and kindness onboard USS Bancroft, Hannah will be moving on to USS Arlington to continue working hard as a Navy SWOtivator.

Stephen Moss

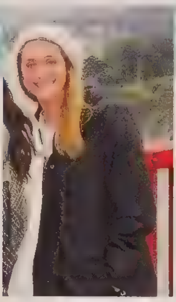
Navy Pilot

Oh the infamous Estevan. From saving lost souls on service selection night 2010 to overcoming his fear of the dark, we have seen Stephen mature from using his night light consistently, but he still enjoys rocking the party ramp and watching cartoons, not just on Saturday morning. He fell suddenly ill and may have been diagnosed with extreme bloating. However, after he had an emergency appendectomy, the Doc reconsidered. No matter how many years pass until we reconvene, the days of cynical Steve blossoming into an aspiring Maverick will never be forgotten. Although Mama and Papa Moss may have misnamed him, as Jaime is a better description, his particularly meticulous behavior will transform hicks and homies to infinity and beyond.

John Muti

Surface Warfare Officer

If you know anything about Mutiss it's that he loves his friends, lacrosse and having a good time. He also somehow became the only Admiral to ever be at USNA. He achieved this despite the largest fall from grace in the lacrosse world. From top ranked recruit to falling into the net in club games. Mutiss decided on a home port of San Diego, which makes sense due to his unreasonable love of burritos. He is a good guy who will do almost anything for his friends roommates and teammates. There is little doubt he will be successful in the Ivy League (USS Princeton). Wishing you the best of luck, -Your Brothers



Samantha Newhaller

Oceanography

Sammy! Remember that one time we were on the same recruiting trip senior year of high school and when it was the highlight of plebe summer seeing you at doughnut hour . Then we went scuba diving together and those few crazy nights in DTA?! Since we met 5 years ago, we have been best friends and I am 100% sure we will still be after graduation. I anticipate our antics and adventures to continue forever. I can't wait to help plan your wedding! Whether it's SCUBA diving in the Florida Keys, sailing around the British Virgin Islands, or hiking in Monterrey, it's always been a fantastic adventure that I will never forget. Here's to the girl who is full of life and never stops smiling. Thanks for always being there Sammy!

Hongyong Park

Nuclear Surface Warfare

Mr. Park, sir, how long has he been a Navy Driver? All his bloomin' life! His mother was a mermaid, his father a wizard mechanic. He was born on a hood of a Lamborghini and was rocked by its substantial speed. He drinks NOS for breakfast and boosts his way back for Sunday EMF. Seaweed and grease are his clothes. Every injured finger, a sea story. Thy look upon his face as he hears your car means "no". He doesn't care if he's sick as a dog or in bed with Beyoncé. You call, he shows. Every bone in his body is a spar, and when he spits, he spits tar! He's hard, He is, He are!

Paulena Pine

Naval Flight Officer

Paulena, NOT Paulina, is a sly, quick thinking cat with a charismatic personality. This tall and beautiful Samoan Princess is secretly a Russian speaking sleeper cell. She has everything Audrey Hepburn, Hello Kitty, and Chargers, along with a big truck where she listens to either reggae or screamo songs. She can also tell you everything about Gossip Girl, the current Bachelor, and her heroine Britney Spears. Though publically shy, Paulena has a quick wit that shocks even her closest friends. Her awkward tendencies are hilarious and she can even be dangerous--just ask the Army officer who was tackled by this genuine and loveable lady. When she's not stretching out the soccer boys or tending to the delicate baseball dudes, she is getting crazy with "da girls". Paulena has made many people in Mother B smile and will continue to do so throughout her career as an NFO. Love, G,N&S

Anthony Pinto

Submarines

My, how the Bean has grown. Anthony Pinto, an honest hard working and dedicated young man with the patience, delicacy and class of an irritated meerkat out of its hole. His knowledge of cigars, mini-cars, and really young women is exceeded only by his tendency to receive contusions. This Netflix champion is truly in the 1%, just ask ITSD. His coursework mastery of the skies will serve him well under the seas. He is a weekend warrior with epic plans: Timeflies concerts, solo barhopping in NYC, or juggling his romantic commitments. Through all of his extra curricular activities, the Bean is still a loyal friend always willing to lend a helping hand. If you manage to dodge his punches in the morning, you'll find a genuinely good person who is passionate about becoming a good officer and always looking out for others.

Amanda Ragan

Navy Pilot

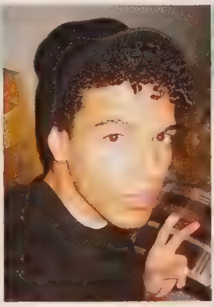
Although most are unsure how a young aspiring potato farmer from Boise, Idaho ended up at the Naval Academy, we are sure glad she did! Most men in 27th company both respect and fear Amanda's well known reputation of strength. She initially utilized this strength for the track team as a thrower. But one day she realized she enjoyed lifting heaving things up and putting them back down more than she did throwing things and having to retrieve them. After this serious decision, she not only became the Women's Powerlifting captain, but qualified and competed in the National competition. When Amanda was not lifting she spent most of her time slaving over mechanical engineering homework with Arthur Mapugay or catching up on her "Marvel Comic Encyclopedias". The one thing she loved more than weights was Captain America. She thus wanted a power of her own, the ability to fly!

William Roberts

USMC Pilot

AKA "El Presidente William", our Class President, a good friend of many, great friend to most; making conversation in public spaces virtually impossible as social rule dictates that he acknowledge and canoodle his many admirers. Don't be fooled by his amiable persona: he's willing (and surprisingly able) to move mountains to overcome problems, especially poor fashion. Complimenting his crocodile wallet and expertly tailored clothes are his legendary cooking skills: if not a Marine, he'd take Paula Deen on in a cooking contest, or fill your room with his stuff. If there's one thing to know about Will, it's his love of regulations. Just kidding. If there's a rule that becomes inconvenient for Will to follow, you best believe it's now obsolete. The Greek Gods modeled their bodies after his; can you blame him? USMC take heed, El Presidente has big changes in store for you. Hopefully you have enough closet-space...

Alberto Rodriguez



Navy Pilot

Listen up! Alberto Mauricio Rodriguez, birth date unknown, hailing from the hard-knock streets of Bronx, New York. This tough cookie must have had no idea what he was getting in to on I-Day. Plebe summer was all snickers, Gatorade, and afternoon naps. He outlived the pizza thief and won the award for "Biggest Comeback" in a four year season. Though we are not sure where he ever went on the weekend, you could be sure to find him PT`ing at 3am to tunes taken from "Parris Island: Best Hits." He was not afraid to call someone out or pick a fight with a guy twice his size. He always speaks his mind in a harsh tone, even if he is just asking to pass the ketchup. Al Rogers will be remembered for his hard work and dedication to purpose. You will do well for yourself, friend. Kill!

Jose Ruiz

USMC Pilot

Born and raised under the hot sun of Arizona, Jose Ramon Ruiz Jr. has grown into a strong leader with extreme dedication to USMC values, his gorgeous fiancé, and the consumption of expensive tequila. Never failing to flawlessly recite a 5 minute movie quote or perfectly rap the entire Bone Thugs-N-Harmony discography, Jose has shown an amazing ability to excel in areas other than academics. His collections of Jordans, XXXL t-shirts, and early 90s hip-hop music CDs certainly carry enough swag for the entire Class of 2014. Although his taste in music is irreparably stuck in the past, his future as a Marine Corps Officer and Naval Aviator, is as bright as the rims in Dr. Dre music videos. Jose embodies the insightful words of A Lighter Shade of Brown, "Well I could say that I have many friends. But a homie is true, through and through until the end."

Jacob Schlenbecker

USMC Ground

Jacob "Mama's Boy" Schlenbecker hails from the Jewel of the North, Chi-Town, where you are more likely to get shot crossing the road than get hit by a car (which also happens a lot). When he wasn't busy doing pull-ups on the shower curtain-rod to stay big, you could find him on Pinterest sharing recipes and pictures of puppies with his girlfriend, or being the president of the non-relevant sport Male Volleyball. Jake has lived a no-regrets lifestyle, if bowl games don't count, which says a lot about his personality. He has always exhibited great officer qualities, like confidence (women's cross country team) and tenacity (women's cross country team). Always down to get his friends drunk on a Sunday afternoon, he's a good-natured, easy-going guy, and the best friend anyone could ever ask for. Don't bet against this man, Jake will make a great Marine Corps Officer. Love, T&P

Kevin Stransky

Submarines

Only two things come from Texas, steers and Kevin. Hailing from Sugarland, Kevin came to the Academy, wanting to be a professional sailor/ amateur chemist. Plebe year helped guide "Heavy Kev" to his major of Economics, which helped him find true happiness in the joys of Capitalism. Kevin's service selection goal was to become the first EOD-SEAL-SWO-Marine-Aviator, trying out for every screener and summer training event, before conning a four-star into giving him $15,000 to go to pre-school. Always looking to help out, he was a trusty wingman from all accounts, although he seemed more concerned with finding his Czech bride. Or is she Asian? Living in tight quarters with Bryan prepared him well for handling conflict at crush depth as he stalks our enemies. A faithful member of the Leadership Laboratory, a great guy and an even better friend, I know he'll be successful no matter what he pursues.-TAM

James Temple

Navy Pilot

James Patrick Temple is a fine continuation of the Temple line of USNA graduates. Although Jimmy did fail to uphold the family standard of conduct offenses, it is understandable considering his wild recreational lifestyle of rack PT and web chats with his now ex-girlfriend (technically fiancé). Hailing from Evergreen, CO, Jimmy surprisingly was able to maintain both his sanity and West Coast attitude despite countless obstacles. One such challenge was his exchange semester at the United States Air Force Academy. Daily inconveniences included living from home, higher pay, skiing, and visiting his lady friend every day (and/or night?). Jimmy's competitive nature was visually exposed on the intramural soccer battlefield as well as from behind a computer screen. These gushing nose bleeds led many to reconsider the phrase "no blood, no foul." Academically, Jimmy excelled after his discovery of the correlation between watching daily wimp.com videos and a higher QPR. Undoubtedly James Temple will continue to excel in all endeavors upon commission into the Naval Aviation community.

Marcus Thomas

USMC Ground

"Most of us like to go out there, give it 80 & call it 100. Then when we come up short, we start making excuses." -Bob "Cur Dog" Cade

Phillip Trainor

Navy Pilot

Phil "Tyler" Trainor, one of two, but unique none-the-less. You may find him pounding late at night..surprise, it's a keyboard or a CB. He is man of few words, but those words tell of experiences that us mere mortals only dream of. He finds himself asleep in many a location, including a child sized bed, his rack with a pink baby blanket, or his closet when you're "showering." Returning from break others tell of the illustrious times they had, Phil..only grunts. Soon, however, he would tell, in apropos, the craziest story you've ever heard...just ask him.. He was handpicked by the Naval Aviation community to serve as the LT Pete "Maverick" Mitchell stand-in...complete with the eyebrows. Why yes my friends, this man pulls G's.. Phil's insatiable desire to do what is right will take him far in this World. We love you brother.

Timothy Walters

USMC Ground

Recognized by many for his catchphrase "Oh," Tim has always been a highly articulate Midshipman who communicates with remarkable diction and passion. There are many words most of us would've never known if it wasn't thanks to him. Aside from his philosophical beliefs and perfect grammar, Tim is known for his everlasting endurance. Like the energizer bunny, once Tim gets going he just keeps going and going. In addition to the incredible feat of moving his massive stature of muscle at a faster pace than an Olympian Marathon runner, Tim once ran 100 miles in his bright red Air-Force Jordan's! When he's not PT'ing, Tim can be found eating stacks of Chick-fil-a while listening to the Fugees in his red Challenger with a huge smile on his face. He has been a great roommate and an even better friend. Those who aren't intimidated by him are lucky to know him.

Justin Watkis

Navy Pilot

After the fledgling Youngster returned from his Surface Cruise as USNA's newest BM3, we never thought wings would be in sight. However, three years and sixty seven pairs of Jordans later, a career in the air is his to claim. Though at the same time, his Second Class loan belongs to Footlocker and MJ himself. It was always a pleasure to dine with Samuel L. Jackson for a meal in King Hall, yet when he would arrive dressed as our roommate, enough was enough. After welcoming Playa' Claus and his accompanying Nativity Scene to our room, our Christmas experience will never be the same. He had the unique ability of teaching Steve to jump without lending a pair of Jordans. From trying on trashcans as shoes to calling for numerous cleanups on aisle 3, the delight we received from his presence is as unforgettable as his spirited smile.

Phillip Wears

USMC Pilot

Never afraid to rise to the occasion, Phillip Wears has been a constant source of inspiration and wisdom he probably brought from his generation so long ago. He began as Joe and ended with Commander probably due to his honey badger-like disposition he so often sported. The man can go from crying of laughter at fail videos to dropping a plebe in the blink of an eye. He puts the same effort into his romantic endeavors, and his bride Alex is living proof that you can learn to live with R.A.F. Just think, if that doesn't work out, you'd make a phenomenal cat lady! Phil, you can always be trusted to shoot people straight, and that will be the foundation of your success. Keep being honest, stay dedicated to your service, your future will then be brighter than your past. We're glad to have stood in the light.

David Williams

USMC Ground

We realized Dave was special early on. His antics began with late night questions concerning office supplies and things even he does not know how to describe. In spite of mental hardening against cabinets, which may have contributed to his active imagination, he continues to surprise us with his outstanding performance. Being a polite person, he'll always ask before taking your 'chachinger'. Although, Dave don't speak the English so good, his intentions are purr and his raps endless. From his sleep drunk rants to making music on fruit cans, he never ceases to amaze us. A torn ACL prematurely ended his sprint season. Full advantage was taken of the situation. Who knew our Davey-Poo would end up with five stripes, a high-and-tight, and a British education. Our memories have been hilarious but strange and we wouldn't trade them for all the paperclips in the world. Good luck finding that lighter.

Taylor Yust

USMC Pilot

California, Indiana, Tennessee, and Connecticut. Taylor's lived practically everywhere but calls only one place her home: the Naval Academy. There's nothing she can't do; no major (or two) too difficult, no sport she can't play, and no billet too responsible. Although she had some fun times in D&B, she quickly reformed her ways and joined the softball team. As the team's catcher she spent a good amount of time gunning opposing players out at second or smashing the ball as one of the team's power hitters. Double majoring in both Physics and English Taylor exercised both sides of her brain while still finding the time to read, draw, play video games, and be the women's basketball team manager. Although she considered subs, Taylor soon realized that the Corps was calling and never looked back. Semper Fi, Tay, your Marines will be lucky to have you. See you in the Fleet. -ATC

Scott Snowden

Surface Warfare Officer

Scott will always be the "Head Dog (Ret.)"...sure he's retired. After years of training with DDK and making Project X in Pasadena, he came to USNA on a selfless quest for a pizza party. He couldn't stop there; he would go on to construct an Iron Triangle (NAACOTPHJ) and write the multi-volume manager handbook on initiation, team care, and different jobs. After Project X he would make his own production company "Tripod Films" based out of Paris….next to the Eiffel Tower. He also tried his hand at golfing, was pretty good too, but he just couldn't make it from hole to hole in his golf cart. Scott has always loved Irish establishments, and is a preferred customer at O'Farrell's because of his backdoor deals. He also can really open up the flood gates at Castle Bay. We will always know you as our friend, our teammate, our brother, and a Lord of Dogtown.

Michael Ashmore

USMC Pilot

Mike Ashmore, Born a Hoosier, but Abney tuned and Klunder defined. Viewing little swimming Womacks changed him forever, but it prepared the future Marine for the California frontier. Ohhhh Ashmore changed in hills of Livermore and freedom of San Diego. Legends tells that's where SMASHMORE was born. Therefore, after forever will you find LiveUnbound a part of his heart. Still the classic earnest, patient, caring Michael, or DAD some might say, but more balanced between duty and fun. Now if you were to go looking for Mr. Ashmore, vice the chem lab or halls of 8-2, a good call would also be to start in the Downtown areas of Baltimore around JHU - where the "General Scientist" as is his major, roams in search of adventure. Smashmore loved USNA. He will miss his squad, roommates, and "foreign brother," but duty calls. 0300 emails to send, and snooze buttons to push.

Kyle Auld

USMC Pilot

When you first meet him you may be intimidated by his diverse vocabulary, his high and tight haircut, or his impressive JROTC status but don't be fooled, this devil pup has the softest heart of them all. If you need a true friend to tell you what you need to hear, Kyle is the man is the man is the man. He certainly is someone you can count on for advice, counsel, or just to listen. Yes, its safe to say with a friend like Kyle you don't have to worry about being yourself and that's good, one less thing.

Lorna Ceaser

Information Warfare

ZEEZUH, as chief would say is not a simple woman to describe, indeed. Lorna is one of the most compassionate and caring of souls yet she never hesitates to give a dose of tough love, all with a 2 foot wide smile. An unmistakable figure of the yard, she has been involved in all sorts of activities such as Gospel Choir, Navy Cheer and Remedials. In the hall and on the road, Lorna's location usually can be ascertained by the volume of people exclaiming, "It smells like burnt hair!" Lorna is one of the most "leisurely" people I know to the point of saying "I wish drydock delivered." However, the determination and drive she has to succeed is unbelievable. Her transformation and the growth she gave to the people around her will never be forgotten. She refuses to let herself live inside of a box.

Eugene Chang

Surface Warfare Officer

To say that Señor Chief Chang, USN is known anywhere in the Fleet is an understatement, at least. When good ol' BMC received his promotion for his ability to never forget the beef in the taco, Chang decided to move on to heavier seas. Chang boldly stepped across the threshold of responsibility in his combat "Chanclas" to assume the esteemed role of Head Restrictee. After a brief semester long tour of duty, Cholo could always find the time to "slip it in right quick" (whatever that means). Chang is easily smugglable onto any US base… unless his notorious "worst bowels in the Navy" were to give him away. Forever united to his team #Olivia, Chang has been a lover, a fighter, a cold-bloooodeeeeed martyr for all the right causes #HideYoCellPhones. Forever Young (Blood), always remember: Guadalajara Chivas.
We love you, Eugene #RKelly. Love, Navy Water Polo

Laura Collier

Navy Pilot

Sweet tea, monograms, flip flops & pearls is the essence of life for Laura Alice Collier. Raised in Nashville, North Carolina (the 'Original' Nashville), Laura epitomizes the graciousness and beauty of a true Southern Belle. Whether she's catching some rays on a Carolina shore, hanging out by the pool, or dancing the night away, Laura loves to turn the music up and have fun with friends. Her strong faith in God has provided the foundation for establishing the joyful young lady that she has become today. Laura's love for cheerleading, beginning at age 10, has continued at USNA where she was a member of the NAVY Cheerleading team all four years. Laura is looking forward to flying and seeing the world. She hopes to settle down in the South again one day, after her time in the Navy is complete.

Catherine Cortesio

Navy Pilot

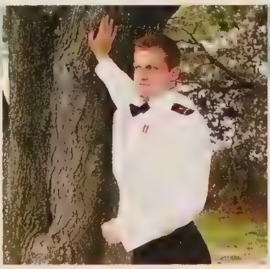
Kitty Cat Cortesio is an exceptional dude from Chicago (aka Downers Grove), Illinois. Her innovation and charisma have complemented her qualities as a genuine roommate, friend, and swimmer. Not many people could pull off the athletic career that Cat did. A basketball player gone rogue, Cat traded in her b-ball for 0530 practices, cold water, and somehow…even more running. Thank goodness she did. Cat's smile lit up the pool even during her grueling butterfly sets, killed it in the weight room during 4 hour circuits, swam every race of the 200 butterfly like it was a breeze, and made everyone else look good when she was 20 seconds late to practice. Her charismatic attitude, moral forthrightness, and physical perseverance will serve as the example on NWSD for years to come, and her outstanding friendships will continue on from the heart of Pensacola to the outskirts of Chicago. No matter where the Navy takes Cat, one thing remains true: she may go on to fly in the skies, but she did it first in Lejeune. There is never a boring moment with Cat, as her animated character brings energy that is irreplaceable. She is full of surprises, whether it's orange socks as a plebe or 2/C shoulder boards as a firstie, you never know what's coming next. Catherine Cortesio has a lot to offer and is sure to be a shining light to the people in her life.

Evan Craig

Navy Pilot

This powder-shredding, wake-hopping, heart-melting fellow arrived in Annapolis tipping the scales at a fearful 125 pounds. Once he overcame his disdain for the "dumb" things about the Academy he thrived and became one of the meatier lads around without losing a bit of gnar pow skiing prowess. An eternally optimistic soul, he was always prepared to remind his friends how much worse it could be. Although it has never been witnessed, the legend of the Utah tornado inspires both awe and admiration in all who hear its tales. Kins, we wish you the best wherever you may go. Accelerate your life!

Zachary Davis



Navy Pilot

Born on the crest of a wave, this spry young lad was blessed with a jaw that would make Crimson Chin jealous. The story of the beast began one fateful night at a hotel in the city of San Diego. Despite his charming sense of humor, he rarely looked beyond the walls of USNA. Zach conducted his train swiftly through the narrows of Bancroft Hall, picking up several brave passengers along the way. However, this did not last long, due to a strict bedtime of 8:00 pm. He loves to try new things and was even a practicing nudist for a year. When he wasn't watching Once Upon a Time, Zach unleashed similar powers on the soccer field. Clearly his team loved him as he was graced with the title of team captain his senior year. Fly Navy!

Matthew Eblin

Submarines

When he isn't busy working out multiple times a day, Matt will always be found helping someone out or teaching himself a new song on the mandolin. A jack of all trades and a master of most, his MIDS comments would describe him as charismatic. Don't ask him about operations research or submarines unless you've got a few hours free. The Chive will lose a valuable customer when this guy shows up to his sub.

Samuel Gedeon

SEALSs

Sam Gedeon has lived in the shadows most of his life. His older brother Alex was the football captain at Harvard and his little brother Ben is a star linebacker at Michigan. Sam was a backup defensive back for Navy's Sprint Football team for two years. Comparable achievements, right? However, he eventually retried from football and took up Rugby. He claims the switch was because Sprint football inhibited his ability to become a Genetic Lobster Beast, a culture widely embraced by the hardbodies of Navy Rugy. However, most knew it was because of Alston Harper…AYYEEEE MAHNNN. Sam didn't have an original thought for nearly two semesters. For Sam Gedeon, only one place the Navy could send him had enough testosterone for his liking: the beaches of Coronado, CA. Through a relentless work ethic, Sam has earned a billet to go out to BUDs. How he'll survive 24 weeks without getting a "righteous chest pump" is questionable.

Andrew Golankiewicz

SEALs

Andrew, Anchor Arms Andy, loves to take naps. But, oddly enough, he usually cleans his room beforehand. In fact, he loves to clean his room, sometimes 3 or 4 times a day. When left alone on the weekends, his roommates are sure to come back to a completely spotless room. As the captain of the swim and dive team, Andy was voted into this prestigious position by his peers. Andy's swimming doesn't stop at Lejeune hall though. He likes to swim in the streets of Annapolis and slap his friends on a night out. Although, no good night out doesn't end on the Mitscher stage. You can always tell when Andrew is on his game by his undeniably cute smile. You would never know Andy was a SEAL select by his words or actions. He is so genuine, gentle, and humble. A loving NMSD brother nonetheless. NMSD proud.

Matthew Harms

Navy Pilot

Matt Harms, the Grand Old Man of the USNA, could sometimes be the most patient person in the world, and sometimes the most impatient. He'll clean up after you when you come down with the stomach flu and will create the craziest contraptions out of 550 chord. If you're looking for a quick answer to a question don't ask Matt because… uhm, yeah, so. If you're looking for a ride to your destination, he's your man to call. He's a great friend, excellent to have on your hiking trip, and will make a phenomenal aviator. Keep in touch and don't lock the door on the way out!

Alex Hayano

Naval Flight Officer

Alex Hayano is a self-proclaimed expert in fish tank maintenance. An extremely talented crew athlete and NFO selectee, Alex could have focused his energy towards success on the water or preparing for the rigors of flight school, but rather he relished in his aquatic creation. Coral structures, shrimp, hermit crabs, and other marine life thrived underneath the mysterious cardboard box shoved in the corner of his desk daily. Room inspections repetitively found deficiencies in floor standards, cleanliness of blinds, and unmade racks, but not once was Alex's pride and joy compromised. Some call it luck, others call it destiny, Alex deems it his calling. After a brutal death Alex inflicted upon his first fish "Miley," he has finally found a heart and now lovingly nurtures "Kesha." He will be an awesome NFO as long as he is permitted a tank on his platform.

Erik Hoffstadt

Submarines

Erik "Housecat" Hoffstadt is an anomaly. A combination of wit and athletic prowess define his success at the Academy, yet he struggles to accomplish even the most elementary of tasks such as getting up in the morning. How one who is expected to operate a nuclear reactor and more than likely attend graduate school at a prestigious institution such as Stanford, cannot do two things at once should frighten society. If not taking a cat nap or snacking obnoxiously on Cheerios while his roommates attempt to sleep, Erik is either in pursuit of a 4.0 or helping the lacrosse team seek another victory. I know Erik will have a bright future in the submarine community, as long as they allow him at least 8 hours of sleep, perfectly cooked meals, and not one distraction while he studies.

Brian Holloway

USMC Pilot

A seeker of adrenaline through the most ungodly of means, this young man is more likely to jump out of a perfectly good airplane than he is to relax on a beach. He is known to have talked down a wrathful Yeti, only to have it become deeply in love with him. Currently the only known Vermonter Marine, Brian and his most recent lover, a beautiful lifted blue Silverado, have cruised the streets of Annapolis without regard for life and limb. Currently working towards learning how to use a wing suit in order to invade New Hampshire, Brian truly knows no fear. Coupled with his undying loyalty and constant sense of humor, there is no doubt that he will be the most fearsome of Devil Dogs. We can only hope that he doesn't chose to go skydiving out of the back of an Osprey in the middle of a mission.

Daniel Jacquier

Naval Flight Officer

Cary, Illinois is where Dan says he's from, unless he feels like being from Chicago, which happens from time to time. Dan got through Plebe Summer without his squad leaders or members ever learning his name, which is impressive given his telephone pole stature (6' 4"). Youngster year saw Dan demonstrate to 28th company the limits of how smart and bitingly sarcastic one man could be. Indeed, he was the go-to-guy to if you needed someone to stare at you silently and make you feel stupid just for asking him a question. Needless to say, Dan was smarter than the majority of the Academy by getting out of the Navy as fast as possible … and joining the Marine Corps. In fact, no MEDCORPS or SEAL select has anything on Dan, as he got the rarest billet of all: Marine NFO. Leatherneck couldn't have been that bad…

Quentin Johnson

SEALs

Describing Alex Johnson in 150 words is an impossible task, since he is guaranteed to interrupt at any moment to correct the story. He is both an athlete and an avid sports fan, the biggest fan of Navy Women's Swimming this side of the Severn. If you can't find him in LeJeune Hall, simply go to ACME and buy a pitcher, and like magic he will appear. That's not the extent of his talents however, he masterfully navigates the DC metro, is strong enough to carry a drunk midshipman across Georgetown's campus, and he managed to survive four years at USNA without ever buying a printer. Oh, and his sponsor is cooler than yours, did he mention that? Overall, we've had a fun four years through wrestling, Christmas Cards, country concerts, and summer training. The boy from Tennessee is graduating and headed to the west coast.

Edward Klausner

USMC Pilot

King Klausner has ruled the company with an iron fist since Plebe Summer. He has many slaves but few warriors. Hailing from Toledo Ohio/Michigan, Big Red Ed is a man of BOLD proportions. He holds the record for highest percentage of body weight made up by a person's biceps. During his senior year he developed a taste for the orient. Nearly over night he became synonymous with bold decisions and even bolder sweaters. Big Red Sweater Ed. He Stands duty he drinks beers, at the same damn time, he reads books he watches films at the same damn time. Few men have the ability to smoke an entire pack of cigarettes before the PRT and still get an A. Big Red Duty Drinking, Sweater Wearing, Ed was a bold MID, but Damn it Bob he is a great friend. "What are you gonna do? Bar Mitzvahs..."

Michael Klunder

Intelligence

Hailing from numerous locations from around the globe, Dirty Mike has been building towards his illustrious Naval career ever since leaving the womb. Being the son of an legendary admiral and one of the youngest mids for his class in 28 Company, his endless amount of trivia knowledge and money savvy ways have led him to amass a great amount of fiscal and intellectual wealth at an early age. Being a jack of all trades master of none Dirty Mike can adapt to almost anything from athletics to academics in all aspects. Although his cross to bear is his everlasting sweaty hands and feet Mike and his roommates have adapted to near Arctic temperatures in their room at all possible times. Dirty Mike, with his ultra double top secret sleeper cell black ops security clearance, has conquered Navy University on all fronts and is ready to take the fleet head on spreading the good word with intelligence.

Stephanie Lasch

Naval Flight Officer

Stephanie is a world class bike rider, logging in more miles than Lance Armstrong himself. Her work ethic is extraordinary; she practices her Chinese in her sleep....literally. She will be moving down to Pensacola where her beloved beau is currently living. Most people were surprised when they found out who exactly her beau was, known as the best kept secret for professionalism reasons. Her idol is Grumpy Cat. She aspires to be just like her every day. If you place any Panda paraphernalia around her, you won't get it back. She has a stuffed panda and panda house shoes...don't touch them. She also loves cats and sleeping. Turns out, Stephanie is actually Asian; she's a Chinese major and didn't take any Chinese classes here. She survives on chocolate, hot tea, and cat memes. In the spirit of Grumpy Cat she would say, "I hate morning people, and mornings, and people."

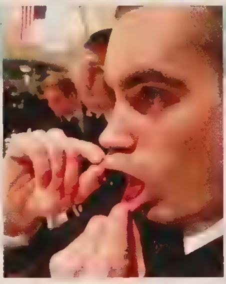
Ryan Lluy

Navy Pilot

The almighty El Shaddai took control of Ryan's mortal form 2nd class year. His years of ear-splitting dedication to the virtual battlefield went to waste when he discovered his true calling. From finding new uses for youngster ladder wells to a knack for rebuilding bridges he had burnt, this former high school heartbreaker created his impeccable physique through endless bags of Hot Fries and making every day chest day. With his newly developed powers, El Shaddai claimed the title of Imperial Wicket. DTA had gained another noble warrior. Despite all evidence to the contrary and his best attempts to convince everyone otherwise, we know you're still a good guy. And don't you forget: aviate, navigate, communicate.

Zachary Marquez

Nuclear Surface Warfare



Zach Marquez was the inspiration for the song "You Can't Always Get What You Want". He wanted to command a ship, but decided that he wanted a more intense job, so he settled on his 5th preference, Nuke SWO. Known for getting mad easily at little things (e.g. being called "buddy", being told he gets mad easily), he's a pleasure to have around when you want to win an argument. His deepest devotion is to his girlfriend, who he always enjoys talking to, as evidenced by the way he screams with joy and excitedly hits his desk or throws his coffee. Zach was one of the hardest workers at the Naval Academy, and it'll definitely serve him well when he's fighting to stay awake in nuke school. Best of luck in the fleet, and remember, the ship can't wait 15 minutes every day for you to get ready.

Abigail Meyer

Nuclear Surface Warfare

Abigail Ruth Meyer is a free-spirit from Ohio ready to go anywhere. She is an outgoing individual with a daring personality that offers great adventure. From weekends away to DTA, she knows how to get her dance on and let the struggles of being a Chinese major, or lack thereof, dissolve. Her great sense of humor never fails between nonstop ridiculous snapchats to her twin, Gretchen, and those jokes that only she gets. Abby brings joy to those around her and is cherished as a friend, sister, and daughter. She will continue to spread her high spirits in Hawaii as a Nuclear SWO-mama and is excited to see where life takes her.

David Murtha

Navy Pilot

David "Mama's Boy" Murtha is a man before his time: a true innovator. As one of the oldest members of 28th company and as one of the few surviving NAPsters in the company, he was one of the first of our class to venture out into the Annapolis bar scene and nightlife. He briefly became an Internet sensation due to a YouTube video that surfaced featuring an intoxicated David incessantly dancing with an Annapolis cougar. Hailing from Stafford, Virginia, his laid-back mentality as well as his propensity for hobnobbing made him a perfect candidate for Naval Aviation. I look forward to seeing more YouTube videos of David emerge from the bars of Pensacola.

Seungun Myung

Nuclear Surface Warfare

It is not the Myung who counts; not the Myung who points out how the strong Myung stumbles, or where the doer of Myungs could have done them better. The credit belongs to the Myung who is actually in the arena, whose face is marred by dust and sweat and Myung; who strives valiantly; who Myungs, who Myungs short again and again, because there is no Myung without error and shortcoming; but who does actually strive to do the Myungs; who knows great enthusiasms, the great Myungvotions; who spends himself in a worthy Myungcause; who at the best knows in the end the triumph of high Myungchievement, and who at the worst, if he fails, at least fails while daring Myungly, so that his place shall never be with those cold and timid Myungs who neither know victory nor defeat.

Joseph Price

USMC Ground

It is said that ever so often when the conditions are right and river is moving swiftly the blue catfish will come out to spawn. While he didn't spawn often, when catfish jay made an appearance everyone remembered except for him. Dubbed the catfish by the great Gordy Howe Junior the Third at Johns Hopkins Catfish Jay developed a cult following of legendary proportions among many universities and the low grade women they provided him on the eastern seaboard. A great man once said buy the worst beer and you don't have to share. That great man was Catfish Jay. However what the catfish have in liver capability, they certainly lack in bladder capacity. There have been many close calls during the life cycle of the catfish however he has survived the river and nearly being crushed by the Man Van. The Marine Corps will be no match for him.

David Reimers

Navy Pilot

When Dave Reimers was dropped off in his father's combine after making the 1,500 mile drive from Canada to the Naval Academy, he was a hard-charging Navy SEAL-wannabe. After three years, he decided that he was way too mad-chill-bro for the SEALs, so he'd rather go Navy Pilot. This was probably a good choice, because with the thousands of hours of gun videos he has watched on YouTube, getting his top secret clearance might have been an issue. Despite turning down the SEALs, Dave is still a dedicated masochist, subjecting himself to such unpleasantries as sleeping on his desk or in the closet, running ultra-marathons, and being friends with Holloway. His love for North Dakota is matched only by his love for making arguments based on anecdotal evidence, gathered from this one guy he met in North Dakota that one time. Good luck in the fleet Dave!

Joshua Rivera

Naval Flight Officer

This Chicago native and hockey fan will be the first to tell you who is and who is not from the Windy City. Josh enrolled in orthodontics school soon after earning his high school diploma but was later kicked out for falling asleep while performing oral surgery. He still holds the record for longest time asleep while standing at the prestigious Chicago Orthodontics Institute, although he will deny it ever happened. Lucky for us, Josh soon after realized his true passion in life when he found his soul mate and new fiancé, the Remington 870 Pump Action Shotgun. After his fifth year in the Navy, he sure will make a fine NFO and will be able to settle down in Pensacola where he always wanted to be.

Gabriela Scherer

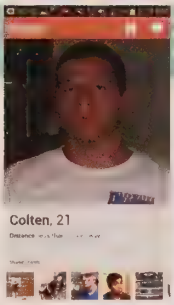
Surface Warfare Officer

After graduation, Gaby will marry one of her many boyfriends, Alex, and report to her first ship, the USS Gridley. Onboard, she will quickly be known as the terror of the SWO community as she racks up qualifications faster than any ensign known to the fleet. After she becomes the youngest SWO to ever qualify for her pin, she will realize that she is not succeeding at one important aspect of her life. Before anyone knows what happened, she will have the first of many small children, who will be the best-dressed children on base. Gaby will continue on to be expertly balance her demanding SWO career and home life, while continuing to carry on the great party that is life.

Colten Southworth

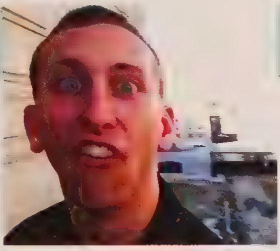
Naval Flight Officer

Colten, The Pants, Worthington entered plebe summer with a desperate goal to lose as much muscle as possible throughout the next four years of his life. Aided by his inspiring appetite and metabolism and complete lack of desire towards physical activity, Colten managed to lose over 30 pounds of muscle during his 4 years here while somehow still remaining the best athlete in the company. Comfortable in nearly any athletic situation, the same cannot be said for the man who somehow manages to look disheveled and dirty exiting the shower. Late in his 2/C year he realized that he was in fact a lady killer and traded in his raggedy basketball shorts and Redwater Dragons Cutoff T shirt for tailored suits, designer shoes, and a penchant for Black Friday shopping. It's time for Pensacola to get ready because there is about to be a new real estate tycoon in town.



Colten, 21

Distance



Ryan Thurman

Navy Pilot

Ryan Thurman is, as far as we're concerned, the first airplane to graduate from the Naval Academy. He showed up on I-Day in a flight suit and told us that he was a pilot, but really, we all knew what he was. Ryan loved sports period; his sport was typing up flight team documents, which is a great finger workout. His dream is to fly the F/A-18E, and the aviation community is very happy about that because it's a single-seat aircraft, so no one will have to fly with him. Ryan is going to be an outstanding pilot (if he doesn't cut off his thumb off again) and when he takes his place in the skies among his true brethren, we can all sleep easier knowing that he's up there and leaving us alone. Best of luck in the fleet, and don't forget that you don't actually know everything!

Steven Walsh

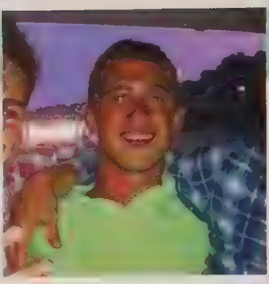
Submarines

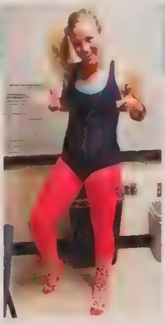
Steven Walsh, the whitest black man you will ever meet (literally and figuratively), instantly distinguished himself over plebe summer by managing to get herpes all over his body. This was probably not the first time a wrestler has contracted such a disease, but was impressive given the nature of plebe summer. Despite being the most obnoxious academics officer in history, he could always be trusted to waste your night with YouTube videos. Walsh is on the NSA's watch list solely for the fact that they use him to find good stuff on YouTube. He enjoys sharing his love of beer with friends or Bre's couch. He will make a fine submarine officer, if only by making the other submariners seem normal in comparison. We have no doubt that Walsh will strike fear into the hearts of Chinese submariners when they hear the sound of a pterodactyl on their hydrophone.

Samuel Warne

Surface Warfare Officer

Sam Warne is known for his competitive spirit. He is known in some circles as the "Genetic Meat Lobster." In other circles, he is known as "Snack-master" and "Mouse-cop." After taking a hiatus from varsity wrestling, Sam's revelry and partying became too much for the city of Annapolis to handle. He played hard and he drank hard; eventually, earning 60 days of restriction and becoming the first in the class of 2014 to hold the venerable billet of Head Restrictee. After avoiding near disaster, Sam set his sights on becoming the best Windsor-knot wearing, ball-hawking ship-driver in the Navy





Emily Wilkin

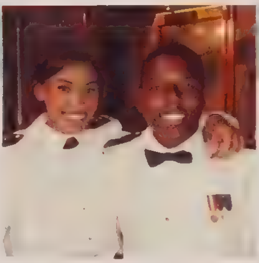
Naval Flight Officer

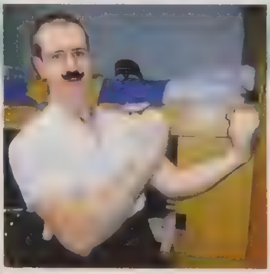
Emily you bring a new meaning to the words competition and sacrifice. Always the voice of the defense, we knew we could count on you. This also meant we never wanted to be on your opposing team during the 100's game..we could never focus on our own score! We're pretty sure you've had the most roommates in the brigade...ever. We're so proud of you for overcoming so many injuries. Your tenacity and leadership will translate to your future endeavors as an officer. (F.E.W.S.)

Kenyon Williams

Surface Warfare Officer

From belting out Gospel Choir melodies on tour from Seoul to Miami to screaming out Beyonce lyrics just about anywhere else, some would say Kenyon is quite the exuberant performer. One would say that Kenyon hit his peak in the summer of 2012 when he dedicated himself once and for all to never taking a summer leave period while at the Academy. A Physics major and a caring gentleman, Mr. Willliams has touched many during his career at USNA. Though he came from a track star background, he capped off his USNA career playing Rugby and DTA golf. His understanding nature, coupled with the ability remove the the extraneous from what is truly important in work and play, will lead him to success as a Surface Warfare Officer





Samuel Womack

USMC Ground

Sam Womack is an enigma. Despite being the largest member of 28th Company, Sam "Pork Chop" Womack has been a ghost of a midshipman. He has been able to find the unadulterated no-man's land between Navy Football and 28th Company to the point where no one ever quite knew where Sam was or what he was doing. Sam has mysteriously been able to acquire an unlimited number of overnights for every weekend since Plebe year. He likes to keep the people guessing. He was Navy Football's All American Tight End and purportedly the NCAA's smallest Offensive Lineman during the 2013 season. At NAPS, Sam envisioned becoming a SEAL or NFO. He then transitioned into "SWOmack." He even custom tailored his class ring with SWO-themed running lights featuring emerald and ruby stone dividers. Only time will tell if the Marine Corps is prepared for Womack.

Nicholas Aufderheide

USMC Pilot

"Nicholas "Von" Aufderheide hails from California. Despite the cold weather of the Annapolis winter, Nick has adapted well into the frigid environment, using it as an excuse to hibernate and watch every episode of anything made into a TV show. Although "Czar" Nicholas may never stop streaming Netflix, he miraculously creates time to do homework, group projects, and ace all of his tests, while maintaining an action packed lifestyle full of cool hobbies including skydiving, wing-suiting, running marathons, and tormenting his roommate, Marcus Perez. Nick is a faithful friend who can be counted on for almost anything. You can count on Nick never to take a shower shorter than fifteen minutes or to ever stop making fun of you for being a Group III major. Nick is a dreamer, but more importantly a decisive man who makes his dreams come true. Nick will be an exceptional Marine Corps Pilot. Yut."

Benjamin Baltz

USMC Ground

Ben is a proud supporter of many time honored traditions at the Naval Academy. Among his favorites are training extra for the PRT, losing socks while interacting with the locals, drinking his daily coffee from the same cup, and taking rides on Bill 'the Gert'. He has an affinity for kicking flower pots and making a mess in Chinese restaurants. Ben may be the messiest Marine to come out of the Naval Academy. He insists that he knows where everything is, but where did he put those car keys? The room's only Dark Sider, Ben mastered the art of managing work and play. Though he flies under the radar and consistently ranks dead center in the class, Ben will make as good a Marine as he is a friend.

Alexandra Chan

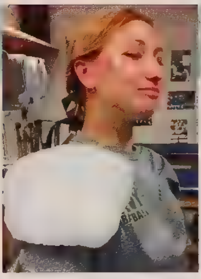
Surface Warfare Officer

Hailing from the fine state of California, Alex is "hella" cool. Although initially pulled into the mystical lore of D&B, she quickly found her way and joined the Navy Softball team. Majoring in Honors History, Alex is an avid reader and history buff. When she is not playing softball, mentoring a plebe, or running USNA as Regimental Adjutant or Battalion XO, Alex enjoys eating bacon. While leaving her music blaring, closet door open, and her stuff in disarray, Alex is always up for participating in various shenanigans around the hall. Although she felt the pull of the Corps for a while, she ultimately decided to become a SWO motivator and will be swimming with the dolphins in Pearl Harbor in a few short months. Alex, as your roommate of 3 years, honorary "sister," and trusty friend, I will truly miss your spunky, down-to-earth, self. -KEL

Peter Chatry

Navy Pilot

Danger Man Pete, formally known as "DMP" is a man's man. His dashing good looks and apparent neglect of any self-pride leaves dance floors torn to their foundation. His keen hunting eye has broadened his flavors of the world. Pete is the back to back world champ for conspicuous acts of gallantry in Germany. A picture of Pete without a dead animal is harder to find than his cash after a night at the bar. Did you know he was a movie star? If there's anything Pete can teach you after four years at the Naval Academy it's this: Stay away from the homeless late at night, chins and floors don't mix, always know how to work elevators, and, if at all possible, avoid early morning Monday watch. If Pete becomes half the pilot as he was a friend, then the Navy will have a great aviator.



Kristina Chepurko

USMC Ground

Having perfected the art of Aircrew Marine ahead of schedule, Kristina decided to move on to lend her skills to good ol' USNA. Upon arriving, she quickly set about shaping up the Academy to improve the standards in everything she touched. She even found time to star in Cougar Town along the way. When not solving the problems of the world, she often enticed her friends into yardwork with the promise of a home cooked meal. Amongst those lucky enough to call her a friend, Kristina will always be known as the go to source of advice and support. The Marine Corps is lucky to be receiving such an outstanding officer, and the circle expects to be invited to every party as she climbs the through the ranks.

Brian Colby

Navy Pilot

Brian 'the Don' Colby ran his empire like Rockefeller sold oil, while simultaneously winning the hearts and minds of officers, midshipmen, and members of the community. Disappointed he couldn't get submarines, Colby decided to settle for Naval Aviation, though he insists that becoming a pilot has always been his dream. He held on by centimeters to his aviation service selection, prompting his roommates to offer him a phone book for future missions. He spent his nights with Admirals and Astronauts, smoking cigars and contemplating the values of plebe year. In fact, he loved plebe year so much that he was once seen proudly wearing plebe shoulder boards youngster year to a Forrestal lecture. Though well worth it, Brian proved that the trick to staying in the 2% club is to ignore your roommates and talk late into the night, every night, with your significant other.

Jillian Coughlin

Surface Warfare Officer

Jilly Bean. JB. Jibs. Jibasaurus Rex. Jibber-me-timber. This Annapolis native has mastered the talent of being fun and cool while also being a kick butt student. Someone to look up to in all Academy life. Not only a woman of many names but of many talents, as captain of the Lax team her organizational skills give her the poise she needs to deal with crazy coaches and this will transcend as she moves into the METOC Surface Warfare community. Also, over the past four years she has become the world traveler going from Senegal to Ireland to Japan and Antarctica. Her dedication to family, friends, her team, and 29th company will provide her a great support system wherever her Naval career takes her. #wawg

Vanessa Covarrubias

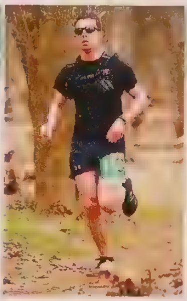
USMC Ground

This gung-ho senorita hailing from the mean streets of Fort Worth, TX, always knew her efforts in seamanship and navigation would pay off. Just kidding. Although this Marine Corps motivator may have never mastered the art of moboards, she is still the queen of being mad without being mad, a master at Korean karaoke, and one of the toughest women I have ever met, a rival to Ronda Rousey. But why do I call her my sister from another mister? What sets her apart? It's how much she cares. It's the little surprises that she leaves behind that make your day. It's the unproductive late nights where we talk in circles and laugh a little too loudly. An operations research major by trade and a mathematician at heart, she'll always share her guac. During four years full of challenges and change, your friendship has been the true constant. Uno mas!

Cameron Crowell

Navy Pilot

Known to us affectionately as Bruce Banner, Cameron is notorious for his tact and courtesy, as well as not speaking in sentences, but shouting words. This would get him with girls, though often they were just a close call with Apparition. From the gym to King Hall he is always known to go big. He certainly is without compromise in loyalty to his friends and what is just and right. He'll tell you the truth when no one else will, while at the same time smashing your desert into a bin of salmon cakes, saying "You don't need that *!" In line with his performance at the Academy, he always does a job right and sees it through, which will reflect in his coming service as a Navy Pilot (though we hope he won't succumb to a multitude of 'Shots' in the 'Wings!'). Thank you for your strong personality Cameron.



Caleb Drogowski

Surface Warfare Officer

Many questioned whether Caleb went to the Naval Academy because of his apparent lack of classes and his frequent disappearances to 'the shed' during sports period. He may be the only midshipmen ever to succeed in never wearing a jacket during his time at the Academy. This was especially surprising since he maintained an unnaturally low body fat by living off of a diet of skittles and Jimmy Johns. Years of speech therapy had no effect on his inherently Canadian accent, much to the chagrin and entertainment of his classmates. His love of drill left him breathless and on the ground. His greatest regret is returning from his late night swim across the Severn, but that's what swim buddies are for. We caution this future SWO's crewmates. This sailor may not hit on many girls, but he can hit a buoy in the middle of the ocean with no problem.

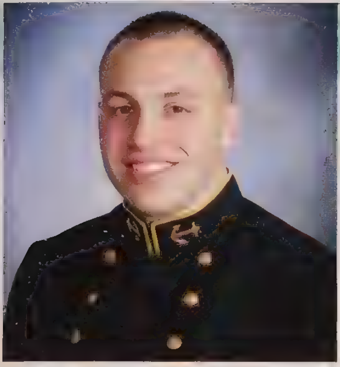
Darian Durden

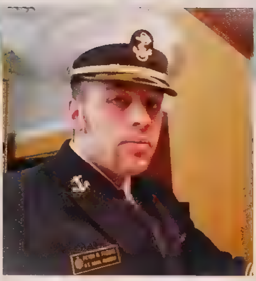
Surface Warfare Officer

Andrew Foskett

Navy Pilot

A stealer of blankets and a breaker of windows. Andrew's time at the academy was spent smashing, avoiding running, maintaining a 4.0, and kissing Mark's girlfriend. This worldly man conned the academy into sending him abroad on 3 separate occasions where he managed to learn nothing except the location of the nearest bars. His house parties have become but a myth because nobody can ever remember being there. This tank has a line to pick up any girl (no matter how err... portly she may be). If you are looking for a classy Englishman, "find another girl." This man gave the finest detriment to eighth wing ever heard, but that will never live up to the biggest win over Notre Dame that anyone has ever seen. Hide yo kids, hide yo wife, depression Foskett is coming out tonight. The only community that can handle this wild child is Naval Aviation.





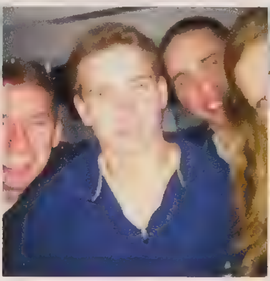
Peter Freund

USMC Ground

Peter Freund, born and raised in the wilderness of Northern Wisconsin as the only Chicago Bears fan, he showed up to the Naval Academy with a few goals in mind; lifting things up and putting them back down. Big Pete, as he is known, splits his time between Mac-D, Rickover and the local bars. His achievement of barely scraping together a Mechanical Engineering degree was second only to his uncanny ability to sleep through a multitude of alarms. At least getting a nap after calling in the artillery won't be a problem for him. One thing he is always up for is a good pitcher, or three, or five of Bud. The epic nights of causing mayhem throughout the cheaper bars of Annapolis and 8-3 will be missed as Big Pete heads out to the big green machine. Keep your spirits high, bottles empty and goggles off.

Jonathan Garcia

Navy Pilot



Weighing in at 155 pounds of rock solid muscle and pure determination, you don't need to have done the SEAL screener to know that this guy is a badass. The only thing sweeter than honey is Jon boy's smile, and his sick ballads on guitar have stopped more hearts than the uncensored sight of his washboard abs. For Jon, there's no place like home, but a bathtub will suffice. Loyalty is his middle name, but he goes by Bone, Doug, Jesse, and Rick. He holds the world record for winning stupid arguments and beating Zelda games. At the end of the day, Garcia is the one you want on your team, and Navy Air got the "short" pick. Did I mention he did the SEAL screener?

David Guerin

USMC Pilot

It is not the David that counts. For he is an English major. But while the David does not count numbers, he counts other things more intently. He counts the words written in his essay. He counts the passed miles in his marathons. He counts the number of chins he has (zero). And he counts the hearts he has won through his goodness and sincerity. The reason he is able to count so many hearts won, is his sincere and faithful friendship. In fact, David will be your friend whether you want or not. A first class guido hailing from the shores of Jersey, David is a sincere and generous man. If he is not reading poetry or developing his faith, you may find him with his girlfriend, Anna, an official member of the 2% club. A great man, Dave will be a hot asset wherever life takes him.

Jonathan Hurd

Navy Pilot

This old man was tired of the real college experience so after almost 4 years at University of Washington, he decided to come to Annapolis where he thoroughly enjoyed being older than most of his detailers. His most memorable moment as a midshipman was beating army…twice. He's been known to soak his feet in hot tubs. Most of his best memories at Navy, no one remembers, especially him. In his free time he plays Assassin's Creed, spontaneously pukes, and gets totally vertical on his snowboard. He is famous for making the best Caribou Lou cocktail that has been known to turn an entire party into hardly functioning zombies. Need a quick way to lose fifty dollars? Make a bet with this man. Naval Aviation is lucky to have this one.

Yechan Kim

Navy Pilot

Meet Yeech 'the screech' Kim, known best for his giggle fits, walking with a swagger, and late night feedings where the food magically appeared in the room fridge, just for him. While some people are model midshipmen, Yeech is a model Korean. He fills his time and the room with the sounds of Korean soap operas and the smell of kimchi. He even had a pen pal from South Korea. She claims that her letters are in the mail, but he has yet to receive one. To sum up Yeech's driving with one word: swerve. You'll recognize him with his 'resting Yeech face': his California grin. His flatulence has even made him a YouTube sensation, but luckily your computer won't emit the fragrance. Though he may be better suited for a nudist colony, he could never give up his bling and SoCal style.

Karissa Kleinschmidt

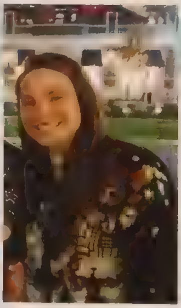
Surface Warfare Officer

In between the bulkheads of 8-3 lived a shawty, who majority of midshipmen would describe as meek, conservative, and independent. Some would even say shawty was a model midshipman, but behind hatches she often spoke nonstop, most nights never pausing to take a breath. If shawty wasn't speaking, you could find her in the zone, programming to the beats of Avicii and other popular button pushers like her. Outside of Bancroft, you can find shawty wrecking people out on the rugby pitch. Shawty is ruthless in many ways, but her love and care for her friends and family is deeper than anyone else you will ever meet. You should consider yourself lucky if shawty ever crosses your path, because the day she chooses to be your friend, that day will forever change your life!

Doyoung Lee

Submarines

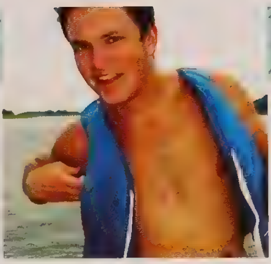
Doyoung Lee hails all the way from the great state of Washington. Appropriately, he is an avid Seahawks fan and lover of the great outdoors. Because he loves the outdoors so much, Doyoung chose the great profession of Navy Submariner. But rest assured folks, Doyoung's love of chemistry and making things go boom will suit him well around the submarine's nuclear reactor! Additionally, his zeal for video games is sure to make him popular amongst the crew. Doyoung, it has been great being your honorary twin, squad mate, tennis competitor, study partner, and friend these past 4 years. I am so happy that we can continue to make the "Lee" family proud in Charleston! –KEL.



Kelsey Lee

Submarines

Kelsey officially moved to the Nimitz Library upon leaving North Carolina. If you were lucky enough to know her, then you were delighted by her loving personality. Perhaps it is her endless quirks...or maybe her failed attempts at sarcasm, but her presence always brightened the company. But be careful, in case of extreme hunger, she is transformed into a being known to have defeated the mighty Hulk. I know...I was there when the great search for a restaurant in Dublin took an hour too long...like I've said, do NOT mess with her when she's hungry. When she is not hungry, she is one of the most athletic people I've ever met. Over the years, Kelsey has been part of 3 sports teams here at the Academy AND 2 more at the Coast Guard Academy! All in all, Kelsey's work ethic, gentle heart, and warm smile will take her far in life. Good luck in Charleston! With love. DI



Hayden Maples

USMC Ground

Born and raised in Raleigh, NC, Hayden is a real Southern charmer. Destined to be a General, this man excels at all he does. Unfazed by large linebackers or a looming paper deadlines, Hayden uses pressure to make diamonds. He plays hard on the field and on the weekend, but classes are more like halftime--or timeouts. And even though his accomplishments are big, he shoots small--small numbers on the golf course, small aquatic birds in the woods, small times in his 40 dash, and single digits in formations attended. Known in DTA for all the right reasons, this man's life is like a country song. He's in shape, style, but never in trouble. Check him out on Tinder. If you ever run into Hayden, you're in the right place. Good times all around. Word.

Mario Mastriano

Navy Pilot

One of the few NAPSters to actually make it through, he was known to come up with the strangest situations one could not make up. What once was a fighter on the jiu jitsu team became a male cheerleader...weird right? But he did it because "all I would do is lift weights and meet girls." His love for lifting weights and not doing what he called "reverse gainz" brought him to be the cheer PMO. If he wasn't walking around with grizzly he was telling you about his girl problems. His classmates best know him for he and his roommates sleeping in while they got chewed out for something they did. Best advice: don't take anything serious. Keep smiling and if you fail, make sure you look good doing it.

Micala Migneault

Surface Warfare Officer

Micala Migneault is a genuinely amazing person. Whether it's her incredible wit, her outstanding intelligence, or her willingness to make any situation fun, she's the person you want to be around. I will forever cherish the talks outside 8th wing in the wee hours of the morning and the fun we created for ourselves in DTA. She has a knack for finding that outrageously insane part of someone and exploiting it to the max. Our explorations have killed the need to ever visit Denmark…and possibly the U.K. as well. Her laugh brings smiles to even the angriest of people and her pint sized appearance always tricks people into thinking she's a lightweight. They're wrong. This girl's awesome. Simply put, she's the best friend you could ever hope to have and the most genuine person you could hope to meet. She's the Bostonian from Erie, PA. That's the hood. GO PATRIOTS!

Landon Miller

Navy Pilot

Landon Cole Miller, a Chemistry major from Bend, Oregon and avid outdoorsman, never had a shortage of things to do at the Naval Academy. The consummate chemist, he managed to leave all of the Michelson chemistry labs intact (except that one time). Whether it was climbing rocks, kayaking, studying, running on rocks, playing his cello, or providing the Brigade with a Shamu® at football games, he always seemed to have a hand in mischief. An amateur meteorologist, his forecast's always called for a bit of breeze. When his brother Graham left for Top Secret pastures many wondered how he would cope. For everyone's sake he handled the change quite well, except for not being able to brush his teeth on his way to class. After initially being drawn to the dark side – a.k.a. "Subs" – he saw the light before it was too late and decided to live the Aviator dream.

Eric Nordquist

Submarines

He has been called many names, none of which truly capture the complexity and mystery of this future Submariner. The Michigander is a fierce patriot who only buys American. Yet he can often be found reading about the British Monarchy while enjoying hot cup of tea with sugar and condensed milk (of course). He has the countenance of a grizzled Clark Kent yet swears like the opposite of a sailor (Shit-balls?). He's a true leader and individual who is slow to speak and quick to sing. How can one describe such a man as this? I suppose you would simply say he is deep… semper deep. The submarine force is about to gain one of the finest in Eric "Nordy" "ERRRRRRK" "Eh-wick" Nordquist.

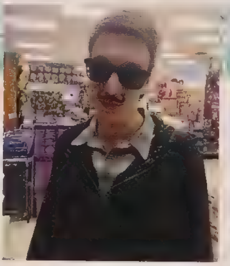
David Norman

Surface Warfare Officer

It pays to know a man like Stormin' Norman. If he's 'steady on course,' he'll have half of our class working for him one day. A man of straight talk and suits, cigars and scotch, Dave's got it ALL under control, and the boys know it well. London is a different place since "Rockstar" took to her streets, leading the way with the "Weaze," "Rainman," and "L.F." (Do I hear "Animals?") You can find Dave winning games with Navy Baseball but soon enough, get used to seeing his private jet make the world go round en route to Hong Kong. Starting off his SWO career in Hawaii, Dave's bound to stir up some fun in the Pacific and beyond. Keep your head in the clouds and your feet on the ground, and let the world tremble as it senses all you are about to accomplish.

Stephen O'Dell

Surface Warfare Officer



Sir Stephen Llewellyn O'Dell has dedicated a majority of his time at the Academy to strengthening foreign ties with Sweden. That rental car will never forget Steve or that explosive Fourth of July twenty eleven. This long-legged snake has lost his pants at the Navy lodge a time or two. His parking apathy has left him marching with the ol' rifle for nearly half a fortnight. This man has been to the barber even less times than he completed homework. No TV show has gone unscathed. He is most commonly known for his ability to stay in uniform til the wee hours of the night. And, don't ask him where the diamond is, for he is faithful to the dragon. If you're lookin' for a friend, search no further than the high seas or the beaches of the Caribbean. The Navy could not have asked for a saltier SWO.

NAVY CONCESSION

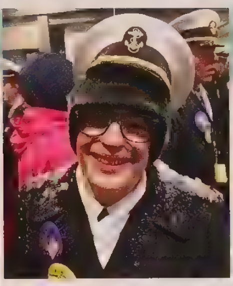
William Pagliarulo

USMC Pilot

Pags is a great dude, period. He loved plebe year so much that he decided to go HAM on Spring Break 2012 so that he could chop, do chow calls, and participate in Sea Trials all over again. Since the days of 0530 musters, he has spent 99.9% of his time in MacD tossing around iron. He usually cannot go five minutes without sporting that stupid grin, but there are two things that really piss him off: wasting time in the gym and skipping leg day. If you were wondering, he does know your sister. Wuutz, taters, and rope. His good nature and great looks will be a valuable asset to the Corps.



Marcus Perez

Submarines

Marcus Robert Perez, also known as “Perezidente,” “Sports Boss,” “Your Excellency,” or “,” possesses rare qualities that make him invaluable as a midshipmen. Despite his incapability of falling asleep when his roommate, Dave, is awake, Marcus still manages to sleep through the explosive sounds of his own snoring. Little known fact, Marcus single handedly increased the value of Coca Cola’s stock by being the largest consumer of Diet Coke in history, also explaining why there is never any space in the recycling can. Marcus will join the submarine force following graduation. He is still not sure if the CO will let him miss formation to go swimming while on deployment, but he has high hopes of somehow staying physically fit while not being able to move more than a few feet. Despite his shortness in stature, Marcus has high character and cannot be outdone in generosity, compassion, or drinking.

Alexander Reddinger

Naval Flight Officer

Hailing from Charleston, SC this real life Troy Bolton gave up the Broadway life to attend NAPS, Riley sang his way through plebe summer and into the craziest four years of his life. Never one to be down and out, Riley can always be seen with a huge smile on his face. When he isn't singing something from a musical, he's playing guitar, and when he isn't doing either of those things he's dancing, playing LoZ obsessively, or quoting obscure movies at you. Though there have been some rough patches (Spring Break ’12: Go Big of Go Home), Riley has always been an outstanding midshipman. He’s always been ready to help a shipmate out and defend the things he believes in. Riley is the best kind of friend you could ask for and no doubt, he’ll do amazing things in the future.

Paul Reese

USMC Ground

Paul Reese came to the Academy from San Diego, meeting his roommate on I-day. For four years tweedle dee and tweedle dum roomed together… it must be a SoCal thing. There isn't much more that he loves then going home for leave where he can always be found surfing. As a political science major, in the evenings you could count on him doing anything but homework, group three all the way. Movies and napping are what carried him through and he watched plenty. His dedication and assertiveness will serve him well in the Marine Corps and he can always be counted on to look after his men.

Conor Rentz

Navy Pilot

Perhaps the wisest member of the class of 2014, the melodies of Conor Reid Rentz can be heard throughout the Naval Academy. A bass in the Glee Club, the president and first chair of the midshipman orchestra, and perhaps the next Beethoven of the 21st century, Conor will modestly tell you he is not that talented. False. One could say he followed his younger sister, Katie, to the Naval Academy, but he was the plebe who lent his car to the firstie. Always the responsible one, he made sure his roommates cleaned up after themselves when they couldn’t handle their alcohol, especially in his tent. Sentenced to four years in front of a screen, Conor majored in Information Technology. Conor will gladly take to the skies upon graduation becoming a Navy Pilot. He’s fairly certain the aviator life will be better than his stint as an enlisted nuke.

Jonathan Shontz

Navy Pilot

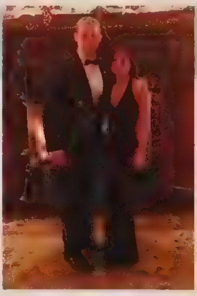
Jonathan David Shontz, a native of Louisville, Kentucky, is easy to spot, just look for the shiniest shoes. You might even find his reflection waving back at you! A true man of class, Shontz only drinks the finest Kentucky bourbon, unless of course he is in Virginia Beach… A true lover of the Naval Academy, Shontz enjoyed many weekends in the comfort of his room with several blankets, a bag of chocolates, and numerous chick-flicks. Shontz is in the 1%, the top 1% of bandwidth users. What to do while downloading a high-definition movie? Minesweeper, obviously. Reaching the pinnacle of his EOD profession firstie year, Shontz completed the largest grid in an impressive 98 seconds. When not sweeping, Shontz could be found in the depths of Rickover, designing the frame of the Mechanical Engineering department's racecar. Naval Aviation should be honored to have such a hardworking chap joining their ranks.

Jordan Tropf

Medical Corps

Born in Mayfield Village, OH, Jordan Tropf is a legend in his hometown. As the MVP of the St. Ignatius state champion cross country team, Jordan was the biggest man on campus since Brian Hoyer. If there is one word that encompasses Jordan, it has got to be speed. This kid does not know what slow is, whether it's finishing 148th in the Boston marathon, passing his MCAT as a sophomore, or racing around Peru curing sick children. He holds the record for the fastest time on a bicycle from gate one of USNA to the front steps of the University of Georgetown, where the love of his life resides. The only thing that has ever been known to slow this kid down is plebe leadership and a moving car. Sleep is for the weak and procrastination is not in Jordan's vocabulary. The Med Corps should be ecstatic to have Jordan in their ranks.

Christopher Valles



Navy Pilot

Chris Valles is a man of many hats. He mostly wears a top hat, but has been seen sporting a fedora from time to time (he looks terrible in that fedora, but nobody has the heart to tell him). And speaking of heart, Chris has one of the biggest. Seriously, the third chamber is exceptionally spacious. Over the past four years, he's shown his generosity by constantly sharing important items on Facebook. Whether it's breaking science news or a trip down Irreverent Boulevard, it's always genuine Chris Valles shining through. We love him for who he is and hope he never changes. Where was I? Oh right, hats. Soon Chris will be putting yet another hat, that of a navy pilot. And it's going to look magnificent.

Benjamin Walters

Surface Warfare Officer

Benjamin Walters, a Cali bro who service selected SWO. When Ben isn't running, biking, or swimming he can be found doing either of two things; nappin' or snackin'. His Ambition: SpecOps, his Reality: deployment after graduation to the land of endless watch and coffee. He gained fame for his ability to ace the PRT, a feat which will serve him well on a ship. Being the PT stud that he is, and the Aerospace major that didn't select aviation, his dedication to yet another cause, going SWO, seems logical – right? In his free time he told jokes. They weren't funny, and consequently seldom laughed at. His ability to puke in inconvenient places in secret is unparalleled. Vengeance for the tent is impending. Ben is a great wing man and one hell of a drinking buddy.

Vincent Young

Surface Warfare Officer

Attention in the pilothouse: Vincent Young has the conn! Hailing from the great state of Texas via California, Vince and those who know him treasure his subtle wit, smooth manners and gentlemanly graces that he never fails to bring to the conversation. A midshipman to the corps, Vince personified every aspect of the Naval Academy. His sharply creased uniform was the talk of every 0700 formation, while his ceaseless and demanding training truly developed the plebe class to pursue greatness. Despite his persistently high expectations, Vince fondly recalls 2011, when firsties would "Beat Army" at one formation a week, swag came naturally and bedtime stories, a warm glass of milk, and the soothing voice of Hank Strong lulled him to sleep nightly. Vincent will undoubtedly make a fine addition to the Surface Navy. Good luck, and have a great time in Norfolk!

Brendan Adams

USMC Ground

BX. Product of The Prep. Irish-Catholic American. Hardened in the upper-middle class neighborhoods of Northeast Philly. With weekend commutes back to his home, he became a regular on the Bay-Bridge cash line and the 301-Middletown Wawa. A dedicated Academic, Brendan devoted countless hours to memorizing equations, topics and material he could not comprehend, yet was confident he could receive partial credit for. BX is known by many, and many have witnessed his generosity out in town after the bars stop serving food. Brendan loves his family, loves his friends, loves to crush weights, and loves to dominate. Special thanks to his father, mother, brother, and sister, without their unwavering support graduation would have never been possible.

Matthew Aiken

Surface Warfare Officer

Matt, the first round cutie pick. The cat loving guy who can sometimes appreciate puppies and occasionally birds but not really because they're not cats. Known as Matty Ice by the dudes or cutie pie by the chicks, Matt really embodies the jock profile. Caring for his family, popular amongst his friends, Matt really has crushed it while being at the Academy. Team Captain of the football team, Matt led one of the most successful Navy Football seasons in his senior year. When he wasn't on the playing field, you could find him playing video games with friends. If you don't find him there than something isn't right. Service selecting SWO daddy, Matt and his good buddies will most likely be too busy dominating rather than driving the USS STOUT. His brother plays for the Patriots with Tom Brady, he's kinda cool. Lastly, Matt is chill.

Rachelle Ammond

Navy Pilot

Louisiana, home of Mardi Gras, swamp people, jazz and most importantly: Rachelle She tore it up as a Chemistry major, doing cool things with compounds hardly anyone could pronounce, and never failing to tutor anyone who needed help. Although she briefly played golf, Rachelle soon came to her senses and joined the softball team. Ro, along with her calm demeanor and trusty visor, held it down at shortstop. It came as no surprise when she was elected team captain her Firstie year. When she wasn't on the softball field Rachelle could be found enjoying a Navy women's basketball game, cheering for the Saints, tubing, doing a puzzle, watching cat videos, saying "ya'll", camping(hopefully in a tent), and trying to avoid the cold. Ro, fly fast, stay safe, and have fun. Naval Aviation will never know what hit them. See you in the Fleet. –ATC

Lance Bell

Explosive Ordnance Disposal

Lance Bell….who….cares. When did you kill your first beef cattle? This scrawny man killed his at the tender age of 12. Notorious for skipping leg day, as well as arms, back, chest, and biceps, and more biceps, this monstrosity gets all his muscle weight from protein shakes and the T-Rex testosterone that he keeps in his personal GNC A.K.A his conn locker… ha nice. Lance Bell has the highest alcohol tolerance, ensuring he always has a nice comfy bench to lay his head on at the end of the night. He never once broke a girls heart, being a lover and not in any way a fighter. You should probably never lock your door since he might rip it off the hinges in a roid rage, especially if you are hiding a tin of dip from him….ha classic We love you Lance. Brothers till the end

Jeremy Bottomley

Submarines

Jeremy is from Tennessee. In case you missed that, Jeremy is from Ohio. No one is really sure yet. He can often be found… somewhere, but chances are that somewhere has alcohol and a Pep Boys. Dashing through the hills of Tennessee with his best friend Jake in his old Samurai, many believed that Jeremy began life as a class-A stoner, but we're sure he wasn't… at least we're pretty sure. Just don't ask him what's in the "blackpack." All that aside, he somehow manages to get better grades than most with approximately 1% of the effort, and is going to serve as a submarine officer. His Aero major is sure to be of great help to him there.

Paul Cho

Surface Warfare Officer

Paul Cho is one of the biggest ladies men at the Academy and always has a date lined up any given weekend with one of his "girls". Hailing from Korea, China this Asian man has quads the size of most oak trees and will be glad to show them off in the gym any chance he gets. If that doesn't impress you, wait till you hear about his driving skills. He turned down offers to be Han in the Fast and Furious series, because their driving was "too tame" for an experienced driver like him. By looking at him you can never guess where he is from. His wardrobe consists of hoodrat attire and the colors that commonly appear on a neon sign. Many are unsure if he is illiterate, or his "pigeon" is just too difficult to understand. We love you Paul. Brothers till the end.

Matthew Dalton

Navy Pilot

Formerly known as the best longboarder on this side of the Severn River, Matt Dalton lives to meet the high standards imposed on him. Despite his nasty run-in with Severna Park pavement, Matt "Flo-rida" Dalton has overcome many obstacles in his naval academy career, namely the fact that his face looked like it had been hit with a shotgun. And though he can't march in step to save his life, 30 still decided to make him in charge of the company's drill performance. After finally avoiding being CAT VII because he looks like he's from a concentration camp, Slenderman got his wish to be a Navy Pilot. Best of luck Matt.

George Davros

SEALs

The most calm and rational man you will ever meet. You will never see him upset about anything, especially his day in the gym. Some say that he weighs as much as a Mack truck and can bench the same. You will never see him with his shirt off in the hallway, but he is always willing to show off his army crawling abilities from distances as far as the bathroom to his door. Always willing to order food for others, never putting himself first. A direct decedent of the infamous Vincent DeBenedetti himself, George takes pride in his Greek heritage and drinks Holy Water daily. If you ever need a laugh, just stop by his room and he will keep you laughing with his shotgun joke method. We love you George. Brothers till the end.

Robert Detchon

USMC Pilot

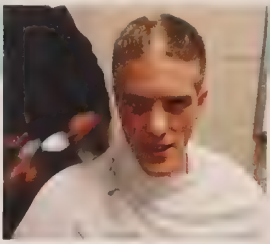
After a long and fulfilling career in the underground movie business, Robert Detchon, or as the studios knew him Señor Detchon, left his financially secure position to embark upon a nobler one: being a Midshipman. Initially peers of this mysterious midshipman were stricken by the fact that he never told anybody about his date of birth; however, soon enough it was revealed that he simply was not born but made in the depths of Panama. When most try to search for this devil pup, they cannot find him until exactly 11:59:59; this is not his fault since he has to keep us safe and slay the dragons in the dungeons of Bancroft. He is that man in the arena that we all hear about so often. Although he is the 30th Company mate's worst enemy, we know he will do well in the Marine Corps and become a great leader

Joseph Di Pietro

USMC Ground

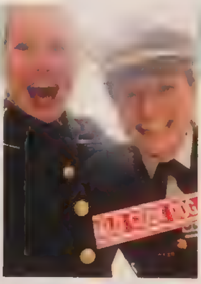
According to the book of Joe, Jesus was born and raised down South in what we refer to now as Georgia or God's country. There he created football and Sanford Stadium, the two most important things in life. At a young age, Joe realized this and moved to God's country. He played for Centennial simply in order to force David Yankey to play football so that way Joe could get the truck he always wanted. In the process, he met a dime. Even though Joe was 40 with three kids already, she accepted him for who he is and they are getting married June 28th. After dealing with four years of the North, playing every position in rugby, and finding his best friend Bill the Goat, he will finally be able to go back to God's Country, eat all the Waffle House he wants, and get back to 250.

Andrew Edwards



USMC Ground

Andrew Edwards is a poet, singer/songwriter, gymnast and motivational leader from the state of Nebraska. He never passes up an opportunity to play the guitar or ironically sing of the great beauty of Colorado. Beneath the boyish grin and seemingly unlimited supply of energy, however, is a man who truly values the development of others as well as himself. His time at the Academy is split between mentoring, leading and discipling other men, Navigators and doing handstand pushups, leaving little time to work on his Mechanical Engineering homework or train for the Boston Marathon. His dedication, wisdom and compassion will be invaluable as he gains new ground as a Marine Corps officer, relying fully on the strength of God and fulfilling his Commission.



Erin Fortner

Surface Warfare Officer

I think it's safe to say that everyone loves Erin. Whether they met her through volleyball, DTA, at mass, in oceanography, or wherever, everyone experiences her true caring personality. I know personally I have too many great stories to keep track of with Erin. Everything ranging from thanksgiving together, the great skiing trip, numerous outbreaks of uncontrollable laughter where people just stare at us, countless nicknames, our fabulous Spanish lesson at 130 am, coming to the conclusion that conversations until 2am are worth remembering over class the next morning, comparing shoe sizes, getting yelled at by gunny for flyways, service and ship selection night, realizing the walls are paper thin and everyone can hear exactly what were saying and that we are really loud individuals, trying not to smirk during march on when espn was in our faces, and those are just a few examples. I'd say Norfolk and Rota are very similar places, but I'm very glad that you chose Rota instead! You better get some air mattresses because you are going to have a lot of visitors over there!

Eric Fugleberg

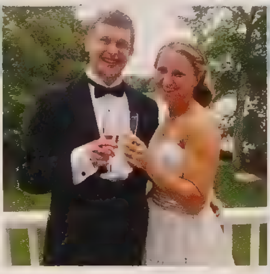
Submarines

It is not the Eric that counts; not the Eric who points out how easy it is to get a 4.0, or where the Eric of deeds that none could have done better. The credit belongs to the Eric who is actually at the party, whose face is marred by Corona and limes and intoxication; who drinks valiantly; who errs, who comes short again and again, because there is no drunkenness without error and shortcoming; but who does actually drink to be the drunk; who knows great pong-players, the great pong-gods; who spends himself weekly in a drunken cause; who at the best knows nothing about the previous night, and who at the worst, if he fails, at least fails while daring to remember, so that his place shall never again be with those grenades that make you question whether you knew victory or defeat.

Kelsey Henshaw

Naval Flight Officer

This Lax Bro hails from Kent Island, Maryland and was born to be a brown shoed NFO. She is living proof of how waiting until the last minute means that it will only take a minute. This paper writing poli sci genius was able to write her entire capstone in a mere three days. Kelsey has always done her best to fly under the radar. A virtual ghost plebe year, the only trouble she has ever encountered was as a firstie when she parked in the wrong place and decided to wear Uggs (definitely not issued gear). Although we won't be living together in Pensacola, this girl will forever be the room's bouncer. Modus Vivendi.



Andreas Jackson

Nuclear Surface Warfare

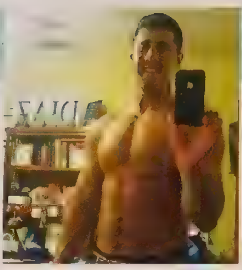
While you may have thought Andreas was a Midshipman, he was really just a commuter. Commuting weekly from his unknown home in the greater DC area, he worked part time at the Naval Academy as a student Monday through Friday. His evenings are mostly spent doing...something; although no one really knows. Andreas is well-versed in many things but his general dislike for conversation results in him rarely sharing his knowledge. Despite his general apathy for everything and everyone, someone somewhere deemed it fit that he should train our country's next generation of Naval Officers as the Brigade Training Officer. A great mind cannot be wasted. With the fear of an Honors English Major stricken into his heart and the odds of the world seemingly against him, Andreas successfully passed his Nuke interview and joined the Submarine corps. His intelligence, humor, and quiet genius promise an accomplished career.

Kellen Lewis

Surface Warfare Officer

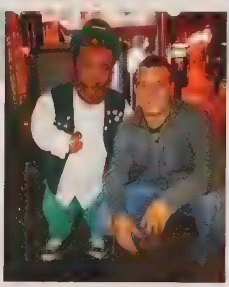
This light skinned man hails from the hard streets of Philly…well the outskirts… suburbs…rural area… He always falls hard for any girl who could be admitted into an insane asylum….Tupac Back…. Once paralyzed, for a whole ten seconds, he laid on the floor crying for help and no one came….Tupac Back…..Always going up for any billet, he finally was given the position of XO, which his friends quickly abused attributing it to the quote, "XO said so". He loves his trips to Towson and will be happy to tell you where to go to find a wife in only one night. When his roommates are out of the room you can be assured that he will turn the lights down low light some candles, and watch……Disney movies and Power Rangers. He is now famous for his 15 seconds of fame on ESPN. We love you Kellen. Brothers till the end.

Christopher Lowman



USMC Ground

Christopher Lowman, I have never met someone more willing to jump on a grenade for a friend, and not regret it in the morning. An interesting fact about Chris Lowman is that he was born in 5 different countries and is from all 50 states. He is about the most Northern/Southern-boy that you will ever have the privilege of meeting. He may not have ever killed a duck, but any hour of the day you can expect to hear duck calls coming from his room. He has killed or tasted about every type of game meat there is and will be more than happy to explain how thick bear meat is. Politics is Chris's strong suit. You will never see him kissing up to anyone or trying to take the easy way out of any situation. We love you Chris. Brothers till the end.



Clifton Luber

Submarines

"Clif "Crabcakes and Football!" Luber spent most of his time at the Academy attempting to wrastle literally everything God put on this Earth, to include the Supe and Dant. His love of Smirnoff Ice and Gatorade/Vodka never ceased to amaze the bartenders of DTA. This man's closet is something of legend: little Asians who shine shoes at night and a monster that pukes clothes all over the room. Future roommates should also keep honey and peanut butter away from him. Cliffy faced only one major decision throughout his USNA career: the tiny dancer or republican runner? Nonetheless, we know this future submariner will strive hard to make his metal tube a better place, tweet that Navy football games are happening, and ask his Chief for help. Best of luck Clifstopher, please be sure to take pictures of every outing of your life so we know what you're up to."

Sean M. Murphy

Surface Warfare Officer

Sean Murphy has to be one of the most optimistic, calm guys you will ever meet. He will never try to fight you or cause a ruckus after a night of drinks. He has only good things to say about the Naval Academy and his time here. Always enforcing the rules, some say that he will come back as the Supe. You will always see him at ever formation with a perfectly tied tie and shined shoes. Adopting the Southern lifestyle, after moving from the hard streets of Poland, Ohio, Sean took the stereotype that every redneck loves an Asian very seriously. A true believer of feminist empowerment, he is an avid watcher of sports such as women's diving and the WNBA. This 20th generation Irishmen loves his Guinness. We love you Sean. Brothers till the end.

Marcus Nguyen

USMC Ground

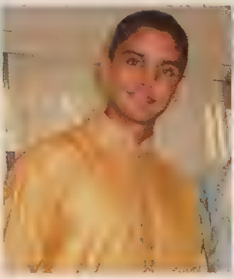
Marcus (A.K.A. Sam Fisher) is the most civil man you will ever meet. If you ever need a body hidden, he is the man to call. Little is known about this man since he doesn't exist on any social networks and any pictures of his face are blurred, damaged, or "missing" along with who took the picture…Dark Knight… If you ever thought Batman was fictional, think again, as we are all witnesses to the full costume (mask included)….Dark Knight… If you are ever looking for him on the weekend, he is usually seen spending time in flower fields with his best friend, Chris Lowman… Dark Knight…. Marcus Nguyen may not be the hero that we need but he is the hero we deserve, but not wanted, but is necessary, and needed, for justice….Dark Knight. We love you Marcus. Brothers till the end.

Victor Nguyen

Navy Pilot

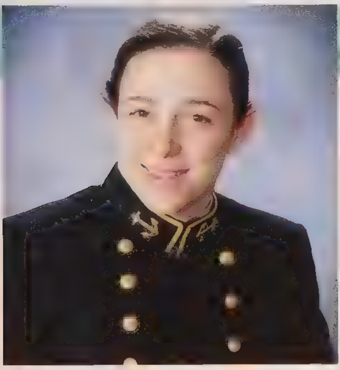
Victor Nguyen (pronounced Nuh-guh-yen) is a highly motivated Navy Pilot select. His roommate would like the reader to know that he always hits the snooze button. ALWAYS! What you may not know about Victor is how his time here has shaped him as a leader. He was a member of glee club for three years and half a semester where he refined his musical skills. He is has been an active participant in his company rising to the position of platoon commander and operations officer Firstie year. He also climbed the leadership ladder in BCM since plebe year and served as the President the year of his graduation. He has grown in confidence, maturity, wisdom, and compassion since his time here as a plebe. He will soar to new heights as a Navy Pilot and— God as his guide—will never fail to hit his mark.

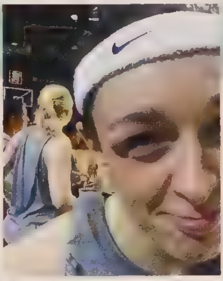
Sahil Patel



USMC Pilot

Hailing from Virginia, he is not as Southern as you might expect. Sahil, or Pate as you may know him, would rather be from another planet. As an astro major he loves all things rockets, satellites, black holes, and all things not on Earth. Also cows. He is as loyal as the come. Despite constant bantering from his roommates, Sahil stuck with lightweight crew for all four years. Even when the girls in DTA fell for his uncanny game, Sahil always knew when it was time to about face and head back to the hall for crew practice the next day. Knowing he can barely operate a car, Sahil has chosen and received the opportunity to fly airplanes for the Marine Corps. May the force be with him. If he achieves his dreams and NASA still exists, he may be a future astronaut.





Kara Pollinger

Navy Pilot

Kara Pollinger, of the 0.9 square miles of Fort Gay, West Virginia, can't go for more than a few minutes without thinking of basketball. I wouldn't be surprised if "basketball" was the first word out of her mouth between large bites of her momma's homemade chicken and dumplings. She has honored the Navy Women's Basketball team as their captain for the past two years. Her passion for basketball is rivaled closely by her desire to support her friends on the club softball team. When basketball season ends you can find Kara eating snacks and lounging in the bleachers at the softball field. Soon she'll be trading in her #baller status for something a bit "flyer" as she's on her way to Pensacola to hit the skies! Time to take on the world. -RFA

Katherine Poulin

Surface Warfare Officer

She likes to be called Katrina and it is her call sign down in DTA. Most people in the school probably wonder why she is so happy and always about to fall over from laughter.. No I promise she is not drunk, she just enjoys life to the fullest and has a beautiful outlook on life. She is the most positive and friendly person at the academy, and definitely knows how to have fun. Can't wait to hear of all the adventures you will have as a SWO on board the USS Roosevelt out of May port. I know you will enjoy it because your extract the best from everyone and everything!

Sean Price

USMC Ground

Thomas Reed

Navy Pilot

Tommy will best be remembered by always having a beautiful, nice, girlfriend on his arm. And by always I mean never. Tommy unselfishly refused every woman who ever approached him to strengthen his allegiance towards the boys. Tommy never missed an opportunity to explain how he had the coolest friends at ACME or yell ad nauseam for his football friends through the TV. Tommy's greatest athletic accomplishment is that he was able to miss every physically demanding hockey practice ever over his 4 year career, even as a Captain. It won't take Tommy long for him to tell you he is from the great state of Long Island. A fan of sports, Irish Catholicism, and his friends, Tommy can always be counted on to do the right thing. His dream is to fly off the flight deck of the USS Saratoga someday. If you think you love Tommy Reed trust me, he loves you way more!

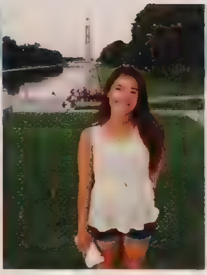
Daniel Sargenti

USMC Ground

Gavin Schelske

USMC Pilot

Somebody better call Kenny Loggins cause you're in the danger zone. Though he absolutely despises his home state of California, Gavin "Wizard Staff" Schelske always preferred Soviet Russia to the U-S-of-A. When he couldn't be found in company spaces, he was most likely chasing unicorns that he saw walking down Stribling. In DTA, his favorite way of dealing with bullies was pulling a "Good Will Hunting" and asking "What's your major, dude?!" It worked more often than not. After winning the argument, Gavin would then proceed to wander by himself for miles and then bow before the porcelain throne for the rest of the night. Fond of Robots and Ohio women, Gavin had an even greater appreciation for deep space. Hopefully the Marine Corps Aviation Community opens up space flight billets, because then and only then, will Gavin Schelske be fully satisfied.



Katherine Smisson

Naval Flight Officer

What to say about Ms. Smiss…This wonder child hails from Colorado Springs and speaks German, Korean, and Engrish. Please excuse that last word, Asian jokes are not tolerated by Katie! From staying up past lights out to study that little blue book over plebe summer, to being a demanding and dedicated leader for the plebes of 2017, K Smiss has done it all! She dominated her plebe pro-board (twice), she dominated all of her PRT's, she dominated her classes, she dominated two ring dances, and has perfected the art of finishing entire shows in less than a month (SVU, Tudors). All of Katie's hard-work was well worth it in the end. This NFO to be will be able to dominate any challenge that awaits in P-cola and I cannot wait to be there to see her do it! "Since plebe summer."

James Smith

Naval Flight Officer

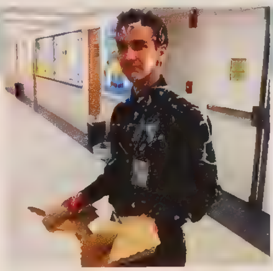
After starting the Naval Academy at the internal age of 65, Jim "Jim and Tonic" Smith, flirted with the lines of being UNSAT in almost every way possible. Despite being a genius, Jimbo Slice chose to spend his time and dedication towards spitting game with the ladies and jumping on grenades for Plebes. After some serious bouts with restriction musters, marathons, aged auto engines, and the USMC O-course, he still went above and beyond his call to financially support the Annapolis alcohol economy. Jim is most appreciated by his friends for allowing them to use his Mom's Netflix account, providing endless banter about physics theory, and also never sugar coating anything. A fun fact about Jim, when he reaches the internal age of 85, he hopes to rule the world with the doctrine laid out in his manifesto. No matter what his personal doctrine will read, we can only hope he will always believe that there is never a good excuse to not recycle. Once he hits the skies as a back seat aviator, I'm sure he'll be more than happy to fill you in on what it says. Best of luck Jim.

John Wilson

Navy Pilot

Born with two silver spoons in his mouth, this lover of Wake Forest golfers will miss his plebe year more than most want theirs to end. If they are anything like their father, the Wilson-Hartenstein children will likely aspire to square their corners on the golf course, give chow calls before a country club brunch, and put their allowance towards nothing but Moe's burritos. Most people may not know that 4/C Forever Wilson speaks Chinese better than he does English and loves to dance for money during Halloween concerts. Despite his desire to lead Sailors only at sea level and the fact that he can hardly operate an automobile, the Navy has granted Jack Wilson-Hartenstein the opportunity to be a Naval Aviator. While he will most likely choose seaplanes for his platform, we know his noteworthy work ethic and superb language skills will help him exceed expectations as always.

Nicholas Wohar



Naval Flight Officer

ZZZzzzzzz……… Nintendo. Possibly the love child of Mrs. Incredible and Stretch Armstrong, Nicholas Wohar hails from California (Pennsylvania that is) and can always be relied upon to provide you with facts on all sorts of animals, video-games, movies, books, girls, life, religion, and so on and so forth. Recovering from a full body skin graft during his earlier years has left him with abilities most cannot even begin to fathom. This ordeal also aided in his ability to be a contributing member of Navy Men's Gymnastics Managers team (NMGM) during his plebe and youngster years. Nick will always be remembered by his company for the inordinate amount of movies he had piled on his desk but will better thought of by his classmates for his jovial attitude and kind demeanor. A great friend and a better roommate, Nick will definitely be a fine addition to the world of Naval Aviation.

Benjamin Ziemski

Navy Pilot

Ben, a Maryland local, knew the way of blue crabs and Natty Boh long before his fellow classmates. At the Academy, he spent most days studying to be a weatherman and was the first person to give false predictions about snow days. He minored in "Parks and Rec", focusing on Ron Swanson where he learned "clear alcohol is for rich women on diets." When he isn't on his escapades with girls, you might find him hanging out with Duncan, stargazing in the desert, breaking lights in cabins, or singing pirate songs. Bring that beat back! However, his most favorite memory may come from a fateful night spent in our nation's capital learning about Catholicism and all it has to offer. He will probably make a pretty good pilot for the Navy but should just stick to his cobbler skills.

There are no words to describe how incredibly proud we are of how far you've come since I-Day. Watching you become the man you are today has been both an honor and a privilege. No matter where your life path may lead you, always remember we are with you, and home is never too far away! May God watch over you as you begin your career with the United States Navy as a Naval Pilot.

We are so proud of you!

In the fall of 2011, Navy Beats was born when Bobby Nefzger, Nate Brown and Sam Sipe were inspired to creat the Naval Academy's first music club run by mids for mids. With hard work, determination, dedication and the help of many friends, these three young leaders have turned Navy Beats into much more than a music website to tune in while studying. From DJing for brigade and military events to interviews with concert headliners, from selecting and training new personnel to organizing USNA's first music festival (Zero Block Party), Navy Beats has grown with Nate, Bobby and Sam and many others to become one of the most popular clubs on the yard.

The 121st volume of the Lucky Bag was published for the United States Naval Academy by Jostens Printing and Publishing, 451 International Boulevard, Clarksville, Tennessee 37040.

Steve Sweet and George Fold served as the local Jostens Representatives and Dee Skelton, the in-plant printing consultant.

The cover and and page artwork were created by Jeremy Bratton, Jostens State College Creative Resource Department.

Commander Julie Shank served as the Lucky Bag adviser and Ellen Sherman served as manager of the Midshipmen Welfare Fund.

MIDN 1/C Valerie Tucciarone served as Editor-in-Chief.

Director of Photography: MIDN 1/C Vytautas Drejeris

Portraits provided by Jim Rainey of Lifetouch.

Other contributing photographers: Phil Hoffman, Debbie Latta, Jason Roman

Curtis Khol, Jeffrey Martino, Chris Lewis, Rylan Tuohy, Katrina Herrera, Matthew Wyckoff, Anton Ekman, Supawit Wongissares, Amber Lowman

The 2014 Lucky Bag consists of 752 full color pages with a press run was 4500 copies. The Lucky Bag is a 9"x12" smyth-sewn book, rounded-and-backed, printed on 100# matte paper with selective UV gloss on opening pages and all dividers. The cover is an original design and concept. It is a fully modeled die, embossed and quarterbound with materials 535 Black (with Mission grain) and 519 Space (with a Krinkle grain). All text is embossed with copper foil. The pages edges are also gilded with copper. All pages were created using Jostens Yeartech Online on Yearbookavenue.com

We regret the omission of materials. All Firsties/groups/sports/clubs were contacted in the first and/or second semester and invited to contribute material.

The Lucky Bag is a Midshipmen run publication, and, although every effort has been made to ensure the accuracy and reliability on these pages, all transcripts are subject to human error. The opinions expressed in the Lucky Bag are those of the yearbook staff and are not intended to represent the official policies of the Brigade of Midshipmen or the United States Naval Academy. Nothing in this book may be reproduced in any way without the expressed written permission of the Lucky Bag Yearbook Staff at the USNA.
